Cameron Charge Not Verified

Arizona Senator Draws Rebuke of King For Blustering Tone

Asserted Huge Contribution to Defeat Him Fails to be Brought Out

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (AP)—Abrupt adjournment of the investigation into alleged excessive campaign expenditures in Arizona was ordered at 11 o'clock tonight by Senator W. H. King, Democrat, of Utah, for want of more witnesses. The end of the inquiry, which took up most of the twenty-four hours beginning at 10 p.m. Saturday, was not yet in sight. Senator King announced that the hearing would be resumed at 9 a.m. tomorrow.

PHOENIX, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Senator Cameron's charge that a conjoined Colorado River-copper trust syndicate has contributed $100,000 toward his defeat in Arizona has proved a dud. Not an iota of support has been found for the charge throughout an investigation that started at about 11 o'clock last night and that has continued throughout most of today.

Senator King of Utah, though ill, was rushed here from Salt Lake City to get at the bottom of the matter before election day. He arrived last night after an eighty-mile auto ride from Gila Bend, and held a session until 2:30 in the morning. It was renewed at 9:30 this morning.

The night session was notable, especially for the late arrival of Senator Cameron, with irritation in his query why the hearing had not waited upon him. The committeeman stated that Cameron had been advised of the time which had been set at 10. Another clash came when Cameron complained that certain witnesses named by him had not been summoned, all the way from New York to Los Angeles.

"Senator Cameron," admonished the investigator, "I shall not tolerate such a tone on your part. The proceedings must be conducted according to the rules of courtesy."

TARIFF SOUGHT

Something in the way of a complaint was presented by C. F. Ainsworth of Phoenix, leading counsel for Cameron, who read a paper that charged in general terms that a vast combination of capital is opposing the aspirant in his struggles to save the Colorado for Arizona and to obtain a tariff on copper. Then it was announced that the investigation would touch upon the expenditures

PARTIES CONFIDENT ON EVE OF NATION-WIDE VOTING

Local Questions Dominate Battles; New York Fight Holds Interest; Rum Issue in Some States

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. (AP)—Another nation-wide campaign began to pass into history today as party leaders packed their political fishing tackle away in the attic and solemnly sought to compute the comparative size of the respective catches that will be weighed out at the polls Tuesday.

As the pre-election guessing entered its last fanciful stage, the usual forecasts of sweeping victory came from every hostile camp. Behind the militant claims thus spread grandly across the sky, there lay, however, certain quite evident convictions. There was no doubt that many Democratic managers were convinced they had a fighting chance to capture control of at least one branch of Congress, or that the Republican leaders were just as sure that serious threat of such a result had been removed.

So far as the State campaigns were concerned, the issues had become so badly jumbled that those intrusted with national management of the parties were unable to make any general estimate of how the land might lay. Each contented himself with hopefully opining that his party would hold its own in the net returns, the country over. Outstanding in every such discussion was the situation in New York, where Gov. Smith is waging an old-time battle for re-election.

ON MAJOR ISSUE

By virtue of referendums in eight States, bearing in one way or another on the prohibition question, wet and dry leaders included themselves in the ranks of the victory-claimers. The States that are to vote, either on a State enforcement code or on some other feature of the wet and dry problem, are New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, Colorado, California, Nevada, Missouri and Montana.

But if there was a certain element of actual confidence manifested on both sides of all these contests, there also was apparent widespread inability of political canvassers to ascertain what the voters really are thinking.

Unusually large blocs of the electorate have been altogether silent, while others have given but half hints how they intend to vote or whether they will vote at all. Although in the aggregate the number who qualified this year in party registrations was disproportionately large, many reports to campaign headquarters from widely scattered sections have given impetus this year to party and nonpartisan get-out-the-vote crusades. To the drive for a big vote President Coolidge contributed tonight, appealing to his fellow citizens in a one-sentence message to exercise on Tuesday the sovereign power of choice given them by the Constitution. The President himself will go from Washington to his home town, Northampton, Mass., to cast his

First Citizen Exhorts All to Cast Vote

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. (AP) President Coolidge in a public message to the people of the country today urged all voters to go to the polls Tuesday. The President himself will journey to his old home in Northampton, Mass., to cast his ballot.

Mr. Coolidge's message said:

"Let no voters abdicate their sovereign right of self-government at the election on Tuesday by failing to vote.

FOREST FIRE RAGES NEAR SANTA ANA

Hundreds of Volunteers Fight Stubborn Blaze in Santiago Canyon

SANTA ANA, Oct. 31. (Exclusive) With 2000 acres, 400 of which lie in the Cleveland National Forest, already swept by the flames, one of the worst forest fires this region has known is raging tonight in Santiago Canyon near the former home of Mme. Modjeska.

Led by District Forester Bert Stephenson, 300 volunteers, including more than a score of deputy sheriffs, are battling the blaze. A dance pavilion and a number of summer cabins in the canyon already have been completely destroyed. It is expected, however, that unless the wind changes to the westward, it will be possible to get the fire under control late tonight.

The fire is said to have started in Harding Canyon when a Long Beach insurance man tried to burn a mass of weeds around his cabin, and permitted the flame of his bonfire to get beyond control. It is reported here that the man is under arrest, although no confirmation can be obtained at the Sheriff's office.

Fire rangers and ranchers made desperate efforts to check the sweep of the flames, but were forced to call for volunteer help when the fire spread to Santiago Canyon.

WATER GIVES UP BODY OF NAVY FLYER

Found Strapped to Seat With Hand on Control; Cause of Fall Mystery

NORFOLK (Va.) Oct. 31. (AP)—The body of Lieut. Frank H. Conant, Jr., navy speed and stunt flyer, was recovered today from the water in which his plane crashed off Mathews, Va., yesterday afternoon. It was found strapped in the seat of the wrecked plane, the parachute in place and his hand still clutching the control.

While no definite information is at hand as to how the accident happened, some officers expressed the belief that the young aviator was flying low at a speed of about 160 miles an hour when one of the pontoons of his seaplane struck a fish net stake.

The only visible injury on the aviator's body was a wound on the left chin. The body was found this morning by the crew of a launch from the aircraft tender Sandpiper, who, with the aid of several fishermen, raised the plane from fifteen feet of water.

Lieut. Conant's body was brought to the air station where it was viewed by a board of inquest and later taken to the naval hospital in Portsmouth to be prepared for burial.

MUTILATOR OF BOOKS ESCAPES DETECTION

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 31. (AP)—A mysterious visitor who slyly cuts out all references to the theory of evolution in public library books and periodicals has become so active that a meeting of the Board of Education has been called to take action. The mutilator has eluded all traps set to catch him.

DEMENTED MAN SHOOTS UP FAMILY

Kills Two Men, Wounds Three Women and Man, Then Ends Own Life

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31. (AP)—Three men were killed and three women and another man were seriously wounded here tonight when James Trcka turned an automatic pistol on his family as they sat at the dinner table, and then shot himself.

Frank Koman, 36 years of age, Trcka's son-in-law, and Edward Kukral, his nephew, died instantly. The wounded are:

Mrs. Mary Trcka, 48, Trcka's wife, shot twice through the body; Evelyn Kukral, 17, shot twice in the back.

Sylvia Koman, wife of Frank, and Trcka's daughter, shot in the back, and Frank Kukral, wounded three times in the abdomen.

Firing before anyone had an opportunity to escape, Trcka then ran into a hall and shot himself in the head, dying instantly. Police believe he was demented.

British-Owned Vessels Twins in Misfortune

LEWES (Del.) Oct. 31. (AP)—The British steamers Ethelaric and Clan MacBride went ashore this morning in New Inlet, seven miles southsouthwest of Cobbs Island Coast Guard Station, within 200 yards of each other. The Clan MacBride floated again later unassisted, after lightering, and proceeded on her way to Norfolk, Va. The Ethelaric was in no danger, as the seas were light.

The Ethelaric grounded at 4:50 a.m. and the Clan MacBride two hours later. The Ethelaric, 2013 tons, hails from Whitby, Eng. She was headed for Baltimore without cargo.

The Clan MacBride, 3009 tons, carried a general cargo from the East Indies to Norfolk.

Zuyder Zee to be Drained by Gigantic Dyke

THE HAGUE, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The world's largest drainage scheme—the Zuyder Zee drainage—which eventually will add a new, valuable province to The Netherlands, is commencing with the formation of a company for carrying out the scheme. It is capitalized at $2,400,000.

The Dutch government has concluded an agreement with the company for the construction and upkeep until completion of an enormous dyke eighteen miles in length, which will separate the North Sea from the Zuyder Zee. The dyke will be unique in history. The cost of construction is estimated at $32,000,000. The erection of the dyke must precede the work of the drainage system.

THRILLING SEA RESCUE DISCLOSED

American Freighter Saves Crew of Doomed Schooner in Bay of Fundy

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (Exclusive) Unheralded save by ship mates of the heroes, the tale of a thrilling rescue at sea was pieced together today, following the arrival of the freighter Felix of the United States Transportation Company in port at Newbrighton, Staten Island.

According to the crew of the Felix, they were one day out from Windsor, N. S., when they picked up the William Melbourne, a wooden three-masted schooner. She was foundering in high seas about three miles off Hunt Island in the Bay of Fundy. A single huge wave had swept off her masts and rigging.

The Felix lowered a boat manned by the second mate, Knud Evernberg, and five men. After battling the sea for more than two hours, they were successful in taking off Capt. Zenas Richards, master of the William Melbourne, and eight men the entire crew.

An effort was made to tow the disabled boat, which was loaded with paper pulp, back to Spencer Island, but hawsers were snapped by the sea and the schooner sank.

MEXICANS THREATEN NICARAGUA

Armed Ships Appear Off Coast and Fight Reported; Nation Called to Defense

MANAGUA (Nicaragua) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Rear-Admiral Julian L. Latimer reports that the Mexican ship Palomita arrived at Puerto Cabezas this morning flying the Mexican flag and armed with Mexican soldiers, machine guns and ammunition and now is sailing for the east coast.

On the west coast the Mexican ship Jalisco, from Champerico, Guatemala, called at Salina Cruz, obtained arms and is proceeding to Nicaragua.

Fighting near Rama, Nicaragua, was reported, with Gen. Moncada attacking the government forces. The new temporary President appointed former President Chamorro to command of the army and this evening Senor Chamorro issued a proclamation calling for all the Nicaraguans to stand by the nation against the Mexican peril.

MUSSOLINI DEATH TARGET; ASSASSIN KILLED BY MOB

Duce Calm as Bullet Rips Coat; Youthful Assailant Slashed Amid Screaming Crowd

BOLOGNA (Italy) Oct. 31. (AP)—A youth, 18 years of age, who today attempted to shoot Benito Mussolini was himself stabbed and beaten to death by an infuriated mob. Mussolini escaped injury. The assassin's bullet missed passing through the Premier' chest by the fraction of an inch. It actually ripped both sides of his coat and cut the sash of the Order of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus.

The youth had pressed [illegible] Mussolini was seated [illegible] mobile on leaving the stad[illegible] he had [illegible] the c[illegible] the a[illegible] of scien[illegible] was ready [illegible]

Carabinieri fired a second shot [illegible] and Fascists threw themselves on him as he was in the act of sending a second bullet at the Premier.

Within a minute or two of his attack on Il Duce, the body of the youthful assailant was being dragged [illegible] a crumpled and inert mass, by strong-armed Fascists through a screaming, milling sea of humanity.

Later at the police station, where the body was taken, fourteen knife wounds and marks of strangling on his throat were found.

DRAMATIC SETTING

It would be impossible to create a more dramatic setting. It was about 5:40 o'clock in the evening and the 50,000 persons who had assembled at the stadium, stood behind lines of carabineers as Mussolini passed.

The Premier's car had entered the main thoroughfare, the Via Independenzia, when a shot cracked above the roar of the cheering of the masses.

A dead silence, then all eyes were focused on the youth who stood bending forward with the revolver in his hand. The next thought was for Mussolini, and when the crowd saw the Duce calm and obviously unhurt they closed like the jaws of a gigantic animal upon his assailant. Savage hands reached for him and he was pounded and beaten and stabbed until life was extinct.

The crowds blocked the path of the Premier's automobile, almost overturning it in an attempt to approach close enough to find whether he was hurt. When a passage finally was cleared, the automobile proceeded rapidly to the station. There Mussolini showed not the slightest sign of nervousness.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED

Immediately after the attempt, Signor Turati, Secretary-General of the Fascist party, issued a proclamation to the Black Shirts saying:

"The first gesture of justice has been accomplished. Now the accomplices must be punished."

All along the way to the station Mussolini sat as complacently as if reviewing his "people," and among the way he was the object of delirious acclamations by the throngs, who screamed: "Long live the Duce," "Death to the enemies of Fascism," "Woe to him who touches the savior of Italy."

Mussolini departed for Forli and reached his home town shortly afterward. With him were his family.

King Victor Emanuel sent a message immediately to the Premier saying he had learned with indignation of the attack and sent his most affectionate congratulations in his own name and that of the entire royal family on the Premier's escape from an odious attack.

The Premier reached Bologna last night. Early today he opened the Littoriale Stadium, an immense structure to be devoted to all branches of sports, and late in the afternoon officiated at the opening of the congress.

MAGICIAN SUCCUMBS

Houdini Victim of Peritonitis

Master Necromancer Fails to Release Self From Grip of Reaper

Illusionist Mystified Royalty and People of All Nations

DETROIT, Oct. 31. (AP)—Harry Houdini, the magician, died today.

The noted escape artist, whose adeptness at freeing himself from straitjackets, chains and cells mystified audiences in all parts of the world, died after a second surgical attempt had been made to save his life from the effects of peritonitis.

Houdini was operated on last Monday for appendicitis.

Although it was known the magician was ill when he arrived here eight days ago, the seriousness of his condition was not learned until he collapsed at the end of his opening performance.

Houdini, popularly supposed to be of oriental birth, was born in Wisconsin in 1874, the son of Rev. Mayer Samuel Weiss. His theatrical name was early acquired through legal procedure.

As one of the outstanding personages of the American stage, his popularity lasted for a quarter-century. Beginning his stage career as a trapeze performer, he toured the world. It was during his journey through Asia that he became interested in mysticism and shifted his role to that of magician.

Houdini counted among his audiences the royalty of Europe and Asia. He wrote numerous treatises intended to expose spiritualism as a fraud. His book, "A Magician Among the Spirits," created a furor among professional spiritualists by its assertions that the practice was "bunk."

One of his public challenges of long standing that he could duplicate or expose any seemingly magic feat was accepted by Ramen Bey, Egyptian mystifier, in August. The Egyptian has created a sensation by remaining in a sealed coffin under water for nineteen minutes. "Short breaths and conservation of oxygen did it," said Houdini, who entered the coffin and stayed there ninety minutes.

HOUDINI ENEMY OF SPIRIT MEDIUMS

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (AP)—Harry Houdini, the world-famous magician who died in Detroit today, was born in Appleton, Wis., April 6, 1874, son of Rabbi Mayer Samuel Weiss.

Houdini came before the American public as an exposer of frauds perpetrated by so-called spirit mediums. He held that the phenomena produced by professed mediums of various kinds, hypnotics, mesmerists and fakirs all were spurious. He exposed hundreds of professional mediums and offered $10,000 to any medium who could produce phenomena which he could not reproduce by re-

FOUR DIE IN BANDIT BRAWL

Jimmy Cunniffe, Notorious Slayer of East, Two Friends and Policeman Shot to Death

DETROIT, Oct. 31. (AP)—"Jimmy" Cunniffe, notorious eastern killer-bandit, met death here today at the hands of an associate during a savage brawl which cost the lives of three other persons and resulted in the wounding of two more. Cunniffe, wanted in connection with the recent machine gun slaying of an Elizabeth (N. J.) mail truck driver and two other killings, was shot down by a man known here as William Olsen, reputed bank robber, during what police believe to have been a quarrel over division of plunder.

Police, who rushed to the rooms in a fashionable apartment house where the shooting occurred, were engaged in a pistol battle by Olsen, who killed Patrolman Ernest Jones and wounded Ephriam Rancour, another officer and Earl Burns, a resident of the apartment house, before being shot to death by Rancour.

TWO FOUND DEAD

Cunniffe and an unidentified woman companion were found dead in the apartment when the wounded policeman gained entrance. Cunniffe had been shot six times and the woman was similarly wounded.

In the dining room were found the remains of a champagne supper and scattered over the floor approximately $10,000 in currency. It is

CHICAGO UNIONISM BREEDS CRIMSON GANGLAND ORGY

Terror Bringing Death to Scores Dates Back to Days of Strife for Strike Boss Supremacy

BY J. P. GALLAGHER

CHICAGO, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—For some fifteen years, Chicago's gangland has been a gun-slinging, death dealing band comparable to the bravos of feudal days. Killers have lived a bloody, romantic life smacking of bludgeons and daggers in belt.

Life by the gun and death by the gun, power through might and death by the mightier—the story has been the same always.

Sometimes the objectives changed, and there was a constant shifting of faces, but throughout was the free-and-easy gunplay, the joyously defiant boys who let their hips bulge with automatics and didn't care who knew it.

Back in the first days of gang rule and gang rivalry it was the gambling vice, strikes and union-labor feuds. The gangs fought for control of gambling concessions of the old redlight districts and of anything else that looked profitable. There were the boys on the West Side when Morgan street was a line which no Jew dared to pass to enter underworld business in any but a small way, without fasting a gunman who with the sangfroid of a child playing ball would shoot.

The Miller brothers put an end to that — Maxie, Hirschy, Wavey and Harry. They moved into the West Side and fought until they gained prestige.

But the first real organized killing began along in 1911, when Vincent Altman, who had been fired from the police force, proceeded to show the underworld—and the world above as well—just how scientifically gunplay could be accomplished, and what a rich harvest could be reaped from the threat of a well-aimed pistol barrel.

UNION WAR SPECIALIST

Altman an expert in wood-inlay work, specialized in intra-union-labor troubles—not working, but deciding who should work at what among the labor unions and using a gun to emphasize his decisions. The carelessness with which he and his boys swung a pistol later proved decidedly distasteful to Maurice. (Moss) Enright and "Dutch" Gentleman, lieutenant to Enright. Factional fights in labor unions and other chances for rough work provided their jobs.

This was the first of the evolutions of gang control and it was a story that has been repeated many times since and always with the same result—murder. Enright wanted to be union-labor boss, and so one evening in the Briggs House bar Altman was casually shot dead.

Enright was convicted but he promptly "squealed," and explained that it was his partner, Gentleman, who handled the gun. A gubernatorial pardon freed Enright and then came the reign of the gun over intra-union-labor disputes that brought death after death with machine-like regularity.

Maurice Enright, product of a back of the yards "athletic" club, gang struggles, and internal union-labor feuds, want about the business of living by the gun in true buccaneer fashion. Like the pirates of old, he got his ghost ship—a fog gray automobile that cost a sum that in those days of few cars was prohibitive to most of his rivals.

Jurisdictional fight between labor unions and union-labor factions within a single union brought many little wars. The car was known everywhere, and whenever it pulled up to a building it was a sure sign of trouble, perhaps death. Gradually, Enright grew rich. Whenever some one refused to obey or thought of starting a little gang of his own the gray ghost sped forth and the rival changed his mind or had a funeral.

"Dutch" Gentleman, who drove the gray car, tried to pull a few jobs on his own, and Moss promptly poked a small cannon into his ribs and pulled the trigger. Self-defense was a successful plea.

Thus the underworld lived—through the murder of Pete Gentleman, brother of "Dutch," because he wasn't splitting property on some gambling graft—and other things—and on to 1920, when Moss got his. He was riddled with bullets while at the wheel of his auto in front of his home.

The famous union-labor war of 1920, resulted partly from Enright's death, all the gangs fighting it out for control.

ABANDON UNION FUSS

Out of this chaos "Big Tim" Murphy, Frenchy Mader, Dan McCarthy, Con Shea, who was staging a comeback from the days of 1904-1905, and others, established a firm right to a certain class of union-labor leadership. Some of the boys decided to branch out a bit. Some went into mail robbing, somewhat of a sport for them. There were fights over the swag and lots of "squealing." Big Tim went to the Federal penitentiary in Leavenworth.

About this time there steps into the picure one John Torrio. He came out of the gang-ridden "Five Points" district of New York's East Side carrying with him a reputation as the shrewdest and most feared figure who roamed the "badlands" of Lower Manhattan. Torrio came west at the call of "Big Jim" Colosimo, reputed to have been a relative.

So "Johnny," a bland, quiet young Italian, with a glittering, cold eye, came out of the East. It is significant that almost immediately violence and gun play broke out in several places. Three of the Sicilians were found dead—a few bullets in the dark and they ceased to be a menace to "Big Jim." The cool stranger from the Brooklyn Bridge district was questioned. He merely shrugged his shoulders and the police were forced to drop that line of inquiry.

FOES KILLED OFF

One by one "Big Jim's" other threats were eliminated. Sometimes by lead from a pistol, often by slugs from a sawed-off shotgun. Other times they merely disappeared and were never heard of again.

When prohibition came, "Johnny" was one of the pioneers who foresaw the chance to get rich quick in the illegal liquor traffic. Torrio started to supply liquor from the East to South Side vice resorts. Then came rumors of a rift between Torrio and Colosimo. It startled the underworld. Torrio had grown too big to share his dynasty with "Big Jim," it was said. One had to yield.

Early one morning Colosimo was shot and killed at the door of his Wabash avenue restaurant. A Wabash avenue restaurant.

Torrio, after Colosimo's death, could no longer be denied leadership over the Twenty-second street vice district. He found himself at the zenith of his power. There was a great demand for illegal booze and beer, so Torrio parcelled out districts to his feudal barons. As years before Jim Colosimo brought him from New York to act as bodyguard, so Torrio, now middle aged, imported a "handy man."

His importation was "Scarface Al" Capone, Brooklyn "bad man," former owner of "The Harbor," a gunman's hangout in Coney Island. He brought with him several members of his gang, and there came into existence Chicago's first powerful gang of organized criminals, which although hard pressed at times, is the principal power in Chicago's gangland today.

DRYS PREDICT CONGRESS GAIN

Victory in Tomorrow's Polls Sighted by Leaders

Issue Called One of Law Enforcement or Anarchy

Wheeler and Dr. Wilson in Final Statements

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. (AP)—Leaders of the dry forces in final campaign statements and addresses today predicted a seventieth Congress to be elected Tuesday even drier than the present one, and asserted that the real issues in the election are constitutional anarchy or law enforcement.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, said an analysis of the primary elections and of the election in Maine showed that apparently three dry votes will be gained for the Senate, and that the drys are practically certain of electing 309 members to 103 for the wets.

"The drys will probably be victorious in the twenty-one districts which are not rated doubtful," Dr. Wilson said.

"This collapse of the campaign against the prohibition amendment is truly remarkable. It was not expected by the drys any more than by the wets."

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, asserted in an address here that the two issues which would confront voters at the polls in most voting districts Tuesday were "constitutional anarchy or law enforcement."

"The straw vote referendum in New York, Illinois and Wisconsin are an attack upon our whole theory of representative government," he said. "The first two of these ask that a Federal law necessary for the enforcement of the Constitution be altered at the request of these States, permitting the States themselves to enforce or ignore a part of the Constitution.

"The Wisconsin 2.75' per cent beer proposal in her referendum is equally antagonistic to representative government.

"The bootlegger and the moonshiner are to be guaranteed from any local police action in California, Colorado, Missouri and Montana, if the referendum in these States, repealing the State enforcement codes, are won by the wets.

"The friends of law and order are supporting Congressmen who will keep their oaths to support the Constitution. They are opposing every illegal or improper method to violate the fundamental law."

DRY WHIP FOR BATH PARTIES URGED BY BORAH

HAGERSTOWN (Md.) Oct. 31. (AP) Declaring it is not too soon to organize both political parties for the campaign of 1928 Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, declared in an address here today that the individual candidates will not be as important as the principles at issue and that attempts of antiprohibitionists to "nullify" the Constitution demanded far greater attention than the wet and dry question.

Addressing an annual rally of the Washington County Sunday-school Association, the Senator said the people wrote the Eighteenth Amendment into the Constitution in the usual legal manner and to eliminate it the people must adopt the legal way and not nullification.

Asserting the New York prohibition referendum next Tuesday simply will be another gesture of nullificationists, he said both Republican and Democratic parties must be served notice that absolute fealty and devotion to the Constitution will be necessary in the next Presidential election.

Navy Secretary Certifies Worth of Judge Curtis

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Supreme Court Justice Curtis, candidate to succeed himself at tomorrow's election, is worthy of the confidence of the people of California, according to the statement here today of Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy. Secretary Wilbur has known him thirty-eight years. His statement is as follows:

"I have known Judge Curtis for thirty-eight years and have watched with greatest interest his career as a lawyer, as District Attorney, as Judge of the Superior Court, as justice of the District Court of Appeals and Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

"He is a fine man, an excellent lawyer, an able and just judge, worthy of the confidence of the people of California."

vote for Senator Butler and Governor Fuller, the only candidates in the whole country he has publicly indorsed.

LOUDER SPEAKERS

Of the forecasts issued tonight from the national party headquarters, those of the Democrats were the more sweeping. The party leaders claiming nothing less than a Democratic landslide, not simply administering to the Republican administration the ordinary off-year rebuke, but constituting an actual revolution against Republican rule.

These statements the Republicans dismissed as nothing but a Democratic hallucination, a sort of Halloween hobgoblin that would disappear completely on election day.

Democratic hopes of winning a majority on the Senate hinge on the chances party leaders think they have in group of widely scattered States, where Democratic campaign ammunition has been spent most freely during the summer. These States are Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Missouri, Nevada, New York Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah and Washington. Of these seventeen seats all held now by Republicans, the Democrats must win nine to have a clear Senatorial majority. Even the most sanguine partisans do not hope to capture all seventeen; but they do count three or four as certain to fall in the Democratic column; they figure that an event break elsewhere is all they need.

The Republican answer to this reasoning is that while a very few of these States may be normally Democratic and might in an off year return Democratic majorities, the others are Republican and, taken State by State, can be expected to go that way in 1926.

POLITICAL DYNAMITE

The House situation is not so easily diagnosed, all of the 435 members except four in Maine, who were chosen in an election in September, must get credentials at the polls Tuesday. To gain a majority over the combined opposition, the Democrats must take thirty-six seats now held by Republicans. The party managers insist it can be done, in the face of a Republican reply that any such supposition is preposterous; but neither side has indicated in a public way just what districts contain the political dynamite that is to blast the balance of power one way or the other.

In one respect, this campaign may live in political history as one of the freak campaigns of all time.

In nearly every instance, the issues on which the decision will hinge have been handled as local issues and national party management has been forced to take a back seat when it came to outlining the channels along which the fight was to be made. Thus it transpires that in regard to the two questions which at the outset looked most promising as issues—prohibition and the World Court—neither party headquarters has said a word. Where these questions have figured at all, they have been handled as local questions, with the Republican candidates wet in one State and dry in its neighbor, with the Democrats fighting the Court in one district and supporting it across the line in the next.

MIDDLE WEST GUNS REST AFTER HARD BATTLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 31. (AP)—Months of heavy siege and ballyhoo in the Middle West political arena gave way tonight to the sobering specter of the American citizen approaching the ballot box with his sovereign pencil.

A bewildering whirl of political cross-currents, epitomized by the Republican Senator from Nebraska campaigning for the Democratic nominee in Pennsylvania, and by a score of formidable independent candidates in half a dozen States, await the citizenry of the upper Mississippi Valley region in Tuesday's balloting.

Although national interest centers on the nine Republican votes in the United States Senate which are at stake in seven States, local and Congressional contests remained to end the focal point of campaign strategy in several commonwealths.

Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota and Nebraska centered their political broadsides on State contests, and in Ohio the gubernatorial campaign was a political hot point only a trifle less glowing than the sparks from the Senatorial anvil.

GOVERNOR IN HOT FIGHT

Gov. Donahey, Democrat, seeking election for a third term, emphasized charges of corporation domination of the Republican-controlled State Senate and Utilities and Tax commissions. His Republican opponent, Myers Y. Cooper, charged extravagance in public expenditures.

Charles W. Bryan, Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee in 1924, a brother of the late William Jennings Bryan, and former Governor, is opposing Gov. McMullen, Republican, for the Nebraska executive post.

Deep-rooted factional strife among Michigan Republicans, who defeated Gov. Groesbeck in the primaries after three terms, has marked the campaign in behalf of Fred W. Green, against William A. Comstock, Democrat.

In Minnesota, State and Congressional contests have centered largely upon strife between organization Republicans and former adherents of the defunct Non-Partisan League.

HAUGEN IN BATTLE

Aside from the candidacy of former Senator Brookhart, the Republican Senatorial nominee, Iowa is most keenly interested in the fate of Representative Haugen, coauthor of the McNary-Haugen bill, rejected in the last session of Congress, who has been hard-pressed in his campaign for the seat he has held for twenty-eight years. Haugen's Democratic opponent, Frank E. Howard of Rinna, contested re-election of the veteran with the most vigorous campaign Haugen has faced in his long career.

Wisconsin's gubernatorial campaign dwarfed the fight of Gov. Blaine for the Senate seat of Irving L. Lenroot, defeated in the September primary Blaine's support of Atty.-Gen Ekern for the gubernatorial nomination was a notable feature of the primary campaign, in which Fred R. Zimmerman, Secretary of State, won the party nomination. Realignment of Republican forces in Wisconsin, which began soon after the death two years ago of Senator LaFollette, likely will be influenced by the result of Tuesday's balloting.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN AREA ENDING CAMPAIGN

DENVER, Oct. 31. (AP)—With the exception of Arizona, Rocky Mountain States had a respite today from the tag end of a whirlwind campaign for both national and State political honors.

The southern border commonwealth was absorbed in an eleventh-hour investigation of slush-fund charges that California power and eastern copper interests had sent large sums into the State campaign in behalf of Representative Hayde, Democrat, who disputes the Republican re-election.

MANY ISSUES

Elsewhere candidates and voters alike speculated on the outcome of the various issues, ranging from the indorsement of a feminine Governor to prohibition, the Socialist ticket and mere personalities.

The contest between Sweet, Democrat, and Charles W. Waterman, Republican, for the Senate seat now held by Senator Means of Colorado, has been overshadowed by the bitter personal fight between former Governor Shoup, Republican, and State Senator Adams, Democrat, for the Governorship.

In New Mexico the two major parties faced the possibility of splitting their vote with a full Socialist ticket, headed by Q. M. Bixler, who opposes Arthur Hannett, Democratic incumbent, and R. C. Dillon, Republican.

FIGHT ON WOMAN

Wyoming is asked either to indorse or repudiate feminine rule in the candidacy of Gov. Ross, Democrat, for re-election. She is opposed by Frank Emerson, Republican.

The request of Gov. Hunt, Arizona's Democratic Governor, for a sixth term has been placed in the penumbra of the slush-fund investigation. His opponent is R. C. Clark, Republican, of Jerome.

Hayden excepted every Representative in Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming and Montana, asks to be returned to Washington. All have opposition.

The prohibition agitation is scheduled to receive added fuel to the flame in Colorado and Montana, where voters will decide initiated measures, repealing State prohibitory statutes.

NEW YORK FIGHTERS GO INTO SUNDAY PULPITS

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (AP)—In most Eastern States candidates for election Tuesday rested today, having defined the issues on which they go before the voters.

In New York, however, the two chief Republican candidates, United States Senator Wadsworth, running for re-election, and Ogden L. Mills, candidate for Governor, continued their pleas to the electorate, speaking in churches in New York City.

Gov. Al Smith, Democrat, in summing up his stand last night, said that the Republicans had failed to discuss State issues, and urged that he be continued in office on his record. Mills centered his attack on Smith on the asserted sale of adulterated milk in New York City.

Senator Wadsworth has made a plea for re-election on his support of Coolidge policies of economy and the Republican tariff. Robert F. Wagner, his Democratic opponent, has attacked Wadsworth as a reactionary and accused him of "straddling" on prohibition, Wagner urging his followers to vote "yes" on the State prohibition referendum.

DRY LAW IS ISSUE

The referendum proposes that Congress be memorialized to modify the Volstead law by permitting States to define what constitutes an intoxicating beverage.

Gov. Ritchie, Democratic candidate for re-election in Maryland; Addison E Mullikin, his Republican opponent, and their respective running mates have been making last-minute rounds of the State, seeking scattered votes. Representative Upshaw, Georgia dry, injected himself into the campaign in an address at Pittsville, describing Representative Tydings, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, as the "smartest wet I ever crossed horns with."

In Massachusetts the support of Colidge policies was urged by the Republicans, Senator Butler and Gov. Fuller, as ground for their re-election. Former Senator Walsh made his campaign on the Democratic State platform plank favoring modification of the Volstead Act.

BINGHAM ATTACKED

The record of Senator Bingham, seeking re-election, has been attacked by his Democratic opponents in Connecticut.

The Democrats also have attacked the Republican State administration charging it has been one of increased taxes, rising costs and lavish outlays, and in Ohio the gubernatorial campaign was a political hot point only a trifle less glowing than the sparks from the Senatorial anvil.

GOVERNOR IN HOT FIGHT

Gov. Donahey, Democrat, seeking election for a third term, emphasized charges of corporation domination of the Republican-controlled State Senate and Utilities and Tax commissions. His Republican opponent, Myers Y. Cooper, charged extravagance in public expenditures.

COOLIDGES TO VOTE IN HOME TOWN

Public Reception Will be Given President and Wife at Northhampton, Mass

NORTHAMPTON (Mass.) Oct. 31. (AP)—Plans for a public reception for President and Mrs. Coolidge when they come home here to vote next Tuesday, were made today. Arriving at about 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, President Coolidge will go at once to the polls under escort of a reception committee of twelve citizens. Then the first cititizens of the land will visit their old home on Massoll street, where Mrs. Coolidge's mother, Mrs. Limyra Goodhue, will be waiting.

At 10:30 o'clock a public reception will be held in the high school hall which will last until the Presidential party goes to the return train at 11:30.

John C. Coolidge has three recitation periods at Amherst College on election day and since he is making particularly close application to his studies this year it was thought here that he would not be in Northampton to see his parents.

Five women, old friends of Mrs. Coolidge or leaders of the Republican women of the city, will serve on the reception committee.

Duce Stays Calm Through Attempt on Life

ter of the Littorials and addressing his beloved Black Shirts, he said:

"Every time I see the armed forces of the country in battle formation, in perfect union, in a fraternity of spirit, in a common ideal, my first thought turns toward our King, supreme commander of all the forces on land and sea and in the air, and of the men of the militia.

"I desired that the celebration this year of the march on Rome should be crowned at Bologna (The people and army have given their full and enthusiastic support to the Fascist government. That means all of the people are prepared to follow me everywhere.

"Black Shirts," Il Duce virtually shouted, his voice rising to a high pitch. "Put on your stirrups, raise high your rifles, so that the entire world can see that forest of bayonets and feel the pulsations of your determined and invincible hearts."

ESCAPES SIX TIMES

Benito Mussolini, Italy's Fascist Premier, has escaped the hand of the assassin at least six times since he marched into Rome four years ago and assumed control of the affairs of the Italian people at the head of the government.

Only so short a time ago as September 11, last, a young Italian stone-cutter threw a bomb at the seized by a threatening crowd, but missile struck a window of the limousine, but did not explode until it had fallen to the ground. Mussolini escaped unharmed.

His assailant at that time was seized by a threatening crowd, but was protected from mob vengeance by the police. Four passers-by were wounded by the bomb.

On April 7, just previous to Mussolini's departure for Tripoli, Miss Violet Gibson, an English woman, fired a shot which caused a slight injury to the tip of his nose. The attempt was made when the Premier was leaving a session of the congress of surgeons in Rome. Miss Gibson has since been declared insane by medical experts testifying at her trial.

An attempt in November, 1925, was frustrated when the police discovered a plot to assassinate him by the former Socialist Deputy Zanboni, on Italy's Armistice Day, as the Premier was on his way to make a speech from his residence. Zanigoni was found concealed in a near-by hotel with a high-powered rifle fitted with telescopic sights and set up in direct line with the balcony where Mussolini was to stand.

OTHER ATTEMPTS

Of the two other attempts on the life of Mussolini, no details were made public. One of these attacks was said to have been carried out, but without effect, by a royal guard at Chigi Palace in 1923, and the other in 1924, when he was reported to have been shot at while traveling by motor car from an outlying city to Rome.

The Italian people have come to look upon Mussolini as specially protected by Divine Providence. He himself announced as the slogan of his life, "Live in danger," and has repeatedly declared that he would carry out all his plans for the betterment of his country no matter what happened or what dangers confronted him.

Recently a law was passed in Italy making it a capital crime to attempt the Premier, to be punished by the extreme penalty.

At the celebration of the fourth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome last Thursday Mussolini reviewed the progress made under Fascism. He prefaced his speech with the words, "it is idiotic to decry the regime of Fascism as having produced an oligarchy with a cruel and mysterious tyrant at its head. It is equally absurd to accuse Fascism of being an unpopular regime and an enemy of the working classes."

CAMERON FUND CHARGE FAILS

of both Hayden and Cameron and would not go to other offices.

Despite the lists of witnesses presented, the hearing at times dragged for the line of battle tapped was too far flung for a single day's engagement. The Democratic side was in waiting at all times and presented the most intimate details of its business administration. About the only material feature developed was that the State committee had issued checks for about $2000 more than it had in the bank, hoping for later contributions.

Representative Hayden brought a laugh when he said that earnest efforts had been made to get more money from him. The committee presented its chairman, L. B. Whitney, its secretary, Don Babbitt, and its auditor, who spent several hours in making plain to the inquisitor just how the $13,000 gathered had been spent. Neary all has gone for newspaper advertising for the benefit of the whole Democratic ticket. Though much evidence concerning the inner workings of the Democratic machine was obtained by the Cameron attorneys, it was of little value as slush.

PRESENTED CLEARLY

The Republican State Committee finances were presented clearly by Secretary Pickerell, who had collected and disbursed about $10,00, of which about $4000 had come from Dwight B. Heard and wife. Nothing could be dragged out concerning any power trust or Colorado River money, while the only features that might touch on the mining industry lay in checks from Dr. L. D. Ricketts of the Inspiration Copper Company, T. L. O'Brien of the same corporation and W. G. McBride of the Old Dominion Copper Company, for an aggregate of $1750. Former Postmaster-General Frank H. Hitchcock has sent $500 and former Gov. Lowden of Illinois, $250.

No national money had come to the State committee, though $5000 had been received from the Congressional committee by Senator Cameron, who, in turn, had given nothing to, and received nothing from, the State committee, save in the committee's advertising. Cameron had been running a lone-wolf campaign, keeping in nowise with the committee.

Hayden's testimony was the high light of the morning session. He was calm under cross-examination and left without a discernible scar. He didn't even know some of the people who were accused of raising a corruption fund in his behalf, others, especially the Los Angeles people attacked, he had met in committee hearings in Washington. He had not collaborated with Will Irwin, his former Stanford College friend, in preparation of the memorable "Cameron and the Colorado" series that had appeared in the Los Angeles Times and other newspapers, though he had been interviewed by one of the staff of the North American Newspaper Alliance, who said he was helping in the preparation of an article on the ease with which suckers were secured in the East for fake western mining projects. Cameron's Grand Canyon platinum deposits do not appear to have been mentioned.

NO PAID WORKERS

Mr. Hayden had employed no paid workers, had paid nothing for the favor of a Washington publication that represents the rail brotherhoods and assuredly had had no connection with the Los Angeles Times, although that journal agreed with him in opposition to the Swing-Johnson bill.

Senator King took occasion to express agreement with Hayden on the river problem to the extent that he will ask that Arizona's rights be protected on the river and that nothing more be done till full ratification of the river compact has been made.

Attorney Croaff of the Cameron staff persisted in trying to hook Hayden up with The Times and with its publisher, Harry Chandler, but any such union was denied vigorously. Hayden declaring, "California wants the Boulder Canyon dam, of which I have been the principal opponent in the House."

John R. Towles, Collector of Internal Revenue, the first of Cameron's main witnesses, had several very bad hours at the hands of Utah's Senator, who called him evasive and too loquacious. Mr. Towles showed evidence of agitation as he stumbled under a flood of committeeman questions. It was brought out that at least one clerk had been detailed from the revenue office to work in Cameron's behalf and that the clerks had helped generally in getting out Cameron literature and preparation of mimeographed press propaganda in the Senator's behalf. He acknowledged personal payments of about $1300 in the Senator's behalf. Something of a summing up was an observation by Senator King:

"You have made your office headquarters of Cameron literature."

EMPLOYEES USED

More than intimation was given that clerks on public pay had been diverted to Cameron's service.

The investigation dug into expenditures that have been made outside of the report of about $6000 to the State and Federal authorities. Senator King found a rich lead in suggestions that postmasters had been bled for the Cameron fund. There already had been admission by Postmaster James A. Jones of Phoenix that he had "come through" with $500 while there was denial of a charge that the postmistress at Mesa had been threatened with dismissal if she failed to contribute. The postmaster at Globe had paid for a number of large billboard signs. Mr. Towles was instructed to bring in his letter file on this subject and to submit something definite on a charge that one of his employees had been sent campaigning for Cameron.

The [illegible] of the slush-fund report may be found in Albuquerque according to the testimony of D. T. Pixley, there had been a joking remark to the effect that money might be used in Arizona against Cameron. Mr. Parks, a southwest superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America detailed to Phoenix for this campaign in opposition to Cameron, who is declared to have been consistent in his espousal of the cause of Volstead law repeal.

SENSATION SPRUNG

The evening session started with a sensation, the frank admission of James S. Douglas of Douglas that he had spent more than $35,000, possibly $50,000, to help the nomination of his friend, E. E. Ellinwood, for Governor.

"It was too much, I am ashamed to say," said Douglas, "but I was trying to beat the Hunt machine."

In addition the witness admitted that he had spent $15,000 in the interest of his son, successful candidate for Democratic nomination for Congress. Mrs. Douglas gave $1500 to help her son. The Cameron legal staff tried to fasten Katanga copper shares on the witness but he declared the only mine interests he has are in the United Verde Extension Mining Company, of which he is president. There was failure to fasten any Douglas money on Hayden.

Then came an outburst: "I hate Ralph Cameron as a crook. His copper tariff bunk had nothing to do with it." Cameron rose in resentment over the word "crook," but both were admonished. Douglas declared there is no connection between the Phoenix National Bank, of which he is president, and the First National Bank of Los Angeles.

Marie Pauses for Talk Over Radio to Dakotans

Chat With Farmers Planned; Indian Dance Planned

QUEEN MARIE'S TRAIN AT ST. PAUL (Minn.) Oct. 31. (AP)—The Twin Cities joined hands today to welcome Queen Marie of Rumania and her children, Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana, with a reception as rousing as any since the party's arrival.

The royal visitors' own plans for spending the afternoon and evening enabled both cities to entertain royalty simultaneously.

While Queen Marie was being received by the Twin Cities' committee and the Minnesota Governor in St. Paul, Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana were making an informal round of visits in Minneapolis.

Rainy weather failed to prevent Ileana from playing tennis, while her brother made an inspection of flour mills.

SPEAKS OVER RADIO

After the formal reception at the station, Marie stopped long enough to speak over the radio from Station WCCO to invite North Dakota farmers and their wives to meet her as her train passes through that State tomorrow. She said she wants to know the problems of Dakota farmers and their means of meeting them so that her own countrymen might be profited by their experiences.

She invited two farmers and their wives to ride with her between stops in Dakota tomorrow and to tell her of the State's agriculture. Gov. Sorlie of North Dakota will join the party at Bismarck.

A soldier band and a battalion of troops escorted Marie to the State capitol, where Gov. Christianson and other officials greeted her.

A brief and specially arranged service at a tiny Rumanian church which could hold hardly 100 persons next claimed Marie, after which the city of Minneapolis took over the reception program featured by a tour of the city.

Returning to St. Paul tonight the visitors were the dinner guests of Louis W. Hill, chairman of the Great Northern Railway.

INDIANS TO DANCE

A dance in tribal costumes by North Dakota Indian will feature the Queen's reception at Mandan, while at Medora, in the heart of the Dakota bad lands, the royal visitors will mount horses to witness a rodeo.

More than 1800 Rumanians in North Dakota have been invited to greet the Queen at Dickinson, where Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana will appear in their Rumanian costumes.

Marie is considering extending her tour to include Florida and points between that State and Washington, D. C. The Florida trip will be made after a few days' rest at Washington, which will be reached about November 25.

The proposed trip into the South will depend entirely upon Marie's health when the transcontinental tour is completed. The Queen plans to sail for Europe on December 24, but may find time to visit Boston before leaving the country.

RUMANIA DENIES KING NOW IN ILL HEALTH

BUCHAREST (Rumania) Oct. 31. (AP)—Queen Marie is expected to carry out her original program in the United States, and not return to Rumania until about December 24. The Rumanian Foreign Office authorized this statement today, and at the same time denied reports of King Ferdinand's ill health.

Nevertheless the King has been under observation of the royal physicians and has been following their advice. Because of the extremely strenuous program connected with the reception of the Italian mission, headed by the Duke of Spoleto, Ferdinand, it is explained, has been resting for the last three days.

The King will receive the new Albanian Minister Monday and the new German Minister on Tuesday. On Wednesday the Italian mission will arrive to invite the King and Queen of Rumania to visit Rome in the early spring. The economic experts of the mission are expected to take up the question of a commercial treaty, with the Italian experts, and numerous other governmental questions will be considered.

Foreign Office officials today reiterated that all rumors emanating from Vienna and Budapest respecting Queen Marie, King Ferdinand and their children were pure fantasies. The Bucharest newspapers publish details of the Queen's voyage, lauding the American public for the sincerity of its reception, and asserting that Marie has gained the sympathy of the most powerful public opinion throughout the world for her country.

TUT'S BODY RETURNED TO COFFIN

Howard Carter Replaces Mummy in Sarcophagus Pending Decision on Fate

CAIRO, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Since Howard Carter's return from Europe he has been busy in the Valley of Kings, preparing for the season's work on Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb. As a preliminary he has wrapped Tut's mummy in its original shroud and placed it in the first and outmost coffin from which it was removed and then reverently lowered it into its sarcophagus. There it will remain until its ultimate fate has been settled, though most likely it will never be removed from its present resting place.

Tut's restoration to his coffin was carried out in the presence of a number of government officials, but without any ceremony and in the most quiet manner. The Valley of Kings is still too hot for visitors to pry on the second burial of the famous pharaoh.

Carter's preliminary investigation, carried out since his return of an hitherto unopened storeroom of Tut's tomb, which was expected to yield wonderful treasures, has shown that although the chamber is full of the most interesting material in the nature of furniture and religious objects, it will not produce valuables such as those discovered in the burial chamber last season.

MY JOURNEY TO AMERICA

VI—THE WHITE HOUSE DINNER AND BALTIMORE

Our long, but pleasant day in Washington ended with the official Presidential dinner at the White House. We all put on our most official clothes. As both my daughter and I wanted to honor the President and his wife, as we would have honored a king, we drove up in separate motors and were received with the correct protocol, special to the White House.

QUEEN MARIE.

Important personages, members of the Cabinet, their wives, some generals and others had been invited to meet me. Among them was Alice Roosevelt Longworth, whom I had always been anxious to meet. I remembered with what honors she and her father had been received everywhere in Europe. I myself had never been lucky enough to make her acquaintance, but I had always heard about her charm, spirit and intelligence, and I was in nowise disappointed.

She wore a lovely dress of old red Chinese brocade and I much admired her delightful, soft, fair hair. I made a short circle among the guests before the President and his wife appeared and then we soon went in to dinner.

We greatly admired the beautiful dark-brown woodwork of the State dining-room and the lovely pink roses in the golden vases which were beautifully in harmony with that sober background. The President and his wife sat on raised high-backed chairs facing each other. I was at the President's right and my son Nicolas had taken Mrs. Coolidge in to dinner.

I heard him joking and laughing with her as though they had been old time friends. The President himself is more sparing of words, but my daughter and I between us, did our best to see that he should not consider a royal visit a trying ordeal. I think he enjoyed Ileana's innocent talk, for he looked pleased and even amused.

TALKS WITH ALICE

The ladies got up before the gentlemen and Mrs. Coolidge and I had some pleasant talk with them before the gentlemen joined us. It was during that moment that I was able to have some really interesting talk with Mrs. Longworth, who had met most of my family. I liked the interest she took in all things and I felt that had we had more time together we might have become firm friends—we had in many ways the same outlook upon life.

Official dinners are inevitably a bit stiff, but I must say that Mrs. Coolidge has a delightful way of putting people at their ease and I seconded her with all my knowledge of the world.

Unfortunately, I could have little of what I should call serious conversation with any of the interesting men invited to receive me, who represented some of the best brains in the country. To be among such able statesmen and not to be able to ask them any questions is always disappointing, but I know quite well that one can hardly expect to get much information when everyone is standing stiffly in a drawing room.

The flowers everywhere were quite beautiful. I must mention the flowers because they mean so much to me and my eye always takes in all floral arrangements at a single glance. I love those roses called American beauties which are given to me wherever I go; great fragrant bunches of them, which I carry back and arrange in as many vases as I can lay hold of. It makes me think of home, for in spite of being so happy and interested, in this hospitable and delightful country, there are moments when one longs for home.

GOES HOME EARLY

Soon after, the gentlemen joined us, President and Mrs. Coolidge took leave of us and with much ceremony we were ushered to our motors and driven home at a pleasantly early hour. That does not mean that I went immediately to bed for there was an endless correspondence to get through with and letters to write. Besides, I keep my diary and you can well imagine that at present I have overmuch to confide to that precious book.

There was a glorious moon, promising a beautiful day for the morrow and finally I turned out my light and gave myself to a well-earned rest. The beautiful moon did not keep its promise. We awoke to a rain, a nasty, dribbling, persistent rain—a gray sky and no light at all.

An early start had been prepared for us as we were expected in Annapolis for an inspection of the naval cadets. They were indeed a fine set of boys, whom any country could be proud of. I have always had special ties with the Navy, as my father was a sailor and my son, who was with me, had served three years in the English Navy. I saw by his eager face that he felt at home directly in this nautical atmosphere.

In spite of the rain the cadets marched past us in magnificent order. It was a pleasure to see them, so strong, so straight, so tall, representing the future generation at its best.

One sad little incident there was. Mr. Butler Wright, who was with me, had lost his only son, who was also a naval cadet. From where we stood together we could see the churchyard where the hope of a family lay buried beneath a tree. When I took the father's hand in mine to let him know that I understood what he must be feeling, great tears rolled down over his cheeks. It was the first time he had come to Annapolis since his son's death.

Admiral Louis M. Nultin took us to his house for a rest. It was a delightful home with a tremendously English atmosphere about it. Both he and his wife made us wonderfully comfortable for the short half hour that we remained beneath his roof. They gave us delicious warm soup to drink, then presented all the officials of the place besides the officers who had to do with the cadet school and their wives.

We had not time, alas, to visit all the big buildings. We only drove around the place to get an idea of its beauty. But I promised that when I came back to Washington I would send my son to Annapolis for a whole day to make the acquaintance of, and become friends with, America's naval youth.

BALTIMORE RECEPTION

Then off we sped again, over the smooth roads through beautifully colored weeds, past quaint little wooden houses so different from any houses I had seen anywhere else, except perhaps in certain little English towns near the sea. Mr. Williams was getting more and more excited because the greatest reception of the day was to be at Baltimore and still the sky would not behave.

Baltimore was full of eager, kindly people, who defying the inclement skies, had flocked out into the streets to give me a tremendous reception.

I cannot say hoy touched I was. I cannot say how touched I was, ing. Was it possible to greet a stranger quite as warmly as that? Mayor Howard W. Jackson met me at the Hotel Belvedere where a big lunch was given us. The Mayor had had an accident some days before and had a badly sprained foot. In spite of this, there he was, smiling and charming, though he limped along with the aid of a stick.

Even the walls of the hotel seemed to smile at me and the maids who helped me to take off my coat and to tidy up before the meal, were so sweet and so evidently happy to serve me that I had to make an effort to realize that I had met them that day for the first time in my life.

Before going in to lunch, the authorities of the city were presented to me. Afterward we formed ourselves into a solemn procession and passed to the enormous dining room where a superb lunch was served us at several tables. Here, too, there were flowers in profusion and conversation flowed easily. The food was excellent and the music delightful.

As a special treat for me, before we left our seats, Miss Mabel Harrison, one of Baltimore's prides, sang to us most beautifully. A more crystal clear soprano I have seldom heard and her choice of songs was exactly right.

Time, always my enemy, made it necessary to break up that pleasant meeting much more hurriedly than we would have wished, for the principal part of Baltimore's reception was still to come. In the middle of the town the grand war memorial had been erected, a noble hall in stone with fine broad steps leading up to its columned facades so that the whole population should be able to see me. The whole square was a seething mass of excited, delightful people. Luckily, the rain had stopped for a moment so that the sweet little girls, all in white, who had been selected to throw flowers before our feet were not drenched. They were sweet little things, you could imagin, and the flowers they scattered before us had been touchingly chosen, blue, yellow and red, the Rumanian national colors. As I mounted the steps of the memorial I was very much struck by the inscription over the portal, which ran as follows:

ENTERS MEMORIAL

"To those citizens of Maryland who gave their lives and their services in the World War, by the State of Maryland and the city of Baltimore."

With that motto imprinted upon my brain I stepped over the threshold into the beautiful hall where the most colossal ovation was given me by hundreds of people who had flocked together to make me feel that I was not a stranger in their midst. Among them there were many Rumanians who had found a home in this city of science and learning. They had come in full number, many of them in national dress.

From a raised dais I faced this friendly crowd all eagerly turning toward me. Every one of them expected to hear me say something. I always look forward to such a moment, with dread and anticipation, for indeed I would like to express ever anew my intense appreciation of the way America is receiving me and yet, unaccustomed to speaking in public, I am always afraid that my words would be too small to express all that I feel.

My great luck is that I can talk last, that is to say, answer the speeches addressed to me and all this kindness makes the happy words spring spontaneously to my tongue and I know that even if my form of speaking is in nowise classical, my audience must hear the ring of truth in what I say.

After a well-chosen speech by Mr. Williams, he introduced Dr. Welch, one of Baltimore's ablest citizens, well known the world over for his culture, knowledge and philanthropy, a man who has traveled much and who has a warm interest in Rumania. I myself had met him once in France and had been struck then by his admirable intelligence and by the open-minded way in which he understood foreign people and foreign questions.

I listened with eager attention to his every word. At lunch he had sat beside me and our conversation was varied and delightful. We touched on a thousand subjects and also upon medicine, his specialty.

HER TURN COMES

My Rumanians presented me with a basket of chrysanthemums decorated with our bright and beloved colors. They, too, expressed themselves delightfully and I felt their joy in having their queen among them if even for only so short an hour.

When finally my time for speaking came, I felt quite calm. The eager, friendly faces, instead of making me nervous made me feel that my heart was beating in unison with theirs and that whatever I said would be understood because it was simply my gratitude that overflowed from my lips.

When I brace myself to speak, a link of sympathy seems to establish itself between me and my audience and at that moment I am but one woman among so many who has a message to give. As usual I had to be hurried off at the moment when I knew that each man and woman in that great hall had felt very near to me for that hour at least.

We were expected in New York that evening for a big soiree given to me by my friends of Rumania with Mr. Nelson Cromwell at their head. There was no possibility of prolonging my stay in Baltimore, however much I might have wished to. We had to stick to our schedule time. Time doesn't wait, they have to be listened to. So it was with a heavy heart that I tore myself away from Baltimore, knowing that my visit had been all too short.

ANDREWS ASKS 'TREATING' BAN

Manufacturers Urged to Bar Salesmen Wet Parties

Prohibition Director Mails Thousands of Letters

Practice of Plying Buyers With Booze Protested

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (AP)—As a new step in prohibition enforcement, the Citizens' Committee of One Thousand, has sent to 14,000 of the leading manufacturing executives of the country a communication urging them to prevent their salesmen from using liquor in promotion of sales.

This means of cutting off what the committee considers one of the important markets for bootleg liquor, was suggested by Gen. Andrews, assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in charge of prohibition enforcement, the committee announced. In a letter to the committee, which was organized to promote law observance, Gen. Andrews said:

"I know from personal experience, that the big sales agencies for large manufacturers often make it a practice to supply generous quantities of liquor by way of entertainment upon all manner of occasions, where their customers are meeting together for one purpose or another.

"Big manufacturing business, through allowing, or rather fostering these expense accounts for large quantities of entertainment liquor, is making a considerable part of the market for liquor, which, in turn, brings into existence and supports the organized liquor traffic which furnishes the liquor. How inconsistent on the part of these big businesses who claim they want the law enforced."

Gen. Andrews said in his letter that he was confident business men throughout the country, if the matter were properly presented to them, would "readily enough agree to cut out this practice" by refusing to authorize "expense money" used for the purchase of liquor. He closed by requesting the Committee of One Thousand to take up the matter with the manufacturers.

A photostatic copy of his letter was included in each communication to the 14,000 manufacturers. Fred B. Smith, chairman of the law-observance committee, explained that the committee is not selecting any particular concern or groups of concerns in sending out the communication, and that he is certain many manufacturing executives are unaware that such practices are being used by their sales departments.

Among the members of the executive committee of the body for law observance are John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Bishop Manning, Homer S. Cummings, former chairman of the National Democratic Committee, and Senator Glass of Virginia.

CATHOLICS DENY HALT IN BOYCOTT

Signs Announcing End of Mexico Trade Warfare Declared Unauthorized

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 31. (Exclusive) No steps have been taken to modify or withdraw the economic boycott order which has existed since services were suspended in the Catholic churches on August 1, last, says an official statement issued by the executive council of the Mexican Episcopacy.

The denial is made in connection with printed manifestoes distributed since yesterday and placarded on walls and street corners bearing the supposed signature of the archbishop of Mexico, Dr. Jose Maria Mora y del Rio, in which the failure of the boycott is announced and Catholics are called upon to resume their normal manner of living from tomorrow on.

The Episcopacy's statement says: "The Episcopacy regrets that our enemies have made use of such a reproachable weapon in their campaign against the boycott. The council believes the effects of the boycott must be felt if the enemies of the church revert to such underhanded means to combat it. The council believes the fake manifesto indicates the church's control over the faithful because if this were not the case the church's enemies would not attempt to deceive the public."

Darrow Winner of Debate With Baptist Pastor

ROCHESTER (N. Y.) Oct. 31. (AP)—By a vote of 8 to 3, a jury in the Baptist Temple here awarded to Clarence S. Darrow, noted criminal lawyer, the decision over Rev. Dr. Clinton Wunder of Rochester, in a debate on the question "Has Life a Purpose?" Mr. Darrow upheld the negative.

Dr. Wunder, who is pastor of the Baptist Temple, held that self-preservation is a fundamental purpose of life, that the history of man's attempt constantly to improve the race and to penetrate the unknown is further evidence of a purpose and that the records of the lives of great men, "even LaFollette, Debs and Darrow, show that they have lived for a purpose."

Mr. Darrow contended that if there is a purpose in life, there must be a "purposer," popularly known as "God." But said the existence of such a being is not evident. He declared that "life is the craziest crazy-quilt that any one can conceive," that it "has no symmetry, order or anything else," and that the chief aim of man generally is to make life easier to live through.

In rebuttal Dr. Wunder quoted Christ's statement: "I came that you might have life and have it abundantly" as indicating a purpose in life. Mr. Darrow urged the chief reason for man's presence in the world is that he "was simply put here" and continues, "just grabbing to live."

MILLION DOLLAR INCOMES SHOWN

Seventy-five in Top Class for Year 1924

Thirty-two Per Cent Earn From $1000 to $2000

Tax Brunt Borne by Those With $50,000 to $100,000

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31. (AP)—There were seventy-five persons in the United States with net incomes of more than $1,000,000 in 1924, it was shown in income-tax statistics for that year made public today by the treasury.

Taxpayers, however, with net incomes between $1000 and $2000 constituted the largest portion of the 7,569,769 individuals who filed returns for that year, numbering 2,413,861, or 32.75 per cent of the total.

The brunt of the $704,285,390 individual income tax paid that year was borne by the class of taxpayers with incomes between $50,000 and $100,000, who paid $136,636,004 in taxes or 19.40 per cent of the total.

The seventy-five millionaires reported total net incomes of $155,976,475 and paid $47,307,203 taxes, or 8.70 per cent of the total return. Of these three reported net incomes of more than $5,000,000; three between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000; four between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, and fifteen between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

PER CENT FILING

Those filing returns in 1924 comprise 6.36 per cent of the population and reported net incomes of $25,856,138,424. The number of individual taxpayers was cut by more than 2,000,000 that year as a result of the increase in exceptions allowed by Congress in the new revenue law.

For the first time statistics were obtained on the amount of money invested in tax-exempt securities, the report showing that it totaled $6,720,298,974, while $1,636,351,401 was invested in partially tax-exempt securities, the interest from the former amounting to $165,809,730 and the latter $673,012,000. The greater portion of tax-exempt securities consisted of State and local bonds in which $12,582,645,502 was invested.

Of the taxable income reported in 1924, more was derived from personal industry, including $13,617,000,000 received from salaries and wages, and $8,078,000,000 from business, trade and commerce.

It was shown that $60,697,000 was saved taxpayers during that year as a result of the 25 per cent credit allowed for the first time on "earned income."

CALIFORNIA THIRD

The District of Columbia and Nevada had the largest percentage of population filing returns, with 19.96 and 18.78 per cent, respectively.

California was third with 13.06 per cent. Mississippi had the lowest percentage, only 1.83 per cent.

New York individual taxpayers paid the largest proportion of the income levy with a total of $236,774,587, or 33.62 per cent, and Pennsylvania was second with a percentage of 11.06. Nevada and New Mexico paid the lowest proportions of the total income tax with a percentage of .3 each.

The per capital net income reported for the year was $238.33 and the per capita income tax was $6.97.

PRISONER FAKES TAKING POISON

Incarcerated Man Wants to Go to Sea Hospital to See Wife, But Ruse Fails

MORGANTOWN (W. Va.) Oct. 31. (AP)—Desire to see his wife caused W. M. Davis, in jail here, to "fake" the taking of poison in the hope that he would be removed to the hospital where she lay ill. A physician's examination revealed that he had not swallowed any of the poison.

Davis was jailed after an "argument" several weeks ago with his wife during which she suffered a broken arm.

American Girl Soon Will Wed Romanoff Duke

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (AP)—Miss Audrey Emery, a New York society girl, soon will be married to Grand Duke Dimitri Constantinovitch, cousin of the late Czar of Russia, it was announced in a cablegram from Europe made public today.

Miss Emery is at Biarritz, France, with her mother, Mrs. Alfred Anson, who announced the forthcoming marriage in a cablegram to her son-in-law, Benjamin Moore of Syosset, L. I.

Grand Duke Dimitri once was master of the imperial house for the late Czar Nicholas, but resigned in 1903. In 1909 it was reported he had resolved to become a monk. Four years later a report from Europe said he had been announced by imperial ukase as second in succession to the Russian throne. He was wounded while fighting with the Russian army early in the war.

NORRIS WILL GO ON TRIAL TODAY

Texas Pastor Unperturbed by Murder Charge

Preaches Sunday Sermon on Turning Away Wrath

Fight on Church Property Tax Started Feud

FORT WORTH (Tex.) Oct. 31. (AP)—Rev. J. Frank Norris, leading protagonist of southern fundamentalism, reaffirmed from the pulpit today his literal interpretation of the Bible word "a soft answer turneth away wrath."

Tomorrow he is to go to trial in Criminal District Court on a charge of murder.

SERMON BROADCAST

The preacher who shot and killed D. E. Chipps after the latter's asserted threats in the church edifice last July delivered an out-and-out fundamentalist sermon today.

Between the pastor and the audience containing farmers without neckties were two radio microphones whose proximity he deserted only to hop to a lower platform and shake the hands of dozens of converts and new members at the conclusion of his sermon.

Apparently unperturbed by the nearness of his trial, Mr. Norris described the heaven the holy writ promises. He defended the miracle of the resurrection against the "telescopes and microscopes of science." In his father's house, he said, are many mansions. While he was referring to these with fervent voice and back-thrown head, a woman in the balcony began to shout.

MANY GIRLS AND BOYS

Girls and boys under 20 years of age made up a large part of the church audience. Many of them came to "preaching" from a large red brick Sunday-school building across the street. There they are advised in the way of the apostles each Sunday on the floors above a variety store and a gasoline filling station on whose leased quarters the church has refused to pay city taxes.

Attempts of the city to collect the taxes were followed by Norris's attacks on municipal officials, including Mayor Meacham. The killing of Chipps is said to have grown out of his threatening resentment of these verbal attacks.

BANDITS VISIT GROCER

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (AP)—C. H. Perkins, owner of a grocery store, and two customers, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Robinson, were bound and gagged by two robbers who took $50 from the cash register and $3 from Robinson today.

RENTING OF HOUSES IN CHINA PROVES INTRICATE AFFAIR

PEKING, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—There is no great capital in the world, or, for that matter, no city in the world, where house-hunting is more difficult than in Peking.

In the first place, the age-old city changes little. There are few "modernized" Chinese houses—that is, few with electric lights, piped water and sanitary plumbing.

When you find one, it will almost invariably be found to be owned by a Chinese landlord. He wants you to make all improvements out of your own purse and will make no reductions. Then, it takes about four months before your lease is ratified by the Chinese officials, and by the officials of your own consulate. Meanwhile you must pay four months rent in advance—of which one whole month is a total loss, being split as "cumshaw" or tips between everyone concerned, from the owner and real estate agent to the richas boy who hauled you up to the front door for the first inspection of the place.

Rentals are the source of eight-tenths of the litigation in Peking. One famous suit has been running for more than half a century. The lessor holds a 150-year lease on a valuable building for which he pays 20 coppers per room per month. (It takes about 4 coppers to equal one American cent.) The lease is now sixty years old. Many offers of $3 gold (or $6 Peking money) per month per room have been made to the owner of the building, but the man who holds the lease will neither move nor sell.

REGULATION OF INDIANS' RIGHTS VOID

Land and Water Privileges of Tribe Not Affected by Nevada Laws

CARSON CITY (Nev.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Gov. Scrugham of Nevada has been advised by Commissioner J. C. Burke of the Indian Service that State laws regulating water rights of Indians will not be recognized at Washington. The commissioner declares rights of the Indians have been established by treaties with the tribes, and that such rights cannot be subordinated by any State legislation.

The action of the Indian Service followed a decision by the Tenth Judicial District Court of Nevada, which asserted Indian land and water rights were subject to State regulations. The decision is expected by attorneys to have an important bearing on water priorities in many western States.

METERS TO BE INSTALLED

PHOENIX, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Backed by the Phoenix Real Estate Board, plans are being made by the City Commission for installation of 7500 meters in the municipal water system. This is to be done for conservation of the water supply, declared now criminally wasted by flat-rate consumers.

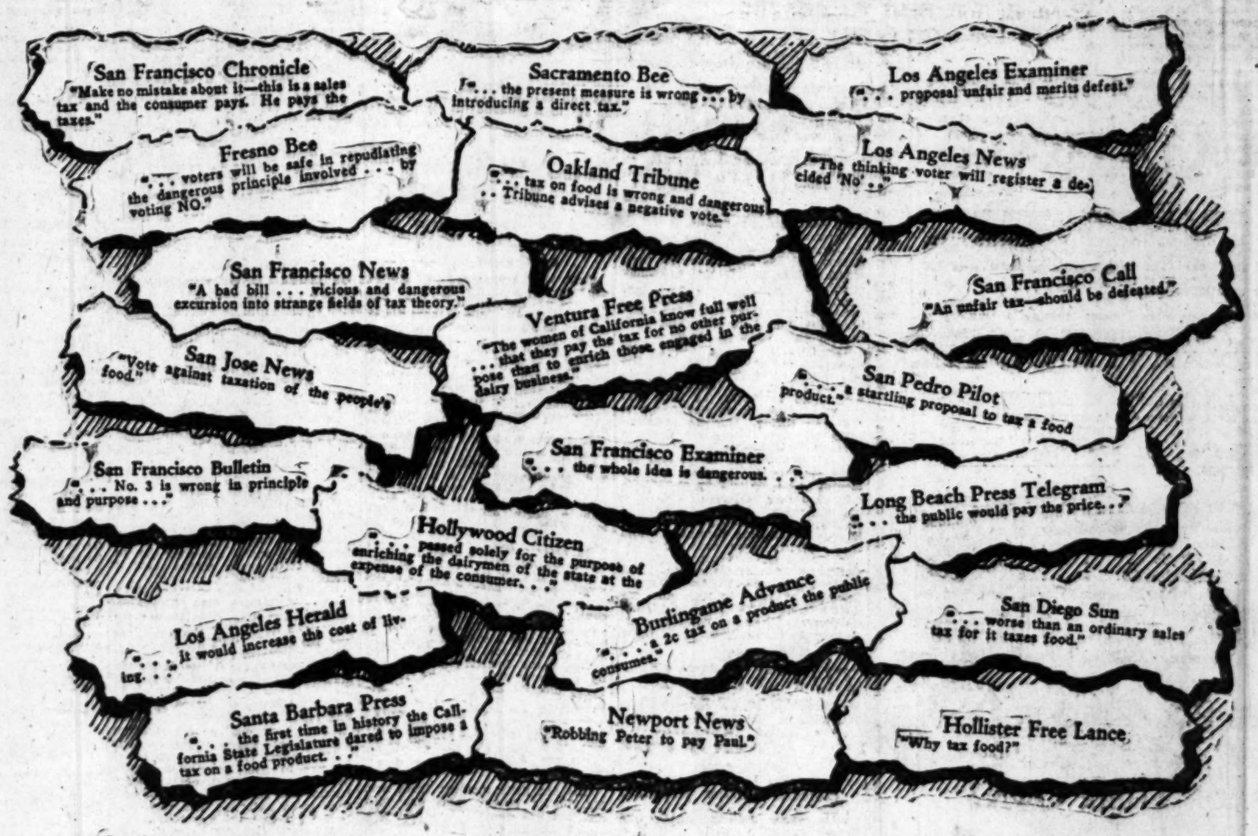
Leading State Editors SOLID against FOOD TAX

Read calm judgment of men who have investigated the facts—



Los Angeles Times—"It is discriminatory. A tax on food plus."

Los Angeles Express—"Contrary to sound public policy."

Glendale News—". . . . involves taxing the people at large to benefit one class."

Santa Rosa Press Democrat—"A tax . . . supposed to be used mostly for hiring inspectors . . ."

Prudence Penny—"I have never expressed an opinion on political questions before, but this is one on food." ". . . No. 3 should be voted down."

Long Beach Sun—". . . special legislation of a type that is dangerous."

Santa Paula Chronicle—". . . tax would be $400,000.00 a year."

Santa Barbara News—". . . consumer will pay this tax . . ."

Pasadena Post—"A tax on food . . . caused a tea party in Boston . . ."

Palo Alto Times—". . . the real object . . . the desire to cripple a competitive industry . . ."

Oakland Post-Enquirer—"A tax on food. That's a dangerous precedent."

Berkeley Gazette—". . . unfair . . . a bad precedent."

San Pedro News—"A tax on food . . . obnoxious."

Salinas Index—"This law stripped of camouflage is a food tax."

Glendale Press—"A tax on food always is obnoxious."

Santa Rosa Republican—". . . the tax will be an added cost to the consumers . . ."

San Bernardino Sun—". . . this gouge tax to be paid largely by the people. . ."

San Fernando Sun—". . . will work a hardship on people who . . . will have to pay the . . . tax."

West Adams Tribune—". . . an obnoxious and vicious measure."

Pomona Progress—". . . attempt to impose a sales tax . . ."

U. S. C. REMAINS IN RACE FOR TITLE

OXY TAKES ON BRUIN ELEVEN

Coliseum Scene of Conference Game Saturday

Four Teams in Running for Grid Title

Caltech Popularity Champs of the Circuit

BY BRAVEN DYER

When W. L. "Fox" Stanton rose up in all his hoary glory and smote Occidental on the chin at Tournament Park Saturday afternoon he and his Caltech grid athletes became the popular champions of the Southern Conference. Of course, A. A. Exendine and the defeated Tigers won't cast a vote for the Engineers and their leader, but every other institution in the circuit will for somebody had to bowl the Bengals over and Mr. Stanton et al having done so can rightfully sit back and enjoy the admiration of those who hoped to be able to do the same thing but failed or have not yet had the chance.

For the suspicion had been growing that the Tigers were unbeatable, a sort of a miniature "wonder team" with enough reserve material to smother other conference rivals. Now the other teams know differently, or think they do, and from this point forward the race, which up to this time has been as exciting as a well-concocted riot, should be even more so. Four teams have a chance for the title, Pomona, Oxy, Southern Branch and Whittier.

The big game of the week and the only local tilt of the day in Los Angeles occurs at the Coliseum Saturday when these same Occidental Tigers line up against Bill Spaulding's Bruins of the Southern Branch. Mr. Spaulding undoubtedly feels a bit peeved that Mr. Stanton beat him to it in this business of upsetting the Bengals for in talking to Bill some time ago it was evident that he was laying plans to undermine the Tigers. There is no denying that a Tiger which has just taken a sock on the nose is apt to be a lot tougher than one which has just enjoyed a meal of meaty Engineers. While Mr. Spaulding is delighted that the Bengals have been whittled down a bit he also feels somewhat sorry that the dirty work had to be perpetrated just before his game with them for it seems likely that Tigers will be seeking a lot of raw meat by the time this week-end rolls around.

Last year the Tigers made the fatal mistake of underestimating the Bruins and their coach. The result was a 9-to-0 drubbing and the only thing that saved Occidental from sharing the title with the Bruins was this same Mr. Stanton, who put over his annual coup d'etat by tying the Bruins and dropping them a peg below the Tigers.

On paper the Tigers should rate as favorites over the Bruins Saturday. While the Bruins lost to Whittier, 16 to 6, the Bengals turned around and thumped the Poets, 27 to

HERE is one of the outstanding backfield stars of the United States, who, except for his punting, is a better all-around fullback than the great Ernie Nevers, according to his coach, Andy Kerr. As Andy coached the famous Ernie at Stanford for three years before going to Washington and Jefferson, he should know whereof he speaks. Bill Amos is the one great player this year in the Western Pennsylvania district, a territory that has produced so many great stars and where, probably, the best football in the country is played, year in and year out.

Shipkey Recovers Fumble to Pave Way for Score

Line Playing of Al Nesser Bright Feature

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The Cleveland Panthers practically eliminated themselves from the American Professional Football League championship by losing to George Wilson's Wildcats, 6 to 0, today at Luna Park Stadium.

GEORGE WILSON

The game was devoid of all spectacular features except the playing of Al Nesser, Panther guard, who tackled indiscriminately any ball carrier within his reach throughout the contest.

"He's the greatest tackler I ever saw in my life," said Wilson, who sat on the bench most of the game because of a wrenched shoulder, stamping his feet to keep warm.

The game was largely a punting duel in which the Panthers were always forced backward. The Wildcats made five first downs and Cleveland two.

The visitors' score came on a break in the second quarter. Michaels attempted a dash into the Wildcat line from punt formation on the twenty-yard line. He fumbled and Harry Shipkey fell on the ball. Six concerted jabs at the line brought a touchdown. Morrison carrying the ball over. Reed, sent in to kick goal, missed.

The line-up.

MORTON KAER LEADS COAST SCORERS WITH SIXTY POINTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (AP)—Morton Kaer, speedy quarterback of the University of Southern California, chalked up his tenth touchdown of the season Saturday to establish a total of 60 points and lead high scorers of the Pacific Coast Conference by a comfortable margin.

MORTON KAER

Harold Patton, Washington halfback, failed to score, but maintains second place with 48 points. Despite the fact that Montana has not won a conference game this season, Bill Kelly, quarterback, jumped into third place among high scorers with 39 points. Wes Schulmerich, fullback, and Howard Maple, quarterback of the Oregon Aggies, are tied for fourth place with 36 tallies each.

Leading scorers of conference teams not mentioned above follow:

Hoffman, fullback, Stanford, 30; Jones, fullback, Oregon, 30; Owings, fullback, Idaho, 30; Meeker, quarterback, W. S. C., 24; Van Horn, halfback, California, 20.

Former Stanford Fullback Stars as His Duluth Eskimos Take Measure of Rivals By 7 to 6 Score

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Ernie Nevers was the whole show today when his Duluth Eskimos defeated the Milwaukee Badgers, 7 to 6. Nevers brought victory in the last five minutes of play when he hurled a 35-yard pass to Rooney for a touchdown and kicked goal for the extra point.

Milwaukee scored in the second period when Slater intercepted a pass by Nevers and ran twenty yards for a touchdown. The line-up:

TROJAN HERD STILL HOPEFUL

Must Win Remaining Contests in Conference

Huskies May Wallop Cardinals and Aid Locals

Oregon Aggies Still in Fight for Championship

BY PAUL LOWRY

It's too bad, but it seems as though this isn't to be a U.S.C. year after all. Most of the boys said it was going to be the Trojans' big gridiron season, but a couple or missed goal kicks spilled the beans. Now it looks as if Stanford will go through the season undefeated, and walk off with the Coast football championship.

Of course, there is a chance for Coach Howard Jones's men to cop the laurels. Should Washington defeat the Cards at Palo Alto November 13, while the Thundering Herd wins the remainder of its games, the Trojans would win the laurels by virtue of having a higher percentage. In that case the final standing would be:

	W	L	Pct
Southern California	5	1	.833
Oregon Aggies	4	1	.800
Stanford	3	1	.750

The fact that the Trojans are the only team in the conference to play six official games would give them the title should every team drop at least one game.

If the Oregon Aggies should surprise and trim the Trojans at Portland on Armistice Day they could cop the title, if Washington won from Stanford. Or, if the Cards win, the two teams would tie, and the Aggies' showing against Charley Erb's Idaho gang Saturday was none too good. The Aggies won, 3 to 0, by virtue of a field goal from Wes Schulmerich's toe in the closing minutes of play. And the Vandals had been hammering around in Aggie territory for over three-quarters of the game. Oregon finally got into the win-

UNBEATEN STANDINGS SHRINKING

Only Eight Teams Remain in Select Classification on East Coast

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (AP)—The undefeated teams of the East had shrunk to eight today, as a result of Saturday's form reversals. Both West Virginia and Pennsylvania felt the sting of intersectional defeats, which, however, failed to mar their records among the eastern elevens. Boston College, only team with an uncrossed goal line, lost the honor Saturday when West Virginia Wesleyan managed to score. Georgetown stands at the head of the point scorers with a massive total of 231 in six games.

ST. MARYS BEATS OLYMPICS

Slip Madigan's Unbeaten Gridders Trounce Rivals By 21 to 0 Score in Easy Fashion

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (AP)—St. Mary's, one of this year's three undefeated Pacific Coast college football squads, kept its record untarnished here today by trouncing the Olympic Club of San Francisco, 21 to 0. The Saints scored a touchdown in each of the last three periods, Watson kicking the additional point in each instance.

Jim Underhill, with his plunging, passing and snagging of club passes, was brilliant in the Saints' backfield, while the work of Altaffer and Young stood out for the Olympians.

"SLIP" MADIGAN.

Coach Madigan opened the game with many of his reserves in the line-up and they were unable to put over a score on the husky clubmen after working the ball to the 1-yard line. The collegians missed another opportunity to score in the second period when Watson's place kick from the 19-yard line went wide of the goal posts. A few minutes later, however, L. Rooney passed to Merrick for the first touchdown of the game.

Virtually all the first-string players started the third period for St. Mary's and there after the Olympians were on the defensive. After Watson missed another place kick, the Saints got the ball on a punt on their 60-yard line. Underhill propelled a 40-yard pass to Collins, who fumbled when tackled. Frankain scooped up the loose ball and dashed the remaining distance for the second score.

In the last period Underhill intercepted a club pass on Olympic's 20-yard line. He and Kasper bucked the oval to the 1-yard mark, Underhill scoring on the next play.

MADDEN OF COLUMBIA IS LEADING SCORER

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (AP)—Bill Madden, Columbia captain, with 63 points, jumped into the lead among individual scorers in the East Saturday, gaining a four-point advantage over "Whippet" Carr, Syracuse back, who is out of the game because of injuries. Shaughnessy, of Colgate crept within a point of the crippled Orange star.

GALLOWAY ON LOCAL PRO TEAM

Former U.S.C. Quarterback Calling Signals for Los Angeles Club

Harold Galloway, quarterback on the U.S.C. team which defeated Penn State at Pasadena on January 1, 1923, has joined A. E. Santwier's Los Angeles professional club and will be seen in action next Sunday when the locals open the season against the San Francisco club at Wrigley Field. It was Galloway's great work, coupled with that of Roy (Bullet) Baker, that brought U.S.C. a 14-to-3 victory over the easterners in that memorable New Year's Day struggle.

Santwier has lined up a strong club, with Clarence Parker, former Sacramento High School mentor, and one of Andy Smith's pupils, as coach. Parker put the boys through a two-hour workout at Wrigley Field yesterday afternoon, scrimmage and signal practice being the order.

Galloway is running the team, naturally, and has a smart mate in Abe Rosenburg, former New York University center. Abe looks like the goods and should make an ideal combination with Galloway.

Very few of the athletes are known here, most of them having made their reputations in the East. Kinney, formerly of the Brooklyn pros, and Bangs, the old Washington State lineman, who has been with Brick Muller's team, being the most prominent.

BIG HAND CONLEY

"Snipe" Conley, of the Dallas Steers, Texas League pennant winners, can hold seven baseballs in his right hand.

HERE'S ONE FOR THE BOOKS

MARYSVILLE (Cal.) Oct. 31. (AP) Marysville was awarded a freak 1-to-0 victory over Colusa in a game of the Sacramento Valley Football League here today.

A Colusa player was carrying the ball around end when the pistol shot for the close of the game was fired. Thinking the game was over, he tossed the ball away, and a Marysville player, catching it, ran 65 yards to a touchdown, as the ball was still in play.

The Colusa team left the field, and the referee awarded the contest to Marysville. Previously the score had stood 7 to 7.

Jake Slagle's Great Eighty-eight Yard Run Against Yale Related by Bob Roper

ELUDED ALL ELI TACKLERS

Dashed Eighty-eight Yards to Cross Goal

Sidestepped Way to Fame With Long Jaunt

Princeton Coach Thrilled by Sensational Sprint

BY W. W. ROPER,
Head Coach, Princeton

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—In the course of my twenty-five years of football, as player, fan and coach, I have naturally seen some wonderful plays on the gridiron, but the most spectacular single play I have ever seen was Jake Slagle's eighty-eight-yard run against Yale at New Haven last fall. To be exact, Slagle stood on his own 12-yard line in punt formation when he got the ball, and never stopped until he had carried it through the entire Yale team for a touchdown.

In the first quarter of the game Yale had the wind and played a kicking game with Princeton holding the ball and praying for time. In the second quarter conditions were reversed. Princeton had the wind, and the first two times it got the ball, punted on first down.

CALLED RUN

Yale got a good run-back after the second kick, and a punt left Princeton with the ball on its own 20-yard line. Slagle dropped back and everyone on the sidelines thought he would kick the ball out of danger. Instead, Caulkins, the Princeton quarterback, gave his signal for a run around Yale's left end.

Slagle got the ball and started. The Princeton interference checked the Yale end and tackle. This gave Slagle the chance he needed to get beyond the line of scrimmage. Slagle was then in the open field with the Yale goal line nearly eighty yards away. He dodged the Yale fullback and sidestepped the wing backs. How he managed to get by I do not know to this day.

McMillan, the Princeton captain and center, and Gates, the right tackle, took care of the quarterback, giving Slagle a clear field. By this time two Yale men were right on his flanks and he still had fifty yards to go. It seemed that he would surely be caught from behind, but each time the man who was chasing him got within reach, Slagle changed his direction.

MISSED TACKLES

If he did this once, he did it three or four times. He seemed to sense the position of his pursuer and weaved his way down the field just out of reach. First one opponent dived and missed him and then another took up the chase.

It seemed to me a small eternity before he reached the goal line. As a matter of fact, the entire play took up only a very few seconds.

In a straight line, Slagle covered eighty-eight yards from where he started. In reality, in dodging, sidestepping and reversing his field, he covered considerably over 100 yards before he slid across the goal line.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER, BILL HENRY

NOW that Fox Stanton has staged his annual upset, this time a Halloween Frolic at the expense of the Oxy Tigers, the Southern California Conference race is in the goshawfullest condition imaginable. At the present writing four teams are definitely in the running, namely the Whittier Poets, the U.C.L.A. Bruins, the Pomona Sagehens and the Oxy Tigers, each of which has been beaten once. Bringing up the second division we have Fox Stanton's Engineers, who have been beaten twice. After that we have Redlands, San Diego and La Verne, all of which look to be out of it. And, strange as it may seem, Whittier looks like the best prospect of the bunch to cop the title, because they alone have only one tough game to play.

Occidental, to win the title, must beat the Bruins and Pomona Sagehens. The Bruins to be victorious, must beat the Oxy Tigers and the Caltech Engineers. Pomona to win, must beat both Whittier and Occidental. Whittier, if they beat Pomona, will not only put the Sagehens out of the running, but will make it difficult for anybody to beat them. Altogether, it looks a good deal as though it would take the combined mathematical geniuses of the local colleges to figure out what it's all about, by the time the season is over.

In any event, Saturday's game did one thing and that was to prove how right we were back in September, when we predicted that no conference college could get through the season without a defeat. It also served to whet the appetites of the football fans for a game of tremendous possibilities when the Oxy Tigers and the Bruins tangle at the Coliseum Saturday. The success or failure of the season for both teams hangs on Saturday's game and nobody has to worry for fear it won't be a real battle.

At the present writing the dope would seem to favor the Bruins, who seem to be definitely on the upgrade, while the Tigers appear to be slipping. Occidental is paying the penalty for the toughest schedule any conference team has had in history, which is something Exendine inherited. The Tigers are said to be stale, while the Bruins, with two weeks in which to recover from their glorious victory over Pomona, ought to be right on top of the wave. Yes, sir—she looks like a great race.

7. That's the only basis of comparison between the two squads. Of course everybody knows—or should know—that the Bruin team which beat to Whittier and the one which cheated up Pomona, 27 to 7, were two very different aggregations. Spaulding's charges found themselves against the Sagehens and if they should happen to get away to a good start against Occidental all the reserves in the United States Army, if put at Exendine's command, wouldn't be able to stop 'em. When the Bruins get up and go they go and there's no two ways about it.

Eugene Nixon's Sagehens, who on last Monday morning could have put on high hats and walked beneath an underslung worm without the slightest trouble, awoke yesterday morning to find themselves once more leading the conference. The Pomonans were lower than the ocean's bed last week, but Caltech's feat in emitting Occidental has given all the teams new hope. Pomona beat Caltech, 27 to 7, by taking advantage of the breaks. Because they play more games than most of the teams the Sagehens stand a fair chance of copping the title. They now have a rest until Armistice Day, when they meet Whittier. Another breathing spell until the 20th inst. and then comes the Occidental clash. If the Tigers get over the Bruins Saturday and the Sagehens can upset Whittier on Armistice Day the Pomona-Oxy clash will be the championship tussle it has been so many times in the past.

Offhand, there's no denying that Leo Calland's Poets have things very much in their favor from now on, the Pomona scrap being the only hard one listed. It is to be played at Whittier and the Quakers are always tough at home. However, if the Poets do get over Pomona and either Southern Branch or Oxy finish the season with only one defeat, it will be hard to award Whittier the title in preference to one of the others, as the Quaker record is somewhat marred by that tie with La Verne.

CUT DOWN ON SALE OF CLASSIC DUCATS

BERKELEY, Oct. 31. (Exclusive) The extreme scarcity of tickets to the big game between California and Stanford football varsities on November 20 was further evidenced in the announcement by the committee in charge of tickets that only 1843 seniors and no juniors would receive the highly prized ducats. Some time ago the committee stated that all senior "extra ticket" applications and some junior petitions would be recognized. It happens that California has oversubscribed its allotment by 13,000. Stanford is entitled to 35 per cent of the seating space of the Memorial Stadium.

ning column at the expense of the poor old Bears, who took their third straight conference beating of the season and their fourth whipping in six games. Nope, the Bear isn't what he used to be. He's a very bedraggled old animal. It was Oregon's first conference victory of the year and this, coupled with the victory of the freshmen over the Washington freshmen may be an augury of better things to come at the Eugene University. It's been a long time since the good old days of Shy Huntington and his famous cohorts, and the Eugene boys are due for a boost under the coaching of McEwan and Vidal.

FIGHT WINS

If nothing else won the game at the Coliseum Saturday it was Stanford fight. True, U.S.C. fought bitterly and hard, but not under the same discouraging conditions that faced the Cards.

The Cards were shoved all over the field in the first quarter, were scored on the first play in the second period and a few minutes later had a fumble plucked out of the air rung up on them as a touchdown.

This was certainly disheartening enough, and yet the Cards came back like champions to fight the Trojans off their feet, score two touchdowns of their own, kick the winning goal and hold their lead.

From the Stanford standpoint the best part of it was that the Cards were getting stronger as the game progressed, while the play of the Trojans was becoming ragged.

LINESMEN STAR

In spite of the remarkable running back of U.S.C. kick-offs by Hyland and Hill, the terrific line-plunging of Biff Hoffman, who appears to be every whit as good as Ernie Nevers was, the play of the Stanford linemen was the biggest feature of the Cardinals' playing.

For it was McCreery and Swan who were all over the field. McCreery probably did more to bust up the Trojans' forward-passing attack than any other one man, and when he did that he broke some of the Trojan morale. The plays that worked like a million against California were smeared by Stanford. If passing don't forget big Ed Walker.

In the Trojan line Jesse Hibbs and Jeff Cravath were the biggest heroes. Hibbs was a riot in stopping plays all over the field.

Hyland and Hill starred in the Card backfield along with Hoffman and for U. S. C. Kaer and Laranaga in the first quarter ran wild with the ball. Nine of U. S. C.'s fourteen first downs were made in the initial period. If the Trojans could have kept going at this pace they would have won the game. But they didn't, and the why of that is contained in the Stanford paean of victory.

Bud Taylor in Hard Work for Vernon Fight

Bud Taylor, bantamweight champion of the world, settled down today to a week of hard training for his fight with Young Montreal of Providence, R. I. The scrap comes off Saturday night at Jack Doyle's Vernon arena, the bout marking Taylor's first appearance here since he acquired the bantamweight crown.

Taylor, who has been on the road for the past month, will not only put the Sagehens out of the running, but will make it difficult for anybody to beat them. Altogether, it looks a good deal as though it would take the combined mathematical geniuses of the local colleges to figure out what it's all about, by the time the season is over.

but settles down to the real grind today. Bud made his last appearance here during the late summer, knocking out Dixie LaHood at the Olympic Auditorium.

Young Montreal, who arrived only Saturday, also buckled down to rigorous training today. He is to work at the Newsboys' gym. Montreal holds a decision over Bushy Graham and Graham is one of the few boxers in the country who has defeated Taylor. The Providence boy will therefore be a good short-end bet when he climbs into the ring with Taylor, there being many local fistic followers who think he is good enough to trim Bud.

CARD HOCKEY GAME FOR NEW ICE RINK

As the attraction for Hollywood Night at the Winter Garden Ice Palace, Hollywood, Thursday night, Wintrop Sears has arranged an ice hockey game between the Richfield squad and the Winter Garden team. Loyd Cook is playing manager for the latter and has rounded up a fast team for the season. In addition to the hockey game, several fast races and a number of fancy-skating exhibitions are down for the night. Miss Verna Miles and Miss Simone Bourgou, two of Canada's greatest women skaters are down for a new act. Edmunde Lowe will be the master of ceremonies. It was also announced by Wintrop Sears that a meeting of the Southern California Ice Hockey Association would be held tonight.

MULLER'S TEAM IMPROVES

Brick's Los Angeles Pro Gridders Face Three Hardest Games in Next Trio of Tussles

Donald (Tommy) Thompson, in a letter to Braven Dyer of the Sports Department of The Times, tells of the progress being made by Brick Muller's LosAngeles professional football team in the East. The team beat Springfield Saturday, 32 to 7. Muller's squad has won all but one game and has been improving steadily. Thompson is a former Redlands University player and is holding down a guard berth on Muller's team. The letter follows:

As the wires have already told you, we won from Canton and tied Buffalo; but it is hardly likely that you will have received many of the details.

I mentioned in my last letter that Jim Thorpe and Pete Calac played on the Canton team—it might interest you to know that Calac is a Mission Indian from California, and attended Sherman for a while. Neither one showed much outside of Jim's punting, which was still wonderful—but got away one beautiful 70-yarder back, and his ability showed every time. As for the rest; well Jim is through, and he acts as though he knows it. A big ugly looking, slit-eyed man, but a good-natured bumbre—every time he was hit or stepped behind was pretty nearly on the play; he'd go down like a bowling pin, and come up smiling. We really beat Canton far worse than the score would indicate; made fifteen first downs to their nine, and outplayed them in every department of the game, except punting. Thurman and Newsome opened gaping holes in their heavier line, and only once did they make anything through our line, and that when they scored their second touchdown, (enough Newsome). He was jushed considerably afterward about that, for at every other time he played the great game of which he is capable. Tuffy Maul, along with Tut Imlay and Brick, was the hero, so far as our squad was concerned; his accurate passes, although somewhat lobbing, being a big factor in the number of first downs. Two line bankers came to the front by the excellence of their performance, namely, White and Sandberg. White was acquired in Milwaukee, being a friend of Sandberg's from Minnesota. A fine boy, both personally and on the field. Chunky chap, built something like Fuzz Merritt though not as tall. But the outstanding star of the Canton game was Pete Henry, 250-pound tackle from Washington and Jefferson some time back. I understand that he was all-American at one time, and believe me Detroit and T are willing to give it to him again right now anytime he wants it.

There was no slipping him, the boys all took a crack at him and each bounced off. He was fast, and for that I mean downright fast, in spite of his weight, clean and hard-hitting and he could surely rush the passes. Pete Henry, esq. is a fine way from the throwing game that Butler didn't last long—the boys hit him pretty hard at the start of the game and he went out. The last quarter Canton took on a perfect conditioning.

Buffalo was terrible. The field was Buffalo Park—a combination diamond and gridiron, with a strip of brown, juicy mud where the base lines are. Not satisfied with that, two high school games were played on the field the Saturday preceding the game simply ruining what were getting stronger as the game progressed, while the play of the Trojans was becoming ragged.

LINESMEN STAR

In spite of the remarkable running back of U.S.C. kick-offs by Hyland and Hill, the terrific line-plunging of Biff Hoffman, who appears to be every whit as good as Ernie Nevers was, the play of the Stanford linemen was the biggest feature of the Cardinals' playing.

KERCKHOFF LEADS AT MOUNTAIN MEADOWS

Porter Kerckhoff of the home club, with a 76, won tourney low gross in the annual medal invitational that drew a fine entry of nearly 200 players to Mountain Meadows, Saturday and yesterday. Bill Van Metre of San Gabriel, with 80-14—66, collected tourney low net.

Competition in all classes was very close, fine scores resulting.

ROBBINS STARS AT FLINTRIDGE

Hunter S. (Charlie) Robbins, still thinking about the snow that is closing his back-East golf courses, rounded Flintridge with a sizzling 72 yesterday, to mark up the best score that has been chalked since Jim Reynolds started on his successful attempt to improve the rolling layout. Scoring at Flintridge is getting better daily and the course will soon be one of the finest in the West.

Fay and Lester Coleman, Harold and Russel Thompson, teaming for a four-ball aggregate of 321 to win the foursome low gross trophies.

Complete results were as follows:

Class A—C. M. Bush, California, 77, low gross; Marvin Moss, Mountain Meadows, 77-4-69, low net. Class B—R. R. Manker, Mountain Meadows, 79, low gross; Vic La Sarge, Rancho, 81-12—69, low net. Class C—H. H. Turner, Mountain Meadows, 83, low gross; Henry Rivers, Oakmont, 84-16—68, low net. C. M. Holmes, C. R. Manke, H. W. Werner and F. Kolar, all of Mountain Meadows, with a four-ball low net of 261, tied with H. S. Weeb, J. S. Thompson, C. W. Elliott, E. F. Rivers, Oakmont, four foursome low net. The tie will be played off later.

HONEY STARS AT BRENTWOOD

A. H. Honey, 2 down, led the Class A sweepstakes field at Brentwood yesterday, while E. J. Holt was defeating Harry Stuck, 2 and 1, in a semi-finals match on the Bundy Cup event. E. R. Maule, 4 down, was second and N. A. Nater, 6 down, third. E. N. Perry finished even to lead the Class B play. W. F. Lincoln, 1 down, was second and A. C. Amos, 2 down, third. Mrs. L. B. Elliott, one of Brentwood's best women players who scored an 82 for a course record at Girard yesterday, will be one of the leading challengers in the Wilshire Invitational opening today. Brentwood will send the largest feminine club delegations to the competition.

FAST TOURNEY FIELD IN FLINTRIDGE EVENT

Ralph Reynolds, who defeated Eric Winston, 2 and 1, to go into the semi-finals of the President's Cup tourney at Flintridge yesterday, will play Joe Hageman, who won from Paul Reynolds, 2 and 1, while Maurie McLaughlin clashes with Jack Frost, in the same event. Results to date, are as follows:

PRESIDENT'S CUP

Ralph Reynolds defeated Eric Winston, 2 and 1. Joe Hageman defeated Paul Reynolds, 2 and 1. Maurice McLaughlin defeated A. F. Burnett, 4 and 3.
Jack Frost defeated Hugh Kirk, 7 and 6.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S CUP

W. A. Taylor defeated A. K. Candee, 4 and 3. P. Kiger defeated Jack Kipper, 1 up.
J. R. Thompson defeated J. R. White, 4 and 3.
W. E. Hall defeated A. W. Lewis 2 and 1.

MOSER COLLECTS WILSHIRE FEATURE

Allen Moser, Wilshire youngster, finished even with par to defeat Walter Burch, 3 and 6, in the thirty-six-hole final match of the President's Cup tourney at Wilshire, yesterday. L. A. Henry won from Don Miner, 3 and 2, in the Vice-President's flight.

GUEST WINS BIG GUN TITLE

Lakeside Pro Stages Great Comeback to Defeat Harold Sampson for State Championship

BY THE GOLFER

Harold Sampson, of Burlingame, slender Northern California professional champion, with a 4 up lead over Charlie Guest, down State titlist, at the half-way mark in the seventy-two-hole match for the West Coast pro title, started out to give the local challenger a tee-and-greens lesson and was well on his way to added laurels when Guest rallied to square the match on the seventy-second hole and cop the golf crown with a birdie 3 on the third extra hole in the play that drew a fine gallery at Lakeside, yesterday.

Sampson's iron work through the entire thirty-nine-hole grind yesterday was perfect, while Guest played one of the poorest games of his career, barely managing to hold the visiting golfer even through to the fifteenth hole in the afternoon round, when, trailing, 3 down, he dropped a long putt for a birdie 2 and the hole.

CHARLIE GUEST.

Guest's sensational recovery that included a perfect 4 on the 430-yard seventeenth and a sizzling thirty-four-foot putt for a birdie 2 to square the match on the final green, was more than gratifying to the large gallery of personal friends who followed the play. Guest simply refused to profit by the machine-like precision that characterized Sampson's play and continued to miss putts that would have won the pro title earlier in the day. His drive through the extra holes was superb, for, after halving the first with a 4, he placed his tee shot out of bounds and only managed to remain in the race when Sampson missed a short putt on 2 for a win.

Guest carried 280 yards down the center, going to three, the seventy-fifth hole of the match, and then laid dead for a birdie 3. Sampson, over the pin in 2, missed a long try for a 3 also.

The match yesterday was the final play for the West Coast, or California, State Professional Golfers' Association championship, and plans are already under way to match Willie Hunter and Guest in a special exhibition for the State Big Gun championship. Hunter is State open champ, but did not play in the local association event. Yesterday's cards were as follows:

HALL DEFENSE WILL BE ALIBI

Accused Plan to Testify in Own Behalf

All Will Deny Presence at Murder Scene

Case Scheduled to be Called Wednesday

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Henry Stevens and Willie Stevens, will take the stand in their own defense during their trial, which opens on Wednesday at Somerville, N. J., for the murder of Rev. Dr. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills. This was announced tonight by Timothy N. Pfeiffer of defense counsel.

The defense will be an alibi, seeking to show that none of the defendants could have been present in De Russey's Lane on the night of September 14, 1922, when the rector and his choir leader were shot to death. An intensive effort to shake the stories of witnesses called by Asst. Atty.-Gen. Simpson, special prosecutor, will be part of the defense plan.

The fact that Mrs. Hall will testify was announced [several] weeks ago, but until tonight there had been some uncertainty as to whether her example would be followed by her brothers.

CARPENTER DEFENSE

The fourth defendant, Henry De La Bruyere Carpenter, who is to be tried later, also will testify in his own behalf and he, too, will offer an alibi as his answer to the indictment voted against him by the April grand jury in Somerset county.

The first statement as to the plans of the defendants came from State Senator Clarence E. Case, counsel for Henry Stevens.

"I have every expectation," he said, "that Henry Stevens will take the stand in his own defense. He will present an alibi, supported by reputable citizens of Lavalette, N. J., where he makes his home. The defense will be simply that he was not present at the crime and knew absolutely nothing about it."

Later, Mr. Pfeiffer said all of the defendants will be put on the stand.

TEN WITNESSES

The Stevens brothers, it was said, are confident that the stories they will tell the trial jury will outweigh any evidence which Senator Simpson may bring against them. It was reported that ten residents of Lafayette will take the stand to testify that on the night of the murder Henry Stevens was fishing on the beach in front of his home. It was reported that two women will be among the alibi witnesses, and that they will swear that as late as 11 p.m. they saw Henry Stevens standing in the rear door of his home, and spoke to him as they passed.

The chief point against Willie Stevens aside from Mrs. Jane Gibson's positive declaration that she recognized him at the scene of the crime, are finger marks which the State contends he left on a calling card found propped against the shoe of the rector. Finger print experts for the State have identified the prints on the card as made by Willie Stevens.

CRIMINALS SAFE IN SHRINES

TEHERAN (Persia) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—A curious situation has arisen in the ancient Persian city of Kum, capital of Kum province, historic place of pilgrimage. A number of murderers and criminals fleeing from justice have taken refuge in the city's shrines and holy territories. The clerics attached to the shrines have refused to deliver the criminals, notwithstanding the government's repeated requests. The Moslem church law does not permit any police to enter the shrines and holy places. Strong pressure is being brought to bear on the government, placing the latter in an unenviable position. It is certain that a fanatical uprising will develop if the government adopts force.

NEW SOVIET PROGRAM TO BE FRAMED

Propaganda Abandonment and Debt Settlements to be Council's Policy

LONDON, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—A radical change in the policy of the soviet government is expected to be announced after the specially enlarged plenary meeting of the council of the Third Internationale, which is to be summoned immediately after the conclusion of the Communist party conference, now meeting at Moscow, it was said here today.

The soviet government has made up its mind to end the interference of the Third Internationale with the domestic affairs of other nations and discontinue the world-wide Communist propaganda. The first step is to be the liquidation of the propaganda department of the Communist Internationale and the next is to be a strong drive for recognition and the conclusion of treaties between Russia and all the countries which have not so far recognized the soviet government.

The third point in the new program is the arrangement for the settlement of Russia's external debts and it is said that the soviets are planning to invite all the debtors to a congress at Vienna at which the whole debt situation will be threshed out and clarified.

It is believed that Commissar Cristian Rakovski already has obtained the French approval of this plan for an international conference.

Under the influence of Premier Mussolini, Russia has offered a security pact to Czecho-Slovakia and in case of its acceptance, a similar offer will be made to Poland.

DEPORTING OF CHINESE PROTESTED

Reputed Belgian Measures Against Students Bring Treaty Abrogation Demand

SHANGHAI, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The vernacular press, the Chamber of Commerce, and other public bodies are emphasizing news from Brussels that Belgium is deporting Chinese students due to the recent rioting in the Belgian capital in connection with the Chinese attempt to abrogate the Sino-Belgian Treaty. The Chinese demand that the Peking government lodge a strong protest and immediately abrogate the Sino-Belgian Treaty, which they say is unfair.

The press says Gen. Sun Chuan-Fang, the military commander of the Lower Yangtse area, also is bringing pressure to bear on the Peking government for the abrogation of the Belgian treaty, asserting:

"The Belgians must yield to Chinese opinion if the Belgians desire a continuance of the commercial relations with China."

The Chinese Chamber of Commerce yesterday petitioned the American Minister, John Van A. McMurray, who is visiting here, for American help to induce Belgium to revise the treaty provisions pertaining to tariff and the extra-territoriality.

GHOST WALKS TODAY FOR HOHENZOLLERNS

BERLIN, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Tomorrow is pay day for the Hohenzollerns. The sum of $1,250,000 will be paid to their representative through the Dutch Bank of Berlin, but $500,000 must be turned over immediately to creditors of the sons of the former Kaiser. Their debts aggregate $1,000,000, but the remainder will be paid out on February 1 and March 1, when the republic will give the Hohenzollerns two more payments of $1,250,000 each.

EX-KAISER REFUSES TO PAY DUTCH TAXES

THE HAGUE, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The refusal of former Kaiser Wilhelm to pay his income tax is causing difficulties between him and the Dutch tax authorities. A tax inspector visited Doorn to explain that the former ruler, since his settlement with the German government, now comes under the heading of an ordinary taxpayer.

HEN TRADEMARKS EGG IN SUNFLOWER STATE

SUBLETTE (Kan.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Dean Nilson has a remarkable hen, according to her statements. The hen, faithful to her home State, recently laid an egg with a perfect sunflower imprinted on the shell. The flower is perfect except for color.

KEEP OLD OFFICERS

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 30.—The Santa Monica-Ocean Park Chamber of Commerce, on completion of a fiscal year marked with record growth in membership and activities, announced today the re-election of all officers at the annual meeting in the Miramar Hotel. M. C. McKenney, secretary with a record of five years of service in the bay district, was re-elected for a term of two years instead of the one-year term prevailing in the past. Following his annual report, the directors gave him a vote of thanks and increased his next term in the important post.

Otto J. Fehling was re-elected president without opposition, as was T. A. Johnson, vice-president. P. J. Dudley also went in again as treasurer without an opposing candidate in the field.

lying solely upon his muscular strength and agility, his physical endurance and his knowledge of mechanics. He never was called upon to pay the reward.

ATTACK UNTIRING

He kept an untiring attack on spiritualist. He wrote a book to expose "Margery," the medium who won the award of the Scientific American, charging that the committee which made the award did not take proper precautions. He aided the police of New York City in putting a number of mediums out of business and gave a course at the Police Academy here on the discovery of frauds.

His first appearance as a public entertainer was at the age of 8, when he performed on the high trapeze with a circus troup. Because of his mother's objections he was brought back home and apprenticed to a locksmith. Almost at once he turned his attention to the business of opening locks without keys.

A handcuffed prisoner brought into Appleton by a sheriff who had lost the keys to the handcuffs was the occasion for the discovery of the trick of opening of handcuffs which Houdini said was known only to him, his wife and the prisoner.

STARS IN VAUDEVILLE

After an unsuccessful attempt to appear in vaudeville, Houdini scraped together enough money to go to Europe, where he made his reputation. When he returned he was able to command fifty times the price he first asked for his act. Besides performing various so-called magical tricks, Houdini was adept in releasing himself from almost any kind of confinement that could be devised.

He freed himself after being manacled and shut up in a box. He escaped from straitjackets. He freed himself while hung from a derrick in manacles and a straitjacket. He suffered himself to be confined in a coffin under water. Although he challenged any man to perform these feats of escape, no man ever duplicated one of them.

Houdini's library here is said to be the most complete library on magic in the world. He was the author of a number of books on magic and nine times was elected president of the Society of American Magicians.

Houdini leaves his widow, who was Beatrice Rahner of Brooklyn. They were married in 1894.

HEN BEATS OWN EGG RECORD

Canadian University Pen White Leghorn Lays 351 Times in Year

AGASSIZ (B. C.) Oct. 31. (AP) Laying her 351st egg on the last day of a year, hen No. 6 of the University of British Columbia white leghorn pen, entered in the Dominion experimental competition here last night broke her own world's record of 348 set here Wednesday.

The record before Wednesday was held by a hen which laid 347 eggs in Australia two years ago.

FOUR SLAIN IN BANDIT BRAWL

believed the bandits quarreled over division of the money which police believe to be loot from a recent bank robbery here. They expressed the opinion that Olsen killed the two.

Cunniffe, according to police records, was wanted for two murders in New Jersey and a bank robbery and murder in Bellemore, L. I.

On October 4, this year, he stopped Frank Kearney and his son as they were driving their automobile in New Jersey. He asked for a ride and being refused, pulled his gun and killed both men.

On April 4, 1924, he was accused of holding up a bank at Bellemore, L. I., and killing Ernest L. Whitman, a bond salesman.

An inquest was held at the county morgue today.

The woman victim was five feet five inches tall, had red hair and wore a lavender dress under a black fur coat trimmed with brown fur. Her left arm bore a fain tattoo mark taken to be either the letter "F" or "T." Jewelry on her person included four diamond rings, worth perhaps $500.

Both Olsen and Cunniff had large stocks of elegant clothing, including a variety of fancy colored shirts and collars. Among the woman's effects was a quantity of expensive apparel.

In the general movement in India to abandon the centuries-old custom of hoarding gold, an Arab recently converted his back-yard savings into $350,000 worth of government securities.

What is CURIOSITY teaching them?

Why is the sky blue?
What is air made of?
Why does a ball bounce?

Why has water no taste?

Your children's questions—how do you answer them? Mail coupon for free book.

THESE children have The Book of Knowledge in their home. It is a delight to them every moment of the day, and is turning their eager curiosity into important knowledge. Their teacher will tell you they stand high in their grades, because they have learned to think for themselves. When she wants a quick and intelligent answer in class, she can be sure of it from either of them. They have made a long start in the race for knowledge.

The BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE
The Children's Encyclopedia—based on questions asked by children every day

The Book of Knowledge is the children's rich mine of information on all the topics that interest them. They find each question answered clearly, vividly. Again and again the child's curiosity pushes open the door to new fields of knowledge and he is guided, step by step, from the simplest ideas and facts to the most profound truths. Here is the really essential knowledge of the world—Nature with the animals, birds, insects, trees and flowers; the history, manners and customs of a hundred different countries; the worlds in the skies, and the teeming life of the water; science; invention; manufactures; literature; art; poetry; games and play-time activities—18 story-like departments. The style is so simple and clear that children easily understand it, and so entertaining that they love to read it.

15,000 Striking Educational Pictures

The editors of The Book of Knowledge believe that learning should not be a chore—but always a delight. Therefore they have provided, in this great work, fifteen thousand educational pictures printed in gravure, in halftone and in the brilliant colors of nature. Each picture is a shortcut to a fact. Here is visual education in its simplest, finest form, and the lessons learned through the eye in this easy way live, clear and distinct, in the memory. So appealing are the pictures and diagrams, with their brief explanations, that they attract the attention at once, and even boys and girls who are not naturally fond of books soon become reading children.

In More Than a Million Homes

This wonderful educational plan, which has captured the child mind, is the idea of a father who loved his child and knew its needs. He drew to his help other parents of long experience in writing for children. They studied with the children, played and worked with them, and from the discoveries they made The Book of Knowledge grew. Now it is in more than a million homes. Boys and girls do not need to be urged to read and consult it. They recognize here their own book, really made for them, written in the easy words they know. They read it for hours at a time, absorbed, and all the while they are learning important facts of the world of knowledge.

MOTHER HEEDS OWN ADVISING

Parent of Flapper-Bandit to Guard Daughter

Writer Will Put Theories Into Practice

Counselor Admits Neglect of Own Child

ROCK ISLAND (Ill.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Charles Nichols, who writes magazine articles under the pen name of Vashti Dale, telling parents how to take care of children, has decided to give more time to the practice of her theories in her own home.

Mrs. Nichols takes on her own shoulders the blame for the escapade of her daughter, Beulah, 16 years of age, who on October 12 splashed her way onto the front pages of the country's newspapers as a "flapper bandit."

Beulah, at that time, broke from parental restraint, and, after indulging in a petting and drinking party, held up W. H. Mahoney, 75 years of age, at the latter's home.

The girl, fired by an irresistible desire to be her own boss, made Mahoney, at the point of a gun, turn over a suit of his clothes, compelled him to cut her bobbed hair shorter and fit her out with a cap. Then she undressed before the astonished septuagenarian, left him with a suit of silken lingerie as a souvenir and set out to see the world garbed as a man.

RUNS BACK HOME

She caught the first train out of town, and after a day spent in Galva, Ill., became convinced that the world was not what it was cracked up to be, grabbed a return freight and was welcomed home by her parents.

In a series of articles which Mrs. Nichols is writing she blames parental intolerance which fails to peirce the workings of a child's mind for such escapades as her daughter's.

Mrs. Nichols, while not defending the action taken by her daughter, places much of the blame upon her own shoulders. Herself a writer, she has furnished articles for magazines and periodicals throughout the country. She has made a specialty of telling mothers in her stories how to rear their children. Now she is convinced that the very ideas she has been warning others against have come into her own home and that she did not give as much time to the practical training of her daughter as she did to the theoretical treatises of which she wrote. Mrs. Nichols declares that she owes it to the world to tell other mothers of the experience she has been through.

UNDERSTANDING NEEDED

In her articles, Mrs. Nichols says, "My daughter adores dancing. What normal, healthy young girl does not? And we should have made it possible for her to satisfy this normal desire in a normal, healthy way. We should have given her parties for her at home. Thus we would have assured ourselves that her associates were all that we desired them to be and we would have known that bacchanalian orgies and joy riding were neither thought of nor desired. In short, we should have realized that our standards are too old-fashioned to fit her and we should have modified them accordingly.

"Unless we understand fully the real nature of human progress as it applies to our children and understanding, become broad enough to interest and live it, then we as parents are failures and we as a nation are in grave danger."

UNION MEN UP TODAY IN DEATH CASE

Officers of Striking Bay City Carpenters Arraigned on Murder Charge

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Archibald J. Mooney, vice-president of the United Order of Carpenters and Joiners; Paul J. Clifford, business agent of Carpenters' Local No. 483, and six other members of the carpenters' unions charged with murder in connection with the death of C. W. Campbell, American-plan worker, will appear tomorrow morning before Superior Judge Roche for arraignment under grand jury indictments.

The eight murder defendants have had their case assigned to Department Twelve of the Superior Court which will be unoccupied until next Wednesday when Superior Judge Jamison of Modoc county will arrive to preside over it.

Meanwhile Judge Roche will officiate on the calendar of Department Twelve but it is expected that with appearance of the murder defendants tomorrow morning he will postpone arraignment until some date following the arrival of Judge Jamison.

Another plea to have bail set for the eight men probably will be made in the morning by defense attorneys, it was stated by Nathan Coghlan, chief defense counsel. However, it is believed that Judge Roche will be guided by the conduct of Presiding Judge Fitzpatrick and Police Judge Lazarus, each of whom has refused to set bail for the eight defendants.

SMOKI CLAN RETURNS FROM TOUR OF EAST

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The Smoki Clan has returned to Prescott, bringing its pullmanikee back to their native heath and carrying tales of far-eastern appreciation of an unique performance. This was in Philadelphia given in an open stadium, under very damp and stormy conditions. No dances were presented elsewhere, owing to "too much commercialism." Heavy guarantees were demanded in Chicago and Kansas City, which had to be passed by. The thirty-six performers, mainly young business men, had an enthusiastic reception on return, much of the population of the city being at the station. One note of welcome had especial appreciation. It was a check for $500 from the Valley Bank branch.

TWO SHOT ACCIDENTALLY

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Harry Tomkinson was severely wounded in the left leg, which had to be amputated, and the 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Kester was wounded in the arm, when a shotgun fell from the kitchen wall in Tomkinson's residence, Baker Creek, near Quesnel, B. C. Both barrels were discharged by force of the impact when the gun hit the floor.

Polar Airman Tells Santa's Flight Plans

CHEYENNE (Wyo.) Oct 31. (AP)—Santa Claus is working day and night to provide good cheer at Christmas for the youngsters of the world in his factory at the North Pole—and will desert his traditional reindeer for the modern airplane to insure quick delivery of toys and goodies.

So says Floyd Bennett, champion pilot of Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd, in their flight over the North Pole last summer. Bennett declared that "I saw Santa Claus hard at work at the North Pole," in a message to two Idaho children, who sent a letter to Santa Claus, North Pole, and which Bennett received here yesterday.

"When we were at the North Pole, Santa Claus's plant was working full time and it looks like he would have enough for all the youngsters."

"Times" Daily Short Story

THE JOKE

By F. BRITTEN AUSTIN

I saw him open the letter with trembling fingers, an absurdly beatific expression on his face.

THE nurse had summoned me. In the midnight hush of the hospital I stood by his bedside—"Collins, John Wentworth, age 50"—double pneumonia and a steep temperature graph. His eyes were awful. His fingers picked at the sheet. He would certainly not see dawn.

"There's something—I want—to tell you, Doctor. Something—I want you—to do for me. Send—the nurse away."

I motioned her to depart; gave him a sip of stimulant. It steadied him.

"You'll do what I ask, Doctor?"

"If I can."

He looked a feverish gratitude at me.

"Thank you. Listen. It's important—very important." He collected his strength for a moment, staring at me with those awful eyes. "Ten years ago I was traveling eastbound across the Atlantic—in a slow, old eight-day boat; no wireless. She was a full up, and I had to share a two-berth cabin—thing I hate doing. My roommate was already there when I arrived—there with his wife, who had come to see him off. I took an antipathy to him on sight. He was a soft-faced, weak-eyed, foolish little man—the sort that can't help babbling exasperatingly and incessantly. I saw at once what I was in for, and wondered if I couldn't bribe the purser to effect an exchange—I wish I had now. Michael Henry Brumfit, he told me his name was, and insisted on introducing me to his wife. She was young and a real good-looker—far too fine an article for him. I suppose he knew it, for he fawned over her in a way that made my gorge rise—almost kissed her in front of me. I quitted the cabin and left them to it.

"I didn't see him again until we were well at sea, and I went down to dress for dinner. He was even more irritatingly imbecile than I had expected, and quite impervious to snubs. He just had to tell me all about himself, and he did—all about himself and this wonderful, miraculous wife of his; how he adored her and she adored him—until I could almost have caught hold of him and banged his head against the floor. If I'd been married myself, I might have sympathized—but I was a bachelor—always have been. When he showed me gloatingly a packet of eight letters she'd put into his hand before leaving—a letter for every day of the voyage—and started in to ask me if that didn't prove she really loved him, I told him brutally that all it proved was that she must be as big a fool as he was. I was worked up to that pitch.

"BUT that didn't damp him any. Next morning he had the fatuous impudence to wake me up that he might tell me all about the letter he held open in his hand—the first of the letters. He even wanted me to read it. I threw one of my shoes at him.

"Nothing would silence him, however. He used to follow me about the deck, blockade me in quiet corners of the smoking-room. I was the only passenger on the ship actually acquainted with his wife, and he just had to talk to me about her, to ask me—over and over again—if I didn't think she was the most beautiful woman alive; if those precious letters weren't absolute proof of her love for him. He insisted on inflicting upon me the most intimate details of their idyllic life together.

"And every morning he opened religiously another one of the letters she had numbered for him in the order he was to read them. Every morning, though he was certain of getting one of my shoes at his head, he woke me up to tell me about it, to read out ridiculous extracts. That is to say—the first three mornings he did—for on the afternoon of the third day something happened. I had dodged down to the cabin to escape him, leaving him babbling of his wife to some other unfortunate passenger he had buttonholed. And there, as the devil would have it, lying exposed in his open suit case—he'd just been down for a photograph of her—was the packet of letters tied up with pink ribbon, No. 4 on top.

"I don't know what came over me—but I swear, Doctor, I meant it only as a joke—a malicious joke, if you like, but still a joke. I know I had a vague idea that I'd stop his babbling for the rest of the voyage anyway. When I was a schoolboy I had a decided talent for imitating handwriting so that the purported writer couldn't tell it himself from the genuine—I remember my master telling me to forget that talent or I'd finish badly as a forger. Suddenly, as I looked at those letters, the temptation to try my old skill flashed into me—it'd be a joke to write him a fake letter, give him a shock. If he took it badly, I'd explain later, make it all right.

"So very carefully I opened No. 4 with a pencil. It came unstuck quite easily. The letter within, beginning 'Dearest Love' as usual, was on plain, white paper. No trouble about that. I slid off cautiously to the writing-room, and with the original before me wrote, in a careful copy of that feminine hand:

"'Dear Michael:

"'You are now four days at sea and cannot interfere. This is to tell you I have left you forever.'

"I signed it 'Eva,' replaced it in the envelope, stuck it down, took it back to the cabin, tied it up again with the others. Her original, full of affectionate gush, I kept to give him later, when the joke had gone on long enough.

"Next morning I woke before he did. Shaming sleep and trying not to giggle, I saw him crawl out of his bunk, go to his suit case, take out No. 4 from the little bundle. I saw him open it with trembling fingers, an absurdly beatific expression on his face. I saw him read it—saw his face change. And then—with a howl that was like that of a desperately wounded animal—holding that accursed letter high above his head—he sprang to the door, disappeared.

"I never saw him again. He must have rushed straight to throw himself overboard."

The dying man stopped, out of breath, still plucking at the sheet, his awful eyes upon me.

"I'm not going to tell you of the hell I've been through, Doctor. I've never told anybody—anything. I gave up my life to it. For the last ten years I've been trying to trace that woman—to make reparation—and I've failed. But"—he gasped—"she must be found. I've done the least I could—named her in my will as my sole heir. I want you—to find her for me—to give her those other letters that were—never seen by the man—she—wrote them—for—the man—she loved. They're in my—wallet—in the locker—there—take—" He was going, going fast. In less than five speechless minutes he went.

I SAT in my room again, turning over those tragic love letters—dirtied envelopes which religiously he had never opened—numbered 5, 6, 7, 8, in that woman's fond writing. How was I going to find her? Perhaps there would be an address on one of them? I slit the envelope of No. 5:

"Dear Michael:

"You are now five days distant at sea, and cannot interfere. This is to tell you that I have left you forever. You cannot trace me, so do not try.

"EVA."

No. 5—? But he had said No. 4! I gasped—ripped the envelopes of Numbers 6, 7, 8. Each contained merely a blank sheet of note paper.

And Collins was dead—couldn't be told the real joke.

Actor's Marital Trouble Laid to 'Fallen Angels'

LONDON, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—A jury here refused a divorce to Lord Cowley, known on the stage as Arthur Wellesley, who had charged his wife, the former American actress, May Picard, with misconduct with another actor, Humphrey Kent. Lady Cowley sobbingly denied Lord Cowley's charges of her being in a flat with Mr. Kent.

The Countess denied misconduct with Kent, who is named as co-respondent, asserting she later greatly detested him, declaring he won money from her at card games and later when she gave him an I. O. U. he became testy, quarreling with all the guests of Mrs. Collier, with whom they were staying, over a dinner incident. When pressed for particulars, she said Mrs. Collier's sister got noisy and obstreperous and threw butter in the eyes of Col. Davison, one of the guests.

During her sobbing, Lady Cowley laid the blame for all her troubles on the play "Fallen Angels," in which Lord Cowley was appearing. She insisted that she still loves her husband, but he had told her he did not love her.

Bay City Waiter Held on Charge of Slaying Wife

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (AP)—John Cavagna, 30 years of age, a waiter, was arrested today on a charge of murder following the death this morning of his wife, Josephine, 24, from a gunshot wound in the head.

Cavagna protested his innocence telling police his wife had retired to the bedroom and shot herself with a pistol shortly after his arrival home last night. He said she had threatened to kill herself on several occasions.

PROHIBITION DEBATE WITH U.S.C. SUGGESTED

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Following a debate on "Resolved that National Prohibition is in the Interests of Canada," between the University of Idaho and the University of British Columbia, Vancouver efforts will be made to arrange a similar debate with the University of Southern California. The local university has arranged a series of interesting debates with other universities for this winter and spring.

VICTIM OF FARM FIRE SUCCUMBS

Manteca Farmer Fatally Burned in Attempt to Save Home

STOCKTON, Oct. 31. (Exclusive) Manuel Cardoza, 60 years of age, Manteca farmer, died at a hospital in Modesto, the victim of burns sustained in his attempt to save his burning home.

The flames were started by a gasoline stove.

Going into the house, Cardoza found it ablaze and catching up a quilt, attempted to beat out the fir. He tripped and fell and the burning stove was pulled over on him by the quilt. Neighbors, seeing the fire, upon arriving found Cardoza unconscious with his clothing afire. He was rushed to Ripon for medical attention and later, taken to Modesto. Two sons and a daughter survive.

A peculiar "fire hoodoo" has hung over Cardoza's life in recent years. He lost his home in Pescadero before taking up a farm at Manteca. Since then, his home was burned to the ground, and on other occasions, he lost a large dairy barn and a stack of baled hay.

COURT-MARTIAL OPENS ON CHARGE OF MURDER

LONDON, Oct. 21. (Exclusive)—Officers of the United States gunboat Lardner, have begun court-martial proceedings at Gravesend, where the Lardner is docked, against Emanuel Smith, American sailor, who is charged with shooting Emilio Parades Filipino sailor, at Gravesend, last August. The shooting took place, it is said, following a quarel over the Filipino's dancing with white girls in a Gravesend establishment. The British Coroner's jury brought a verdict of murder against Smith, but the officers of the Lardner refused to give up, declaring the ship was American territory. After diplomatic exchanges the Lardner returned to Gravesend to hold the trial. Filipino friends of the dead man testified they saw Smith pull a gun and shoot Parades. The British girls over whom the incident happened will testify.

PHEASANT BREAKS WINDOW

NEW WESTMINSTER (B. C.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Having evidently lost its sense of direction during an intense bombardment by hunters on the south shore of the Fraser River estuary a hen pheasant flew into the business center of this city, shattered a window in the Pastime Club and fell dead on the paving below. The bird was quickly grabbed by a small boy.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Rosy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.—[Advertisement.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Rosy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which causes a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.—[Advertisement.

ROYAL POMP TO MARK WEDDING

Union of Leopold and Astrid Enthuses Sweden

Kings and Queens from Four Nations to Attend

Military Display Dominant Feature of Ceremony

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 31. (AP)—Scenes reminiscent of seventeenth century days when Sweden was a military power of the first magnitude and was twice its present size, will be enacted during this week's ceremonies surrounding the marriage of Prince Leopold, Crown Prince of Belgium, and Princess Astrid, niece of King Gustavus of Sweden.

There will be the clatter of cavalry, rattling sabers, the roar of field guns, the tread of infantry and the glitter of steel helmets as well as other pomp and splendor. No other European country in years has made such elaborate preparations for a brilliant wedding pageant, despite the fact that Socialism in one form or another is playing an important role in joining the golden threads of romance of two royal families.

ROYAL DISPLAY

The royal court has encouraged the idea of making a display of magnificence, without ostentation, of the ceremonies leading up to the celebration of the civil marriage of the royal pair on Thursday. In this the public has joined heartily, chiefly because it loves Princess Astrid and regards the match as one of love, pure and simple, which they admit has not always been the case in the betrothals of royal personages in different nations.

The Belgian King and Queen will find Stockholm awaiting them with open arms when they arrive on Tuesday morning. The city will be decorated throughout and the royal visitors will be greeted at the railroad station by King Gustavus, Queen Victoria and many of the highest dignitaries of the city and country.

King Christian of Denmark and King Haakon of Norway probably will arrive on the same day.

Two days of feasting, state receptions and grand performances of opera will follow.

PRINCESS LOVED

Princess Astrid is known throughout the land as a Princess in every sense of the word. What is more, she can cook pancakes, ham and eggs, make butter and prepare a meal fit for a king, and when she was studying domestic science she never even balked at washing dishes. Consequently, she is particularly endeared to all her countrywomen.

The wedding will take place in the throne room of the palace, which accommodates 1100 persons.

BELGIAN RULERS OFF FOR SON'S WEDDING

LAEKEN (Belgium) Oct. 31. (AP)—King Albert of Belgium and Queen Elizabeth last night left the royal station here, not far from their castle, aboard a special train on their way to Stockholm, where they will attend the civil wedding ceremony of their son, Prince Leopold, and Princess Astrid of Sweden.

YOUNG NAVAJO BRAVS IN TRIBAL FIRE DANCE

HOLBROOK (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The fire dance of the Navajo tribe has been held at Manuelito, eighty miles east of this point. It is staged only once in ten years for testing of young braves, who dance on live coals and within fires that are assumed to try their fortitude and endurance. There is understandings that the Indian Bureau has classed this dance as cruel and barbarous and that it probably will not be attempted after this year.

The court, noting a large diamond on her finger, reserved decision, after calling attention to the gem.

TRUTH ABOUT GLAND OPERATION KNOWN TO BUT COMPARATIVELY FEW PEOPLE

Although having performed more than 12,000 gland operations in the past four years at his Los Angeles and San Francisco offices, Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler, the internationally known endocrinologist, is authority for the statement that but a comparatively few of the general public have any knowledge of the ductless glands and gland therapy.

In his booklet, "The Prolongation of Human Efficiency," Dr. Wheeler has condensed in easily understood language the results of his research work and the astonishing success attending his simplified gland operations.

To take "old" men and women—prematurely or naturally so—and put elasticity in their step; fire in their eye; color in their cheek; strength and vitality in their body and giving them the "pep of youth," is but another way of saying that the life-span may be extended for many additional years.

Those desiring a copy of this highly interesting and valuable booklet may have it without cost by calling (mailed for 12c to cover cost of postage) and may consult Dr. Wheeler from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. TABBY RAISES BABY SQUIRRELS

Feline Loses Family But Gets Another of Strange Breed

NORDHEIM (Tex.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Though puzzled by their indifference to mice and unable to comprehend their inability to meow, a mother cat has been found nursing five young squirrels and apparently loving them, despite their peculiarities.

The cat belongs to Fred Bunkenhoefer of Nordheim.

It was not so long ago that "Tabby" had a family of her own, but the kittens met with an accident, when they got into a grass sack that was later found in the river.

Her mother heart almost broken, "Tabby" was pining away, until someone brought in five squirrels, bereft of father or mother by a cruel-hearted hunter. As soon as she saw the little furry creatures her interest in life is said to have revived.

She immediately took them for her own, and is raising them with the greatest of care.

COTTON PRICES CRISIS PASSING

Market Weathers Report of Bumper Crop

Plan to Loan $160,000,000 to Growers Launched

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) Oct. 31. (AP)—Brains and money of the South, summoned by a threat of economic disaster, are mobilizing forces of relief from Texas to North Carolina in an organized drive to meet the emergency in cotton prices and restore stability to the bale-burdened market.

Energetic determination had displaced cries of loud distress and business-like calm tonight succeeded the panicky fear of early October as machinery for financing retirement of the current surplus was being devised in every State of the American cotton belt.

Success for the South-wide campaign for guaranteed reduction of cotton acreage next year was predicted here as agricultural experts viewed the progress of the canvass for a complete census of the industry, with every farmer to be pledged curtail planting.

RESULTS APPARENT

Observers here, in the heart of the cotton-growing area, pointed optimistically to last week's activities in the trading exchanges as first fruits of the organization's relief measures. Under the smashing blow of the government's record-breaking crop estimate, the market trembled but did not collapse. On the final day, indeed, new buying strength appeared and prices made appreciable improvement. Experts see in the finance corporations now in process of formation in cotton States the most potent factor in the more hopeful attitude. Stimulated by the visit of Eugene Myer, chairman of President Coolidge's commission for relief, and A. C. Williams, chairman of the Federal Farm Loan Board, and Mr. Meyer's associate in the southern survey, bankers and marketing executives have undertaken to form these companies in order to make loans available to the growers.

Already these corporations are being organized in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Mississippi with a proposed combined capitalization of $16,000,000. This makes possible a loaning fund of $160,000,000 under the authority of the intermediate credit banks to lend to such companies at ten to one on their own resources.

OPTIMISTIC VIEWS

No campaign for reduction has ever been a failure, Dr. Tait Butler, head of the executive committee of the South-wide conference, declared in explaining his committee's optimistic view.

Another movement for removing part of the current crop surplus, started in Memphis but purporting to have support throughout the South, proposes the abandonment of cotton fields on December 1, and the plowing under of the unpicked remnant. Some 150,000 acres have been pledged to this plan, which in four days of activity, is already backed by a vigorous campaign.

Suffering from the depression in their markets incident to the low prices of cotton, cottonseed crushers of the country are also seeking means of bolstering the demand for cottonseed meal, cotton oil, hulls and linters.

Sundry movements here and there over the South are being agitated in behalf of increased consumption of the staple and its manufactured products. Women in some communities have sought to organize under the pledge to substitute cotton clothing and household goods for articles of silk and wool.

CROP NEWS WITHSTOOD BY MARKET

Government's Report of High Cotton Yield Fails to Cause Price Break

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The government's record-breaking crop estimate of 17,458,000 bales without linters issued last Monday morning, although 827,000 more than the previous report had made the crop promise to October 1, did not cause any surprising break in the market. The reason was the trade had been prepared for it nearly a week in advance by the circulation of private crop reports, which had ranged from as high as 17,396,000 bales to 17,480,000 bales. Moreover, there had been a liquidating market for so lo. a time, there was little speculative long interest in contracts left to the close of last week to be forced out.

The maximum decline in prices this big crop estimate caused the day it was issued was between 36 and 25 points for the general contract list here from the closing quotations of last Saturday, December selling down to 12.08c; January, 12.16c; March, 12.35c; May, 12.56c, and July, 12.75c. The reason why prices did not go any lower was trade interests had entered large orders to buy December to next July contracts on the scale down. There was also an active covering demand from shorts and a heavy amount of speculative buying orders issued as soon as the government report came out, on the belief the long decline in prices during the summer had fairly well discounted the effects of even such a great crop as nearly 18,000,000 bales.

The low prices mentioned above reached Monday on the government report were the lowest of this week. They had made new low records since February, 1922. The surprising thing has been the way the market rallied from those quotations, with the upturn extending to between 52 and 62 points on the general contract list, with the highest prices reached Thursday, December then selling at 12.86c; January, 12.62c; March, 12.96c; May, 13.14c, and July, 13.37½c. Closing prices Friday were only off 11 to 18 points from those quotations, the last being December 12.42c; January, 12.58c; March 12.73c; May, 12.97c, and July, 13.19c. Prices for middling cotton on the southern spot markets closed Friday around 13.30c a pound at Fort Worth, Dallas and Montgomery 11.25c, at Mobile, Augusta 11.75c, Little Rock and Savannah, 11.87½c, Norfolk, Memphis and New Orleans 12.12½@12.25c; Houston, 12.30c, and Galveston, 12.05c. Those prices are up about 30 points from the lowest quotations made last Monday. They compare with between 11c and 20c a pound at this time last year. Middling cotton on the New York market today is about 125c, against 20¼c a year ago.

Notwithstanding the general advice to planters and factors offered the last several weeks to market the crop conservatively, its movement continues on a heavy scale. This week's "into sight" figures are about 854,000 bales, against 919,000 last week, and about 950,000 the previous week, as contrasted with 763,000 this week last year.

The total amount of the crop brought into sight from August 1 to date now approximates 6,652,000 bales, against 6,756,000 last year. World's spinners takings for this week are 456,000 bales, against 454,000 last week and 472,000 last year, bringing their total from August 1 to date up to 2,842,000, against 2,697,000 the same time last year, with the export clearances from August 1 totaling 2,948,000 bales, against 2,786,000 last year.

Exports would be on a heavier scale, but for the record-breaking shipments of coal to Great Britain and European ports, the long British coal miners coal strike having absorbed a larger percentage than usual of ocean freight room in vessels.

Export buying of cotton has been on a heavy scale this week for clearance through November and December. The daily spot sales on the fifteen principal southern markets this week have ranged between 55,000 and 70,000 bales. Domestic spinners agents have also been accumulating spot cotton for shipments during the next two months.

IMPORTANT

I WANT EVERY THINKING AND PUBLIC SPIRITED CITIZEN WHO READS THE "TIMES" TO CONSIDER THIS ARTICLE CAREFULLY . . .

Every once in a while a merchant gets the idea that the only way to keep his stock moving is to feature cut prices or to apparently give you something for nothing. Every merchant is in business for the profit necessary to his continued existence. SO AM I. Cut prices are alright as such deals go, but the important thing for you gentlemen to consider is whether that merchant can actually produce his product at the advertised price—whether his equipment and resources permit an HONEST SLASHING OF PRICES—or whether he resorts to subterfuge and misrepresentation in his advertising copy merely to bring you into his shop. My advertising is supported full 100% by an institution organized on the basis of intelligent productive economies, with the resources of influence and success, and the equipment of the most modern and progressive. I take just a little more pride in my clean citizenship than to try to slip anything over on my customers. Every garment I produce is fully guaranteed in point of workmanship, fit and fabric; and when I offer a tailored suit of exceptionally fine and thoroughly reliable quality at $28—EQUAL TO ANY OFFERED ELSEWHERE AT $40 OR $45—I mean just that AND I CAN PROVE IT.

I own and operate the largest custom tailoring establishment in Southern California wherein every item of useless expense has been eliminated. The organization is so well trained and efficient, and the system under which we work has been so carefully studied and perfected, that there is absolutely no waste. These tremendous savings don't go into my pockets—all I want is a REASONABLE profit, and I get that through volume production—but they are passed directly on to you. The men I employ are well paid because they are the most competent available—they appreciate that I treat them as men, not as machines—and therefore do their work in a highly efficient manner, saving me production costs by their conscientious efforts and sincerity. My designers are artists—every one of them—who know how to develop style and individuality in the suit they cut for you, giving utmost care to the fit and the many other details necessary for your entire satisfaction. THESE ARE ONLY SOME OF THE REASONS WHY I CAN, AND DO, PRODUCE THE GREATEST VALUES EVER OFFERED BY ANY TAILORING CONCERN. My men take pride in their work, for pride is one of the greatest incentives in the execution of remarkable things. I encourage it, for it has the effect of continually challenging a man's best efforts. I don't say there are not other tailors just as good, but to get the equal to Parkerized suits elsewhere you will be charged $15 or $20 more. I occupy the entire second floor at the northwest corner of Fourth and Spring Streets—a big, bright and airy floor, with windows on all four sides and plenty of skylights above—where you can see my fabrics in broad daylight. True, I am in the low rent district, but conveniently located; and when you consider that my entire overhead cost is actually less than the bare rental of an average tailoring establishment, you will again realize and appreciate that your savings are honest and legitimate.

WALES'S HANDICAPS CITED

Prince's Whole Existence Earmarked and Daily Life Mere Program, Says Biographer

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—"H.R.H.," an authorized biography of the Prince of Wales by F. E. Verney, has been published. The career of the Prince from infancy to the present is reviewed with lyrical enthusiasm by the biographer, whose closing words are:

"Reviewing all I know of H.R.H. life, the Prince of Wales was treated as and all I have seen of him, I must say that there's a bigness about him, a spaciousness, which places him in a class by himself. I am inclined to think he is not only a very great gentleman, but that he is possibly the biggest thing we have got in our empire at present."

Instead of being in an enviable position, the Prince is a heavily handicapped young man, according to Mr. Verney, who says: "He was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth, but a curb bit.

LIVES ON PROGRAM

"With his whole existence earmarked and his daily life lived to program," says the biographer, "it is only natural that he should take a chance when he gets the opportunity and his 'chance' opportunities are practically confined to the hunting field and the polo ground.

"Yet, even in sport . . . destiny steped in and laid a sticky hand upon his shoulder. In 1924 a leading member of the House of Commons stated to a full house: 'This young man has, one day, to be King. The nation views with apprehension the manner in which he exposes himself to danger and trusts his royal father will exercise upon him an appropriate measure of restrain.'

"This pronouncement was accepted by the King and by the Prince as evidence of national concern, and consequently the Prince's activities as a horseman were curtailed. In his school life and his early naval as an ordinary young English boy, according to M. Verney. On the Prince's first voyage as a midshipman on the Hindustan he was violently berated by a lieutenant for being in a ward room where midshipmen are not admitted. The officer demanded his name and this conversation is quoted:

"WALES, SIR"

"'Wales, sir,' said he. 'The captain brought me in here. I hope you do not mind frightfully.'

"'What! You cheeky young devil; get out of this before I kick—' he paused and had a good look at the offender. 'Dammit! I believe you are Wales.'

"The Prince grinned apologetically. 'Sorry, sir, I believe I am too—but I can't help it.'"

The biographer denies that the Prince is overfond of dancing. Telling how the Prince had decided to be kind to a girl who was being neglected at a dance at Fort Elizabeth, the author relates this conversation:

H.R.H.: "Good evening, aren't you dancing tonight?"

The little girl, blushing: 'I haven't danced yet, sir. I know hardly any people here.'

"How is that?" asked the Prince. "Don't you live here?"

"No, sir. I belong to a touring company—theatrical."

"Really," exclaimed the Prince—for she did not look the part at all. "That's rather interesting. Have you been on the stage long?"

"Ever since I was 7 years of age," said the girl.

Don't Fuss With Mustard Plasters!

Don't mix a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

Musterole is made of pure oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, and takes the place of mustard plasters.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

At the first sign of a cold in the head take Musterole Cold Tablets. They usually give prompt relief.

ROYAL SHOWMAN

"I can sympathise with you," said the Prince, "for I'm on the stage, too, in a way. I've been a showman all my life. Will you have this dance with me?"

At the end of the dance, when the Prince left her, he said to her: "If it is any help to you in your job, you may have my permission in future to say that you are under the patronage of the Prince of Wales."

"For genuine kindness, real understanding and helpful sympathy, I think this incident is hard to beat," the biographer says.

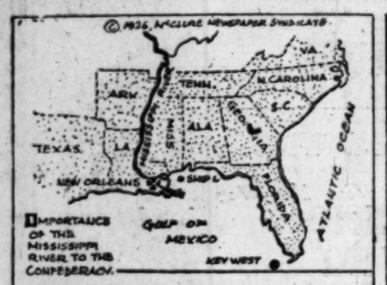
The Campaign Against New Orleans.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD



THE POSSESSION OF THE LOWER MISSISSIPPI AT THE BEGINNING OF THE CIVIL WAR WAS A TREMENDOUS ADVANTAGE TO THE SOUTHERN STATES. ABRAHAM LINCOLN CALLED THE MISSISSIPPI THE "BACKBONE OF THE CONFEDERACY."

DURING THE FIRST YEAR OF FIGHTING, THE FEDERAL LEADERS IN WASHINGTON PLANNED A CAMPAIGN TO BREAK THAT "BACKBONE". ONE EXPEDITION WAS TO COME DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI FROM THE OHIO, WHILE ANOTHER WAS TO CAPTURE NEW ORLEANS AND FORCE ITS WAY UP THE RIVER AND THUS RESTORE THE ENTIRE VALLEY TO THE UNION.

DAVID GLASGOW FARRAGUT.

CAPT. D. G. FARRAGUT, WHO HAD BEGUN HIS NAVAL CAREER AT THE AGE OF TEN AS A MIDSHIPMAN ABOARD THE FAMOUS "ESSEX" DURING THE WAR OF 1812, WAS CHOSEN TO LEAD THE NAVAL EXPEDITION AGAINST NEW ORLEANS AND ASSIGNED TO COMMAND THE WEST GULF BLOCKADING SQUADRON.

FARRAGUT'S ORDERS WERE TO TAKE AS MANY VESSELS AS COULD BE SPARED FROM BLOCKADE DUTY AND, CO-OPERATING WITH A FLEET OF MORTAR SCHOONERS UNDER COMMANDER DAVID PORTER, REDUCE THE CONFEDERATE FORTS BELOW NEW ORLEANS, SEIZE THE CITY AND HOLD IT UNTIL TROOPS COULD BE SENT TO ASSIST HIM.

COMMUNIST CHIEFS HAIL NEW ACCORD

Leaders in Opposition of Workers Recant on "Evils of Factional Work"

MOSCOW, Oct. 31. (AP)—Former Premier Medvedieff of the Revolutionary government in Vladivostok and Alexander Shliapnikoff, former Bolshevik Commissar of Labor, who since 1920 have been leaders in the workers' opposition within the Communist party, have followed the example of Trotzky and Zinovieff and signed a sweeping recantation expressing penitance for "the evils of their factional work."

The Communist majority now declares that all opposition has been eliminated It is noted, however, that neither Trotzky, Zinovieff, Kameneff, nor any other member of the left wing has renounced his principles or theories, but only the means chosen to propagate them This fact and their strange silence at the Communist party conference now in session at the Kremlin raise misgivings among the Communist leaders, as nobody knows what will be their next move.

With New York Playing Ping Pong, Next in Order is News of Recrudescence of Bustles, Puffs and Rainy Daisy Skirts in Metropolis

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (AP) — Ping pong, gentle sports of the gay '90s, is the latest popular revival.

This indoor sport of the days when the man-about-town played in a club blazer and his fair partner wore, according to the book of rules, "a short skirt, clearing the ground all the way around with no train," follows archery and croquet along the path of the comebacks.

Country clubs, tennis clubs, trans Atlantic liners and private homes are installing the slippery topped green tables and their dainty nets, midget rackets and celluloid balls.

This season sport dealers say they have sold more than in any two seasons previously and if the present demand increases in proportion with the coming, in a week or so, of the true "ping pong season"—for it is a real "indoor sport"—they say that the game will reach its zenith this year, even surpassing the height of its popularity a quarter of a century ago.

Contemplate Erection of Large Lumber Mill

Company Imports Timber From Philippines

LONG BEACH, Oct. 31.—Another step forward in the development of Long Beach Harbor is seen in the announcement made here today by R. W. Cadwallader, president of the Cadwallader-Gibson Company, importers of Philippine hardwoods, of a series of new wharves and docks fronting the company's property on Channel No. 3. Actual construction work is to begin January 2, next, and will cost approximately $30,000, it was said.

Two months will be devoted to the work and when it is completed the company will handle all its imports of lumber over its own docks, instead of over the municipal docks on the opposite side of the channel. Plans for next year include the expenditure of $1,000,000 "in the construction of a hardwood manufacturing mill on its present property holdings.

The Cadwallader-Gibson Company is now importing three shiploads of a total of approximately 1,500,000 feet of mahogany from the Island of Luzon to its Long Beach plant each month. The company owns vast forests and large mills in the Philippines and in addition has large timber interests in the Northwest. With the completion of the new wharves here lumber shipments to Long Beach will be increased considerably, it is said.

For several months, or since the company acquired a lease, on option of purchase on five and a half acres of industrial property from the Craig Shipbuilding Company, it has been storing the imported hardwoods in its yards there, pending the construction of the big mill it proposes to operate in the harbor district. Although the date on which actual construction work is to begin has not been set, it will be some time in 1927, Mr. Cadwallader said. The mill will give employment to about 150 men. Present plans of the company include the making of its long Beach property the tidewater distribution point for its shipments. These will be handled by ship to other points along the Pacific Coast and later by rail to a wide territory throughout the West, it is said.

The company is at present using United States Shipping Board bottoms under lease to Swayne & Hoyt of San Francisco, but an agreement with the Dollar Steamship Company for handling cargoes from the Philippines to Long Beach when the Dollar interests begin operations in Long Beach Harbor is to become effective later.

Company Spends Large Fortune for Expansion

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 31.—The spread of cultivation to new areas and the rapid growth of industrial projects in the southern portion of the San Joaquin Valley were large determining factors in the expenditure by the San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation of more than $4,000,000 this year in the most extensive program for expansion of service facilities ever outlined by the power company, according to a statement issued by A. Emery Wishon, vice-president and general manager, announcing the recent completion of this construction program.

Eight new substations, improvements on many existing stations, 160 miles of transmission lines and 59 miles of distribution lines constructed since January 1, 1926, stand as evidence of the growth and progress of the territory served by San Joaquin power.

In the southern portion of the valley the extension of lands under cultivation and the general growth of the territory have been phenomenal. In much of this territory the grower depends on electrically driven pumps for irrigation. At Rio Bravo a substation was constructed to share the task of serving an agricultural vicinity that previously had been dependent on power service from three distant substations.

Extending the San Joaquin power lines farther south than they have ever reached before, a line was built to Tejon, thirty miles south of Bakersfield, where a new substation was built to enable the company to serve the Wheeler Ridge oil fields, new agricultural lands, and consumers south as far as Lebec Lodge.

TO RESUME HIKES

Pasadena's Old Man of the Hills Back to Favorite Haunts

PASADENA, Oct. 31.—F. C. Bradley octogenarian hiker, has just returned to his Pasadena home and is laying plans for a resumption of his hiking activities, which lead him up and down mountains and over long woodland trails that belie his eighty-one years.

Despite his age, a walk up Mt. Wilson means no more to Bradley than a walk around the block does to the average person. In the last few years, since he has been living in Pasadena, he has tramped up Mt. Wilson and down again sixty-one times.

He spent the summer and early fall at Pine Orchard, Ct., doing considerable hiking. He gives the long daily walks the credit for his excellent health.

NEW CITY ATTORNEY

SAN GABRIEL, Oct. 30.—H. S. Farrell, will become City Attorney of San Gabriel on November 1, succeeding Glen Eley, who has resigned because of poor health. The City Trustees announced the appointment of Farrell today. Eley has been in the position for the past two and a half years.

This will be Farrell's second appearance in the office, as he was City Attorney for San Gabriel prior to Eley's appointment. Farrell is also police judge of Alhambra.

NEWS OF SOUTHERN COUNTIES

LUMBER FIRM BUILDS DOCKS

Add to Facilities of Long Beach Harbor

Contemplate Erection of Large Lumber Mill

Company Imports Timber From Philippines

LONG BEACH, Oct. 31.—Another step forward in the development of Long Beach Harbor is seen in the announcement made here today by R. W. Cadwallader, president of the Cadwallader-Gibson Company, importers of Philippine hardwoods, of a series of new wharves and docks fronting the company's property on Channel No. 3. Actual construction work is to begin January 2, next, and will cost approximately $30,000, it was said.

Two months will be devoted to the work and when it is completed the company will handle all its imports of lumber over its own docks, instead of over the municipal docks on the opposite side of the channel. Plans for next year include the expenditure of $1,000,000 in the construction of a hardwood manufacturing mill on its present property holdings.

The Cadwallader-Gibson Company is now importing three shiploads or a total of approximately 1,500,000 feet of mahogany from the island of Luzon to its Long Beach plant each month. The company owns vast forests and large mills in the Philippines and in addition has large timber interests in the Northwest. With the completion of the new wharves here lumber shipments to Long Beach will be increased considerably, it is said.

For several months, or since the company acquired a lease, on option of purchase on five and a half acres of industrial property from the Craig Shipbuilding Company, it has been storing the imported hardwoods in its yards there, pending the completion of the big mill it proposes to operate in the harbor district. Although the date on which actual construction work is to begin has not been set, it will be some time in 1927, Mr. Cadwallader said. The mill will give employment to about 150 men. Present plans of the company include the making of its long beach property the tidewater distribution point for its shipments. These will be handled by ship to other points along the Pacific Coast and later by rail to a wide territory throughout the West, it is said.

The company is at present using United States Shipping Board bottoms under lease to Swayne & Hoyt of San Francisco, but an agreement with the Dollar Steamship Company for handling cargoes from the Philippines to Long Beach when the Dollar interests begin operations in Long Beach Harbor is to become effective later.

LOOK OUT FOR LEFT-HAND TURNS

Other Minor Infractions of the Traffic Laws Are Liable to Cause Trouble to the Stranger Who Visits Fresno When Motor Officers Hold Meeting

FRESNO, Oct. 31.—Traffic officers from all sections of the State will meet in Fresno November 18 to 20, inclusive, for the first annual convention of the recently organized California State Traffic Association, it was announced here yesterday.

Preparations for entertaining 400 traffic officers are being made by Capt. J. P. Murphy of the Fresno police department, who is vice-president of the association and in charge of arrangements, and is now organizing a committee to assist in planning for the gathering.

The principal objective of the convention will be to work out plans for uniformity of traffic regulations which are susceptible of State coordination, and the promulgation of plans for State-wide parking, and traffic regulations, according to Supervisor Charles L. Todd of San Francisco, who is president of the association.

Capt. Murphy has been advised that Chicago, Portland, Seattle and several other large cities of the nation are sending delegates to the convention.

START PROPOSED HIGHWAY

State Approves Project Through Ventura, Kern and Santa Barabara Counties

VENTURA, Oct. 31.—The official stamp of approval by the State of California on the formation of a permanent tri-county road district for the construction of the long contemplated Maricopa road was made when the State Highway Commission appropriated $50,000 State aid to the joint highway district for the road. This was the brief message received here yesterday from J. I. Wagy of Bakersfield, member of the Tri-county Highway District Board of Directors and chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Kern county, who went before the State Highway Commission as a special delegate from the Tri-county Highway Board with a request for aid from the State.

The tri-county district board of directors, composed of Chairman T. G. Gabbert, of Ventura county; Supervisor Sam Stanwood of Santa Barbara county, and Supervisor J. I. Wagy of Kern county, in a special meeting here Wednesday appointed Mr. Wagy as a special representative of the district board to ask for the money. He went, armed with a resolution passed by the board of directors which was a recital of the history of the joint highway district.

Now that the State has given what is hoped will be just a part of what it will give in the future as financial aid in the construction of the road, the next step of the joint highway district board of directors, is to apply to the Federal government Bureau of Public Roads and the Forestry Service for funds to help put across the undertaking which is to cost approximately $1,200,000.

The government, it is understood, already has recognized the importance of the road in a military way, and it is expected that no trouble will be experienced in obtaining Federal aid. T. C. Gabbert, chairman of the tri-county board, said today: "The next thing to be done is for the counties to elect a board of directors for the permanent road body as required by law. When that is done the board, with the State's money, will have actual construction work started on the highway."

It was understood today from reliable sources that construction work on the road can be started within sixty days by reason of the fact that the $50,000 appropriated by the State is available immediately.

EVERYBODY HAS PLENTY OF MONEY

Speaker Says California Folk Have More to Spend Than Easterners

INGLEWOOD, Oct. 31.—Business men of Southern California are much more fortunate than those of any other part of the country. The average income of the families in this favored section is 60 per cent higher than the average of the rest of the country, and of this income the retail merchant gets a 63 per cent share. These figur s were quoted at the annual banquet of the Inglewood-to-Redondo Beach Credit Association by L. M. Crosthwaite, credit man for Barker Brothers.

Los Angeles is favored further, according to this speaker, as it has the highest percentage of outstanding bills paid up monthly than any other large city in the country, some 60 per cent, or much above the average, which approximates only 50 per cent.

Mr. Crosthwaite also pointed out the present-day tendency toward a credit business, declaring that concerns that still believe that volume of business can be maintained or increased on a cash basis only will find they will have to revise their opinion. He told of one of the largest cash stores in Los Angeles that has recently adopted the credit plan.

"Installment buying," said Mr. Crosthwaite further, "is an improvement over the old system of overfinancing the producer and the manufacturer, and makes provision for financing the ultimate consumer. This makes possible," the speaker declared, "what has hitherto been an impossibility—increasing prosperity on a falling commodity market."

Incorporation Up to Voters of Placentia

SANTA ANA, Oct. 31.—Placentia residents will have an opportunity to vote next November 23, on the question of incorporating their city. The County Board of Supervisors has fixed that date for the election after accepting a petition filed by proponents of the incorporation movement. An earnest protest against incorporation, voiced by P. H. Krick, developed a heated debate between Krick and friends of the movement led by Thomas Pickerell, secretary of the Placentia Chamber of Commerce.

Pickerell reviewed the advantages that he says incorporation would bring while Krick was inclined to the view that the city already had many advantages that it would not have if incorporated. Krick also objected to the wording of the petition on technical grounds.

Supervisor William Schumacher finally broke into the debate with a motion that the petition be accepted and the election date fixed.

BELL'S JUST RIGHT

BELL, Oct. 30.—A tour of several weeks in several parts of the Northwest and then along the Pacific Coast, have brought Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Swanson, formerly of Sioux City, Iowa, to Bell, and here they have decided to stay. With their three children they left the Iowa city during the summer and have been touring in their automobile, going westward, finally arriving in Seattle several weeks ago. After a few days there they started down the Coast and finally reached this community, where they have since rented a house, and now are sending their children to school, with the remark that this is to become their permanent home.

Another family that has also arrived here during the last few days is Mr. and Mrs. Maro Heimerdinger and children of Omaha. They are here to make their permanent home.

FALL MAY BE FATAL

POMONA, Oct. 30.—As a result of a fall from the curbing while watering the garden at his home, 439 East Holt avenue, yesterday, Nathan E. Strong, aged 94, is in a serious condition. In the fall he struck his head on the curb and has been sinking rapidly throughout the day. Due to his advanced age, his physician, Dr. Newcomer, announced that his recovery seemed improbable. Mr Strong has been a resident of Pomona for more than twenty years, at one time being a prominent real estate dealer here.

New Charter to Provide Money for Advertising

LONG BEACH, Oct. 31.—Future nation-wide advertising of the city of Long Beach, and the spreading of its fame as a resort city, an industrial town and a health center, will be paid for by the taxpayers if present plans of the Board of Freeholders, now engaged in revising the City Charter, are adopted by the voters.

A tax levy of not less than 2½ cents and not more than 5 cents per $100 of property valuation is provided for in the new, but highly tentative, City Charter, the money to be used in advertising appropriations that will extol the virtues of Long Beach and sing its praises to the eastern world.

The tax levy provision in the proposed charter is being urged by Clifford Holz, one of this city's large army of real estate dealers, who points out that remarkable results have been obtained in Florida from community advertising campaigns. Cities with attractions and advantages inferior to those of Long Beach have achieved growth and prosperity by systematic advertising, it is pointed out.

The Board of Free-holders has voted favorably to include the proposition in the charter and has asked the City Council for an extension of thirty days beyond the stipulated time for completion of its charter revision work. This will give the board until the Christmas holidays to finish its work, begun several months ago. The Council has voted to allow the board $1000 with which to employ Prof. Samuel May of the University of California as consultant in drafting the charter.

TO APPROVE ASSESSMENT

PASADENA, Oct 31.—The Board of City Directors is expected to approve a modified assessment measure for the widening of Broadway between Green and Holly streets when it meets Tuesday The project will relieve much congestion in the center of the downtown district and has been aided by the voluntary granting of the city of property along its right of way by the Santa Fe Railroad

MEET BY CHANCE

MONROVIA, Oct. 31.—A chance call at the home of Dr. Frank McCann here by Dr. Chester Taylor of Glendale, and Dr. E. Hamer of Carson City, Nev., yesterday reunited three school chums who had not heard of each other for twenty years. They were classmates at the Kentucky School of Medicine.

KIWANIS NOMINATE

MONROVIA, Oct. 31.—The Kiwanis Club yesterday nominated fourteen candidates for directors, from which seven will be chosen on the 11th inst. The candidates are W. F. Krumm, M. H. Sanborn, Frank Black, Reeve Hobbie, Scott Gleeten, Homer Mead, Walter Dunn, Harry Fredericks, S. J. Hathaway, A. B. Watson, P. J. Ronan, Herrick Slick, Joseph Waterbury and W. H. Reynolds.

NOTED ORGANIST IN RECITAL

Versatile Artist to Play at Pomona

Joseph W. Clokey

POMONA COLLEGE (Claremont) Oct. 3.—Joseph W. Clokey who will present his first Southern California public concert in Bridges Hall of Music Monday evening at 7:15 is one of the most productive of young American artists. He has published with four different nationally known companies seven successful choral works, four operas including the "Pied Piper of Hamelin" and the "Nightingale," several organ compositions, six-part songs for women's voices, four-part songs for men's voices and six-part songs for mixed voices.

His Monday evening concert will feature a program of modern compositions. A suite of three numbers is his own composition. As an organist and composer Prof. Clokey enjoys a national reputation.

CROP OF ORANGES SMALLER

Warm Weather Brings Date of First Shipments Earlier Than Usual

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 31.—San Bernardino county's orange crop may fall slightly below last year's mark, according to County Horticultural Commissioner John P. Coy, after a conference with inspectors of all districts of the valley, in which one-third of the nation's citrus fruit crop is grown.

"It is too early to accurately predict the size of the crop," said Mr. Coy, "but it appears that the yield may be below that of last year, although this largely depends upon how the fruit sizes up in the last few weeks of the year."

Shipments from scattered districts may begin within the next three weeks—in time to place California's oranges on the eastern markets by Thanksgiving Day. The warm weather of the past two weeks has ripened the oranges rapidly and heavy shipments for the Christmas trade are forecast. If the warm weather continues, the shipments before January may set a new mark.

Horticultural inspectors met in Mr. Coy's office today and submitted crop reports for the 1926 orange year. The reports will be compiled and announced on the 1st inst., Mr. Coy said.

QUIET HALLOWEEN

One Accident Mars Pleasure of Holiday at Beach

VENICE, Oct. 31.—An accident to Motorcycle Officer Gus Heer of the Venice police division was the only Halloween casualty of any consequence reported by Bay district police stations. Heer suffered a badly injured leg at Walnut avenue and Venice Boulevard in the early hours of dawn this morning while directing the late merrymaker traffic.

Caught between two lines of traffic, he was thrown against a curb He was taken to his home.

At the Venice station only twenty-five arrests were made among the thousands of revelers who thronged the piers. At Santa Monica four revelers used too much liquid in their festivities. At Sawtelle a very quiet night was reported. At Santa Monica a rumor among small boys that a forty-eight-hour jail sentence awaited any lad caught in malicious mischief, is said to have prompted many of the younger social generation to attend Halloween parties instead of gathering in the familiar street gangs of yore.

FIRST VEGETABLES

Imperial Valley Ranch Sends Car to Chicago

EL CENTRO, Oct. 31.—The Imperial Valley's first carload of winter vegetables was shipped from Brawley yesterday by S. J. Gallagher, consigned to Chicago. The shipment consisted of a mixed lot, mostly cucumbers and peas, with a number of other products in a smaller volume.

Other shipments are to follow within the course of the next few days, it was announced.

Exuerments conductedin the Imperial Valley during the past several months by Dr. Milbraith, plant pathologist, has definitely disclosed that a remedy for mildew, which caused such a great loss in the cantaloupe fields last spring, has been found, and that it will be a matter of only a short time until the method will be actually demonstrated in the growing fields and explained to the growers. The announcement of the discovery of the mildew preventative was made public at the monthly meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce at Calipatria last night.

QUIETEST HALLOWEEN THAT WE'VE EVER SEEN

PASADENA, Oct. 31.—"The quietest Halloween we've ever seen" was the verdict of Pasadena police today as they locked over the records of last night's local merrymaking. The doorbells had a little more exercise than usual, a few motorists found their tires without air, now and then a street car ran over a torpedo and a half-dozen thirsty souls ended a convivial celebration in the City Jail but no serious disturbances occurred here.

CITY TO BALLOT ON STREET IMPROVEMENT

HUNTINGTON PARK, Oct. 31.—One of the most interesting elections to be held in Huntington Park is that which is scheduled for November 16, when an election will be held in a municipal improvement district, which, if carried, will mean the improvement of Pacific Boulevard between Slauson avenue and Florence avenue, with both paving and ornamental lights.

The present paving on the boulevard is to be replaced, this being one of the widest boulevards in Southern California, being 120 feet from property line to property line. The lights are to be removed from the center of the street, and placed on the curbing, and all the street-car trolley poles are also to be placed at the curbing. The rise in the center of the street is to be lowered and the Los Angeles Street Railway Company will make improvements, their line running through the center of the boulevard.

The bond issue is for the sum of $225,000.

STUDENTS VOTE ON CHAPEL PROBLEM

CLAREMONT, Oct. 31.—After weeks of discussion of voluntary and compulsory chapel and related problemsat Pomona College by students, faculty and alumni, a student-faculty vote was taken yesterday, with the students recommending a change from the present system of four chapels a week and suggesting further consideration of the present chapel regime by the faculty and administration.

The largest vote in the history of the college was polled on the problem, on which a difference of opinion has existed in practically all of the colleges and universities of the country. Concerning the nature of chapel services the students favored in the following order, one chapel devoted to outside speakers, devotional services, music services, general discussions and student discussions. In regard to the extension of the voluntary system in all classes the students recommended further discussion on the principle by a vote of 564 for and 105 against.

CLOSE CANYON ROAD

MONROVIA, Oct. 31.—Monrovia Canyon, one of the popular foothill recreation spots, has been closed to the public, except on Sunday. City Trustees took this action after it was pointed out that travel of gravel trucks to and from the county flood-control damsite constituted a serious menace to traffic on the narrow canyon road.

Large Sum for Y.M.C.A. Work in Alhambra

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 31.—A campaign to raise $8000 for the Alhambra district Y.M.C.A. will close Monday, with every indication of the success of the effort. Up to today the drive has netted pledges totaling over $7000. All workers will meet Monday night for final reports.

The campaign committee is headed by Rev. Kelley O'Neall, pastor of the First Christian Church. Team leaders are B. N. Marriott, W. E. Miller and E. S. Kellogg.

The Y.M.C.A. has leased a building at Chapel and Main streets formerly part of the old First Methodist Church plant. During the coming year a larger program will be carried on for the boys and young men of this district. Heretofore the organization has occupied only offices. With the larger headquarters there will be gymnasium and other activities. An outdoor athletic field will also be equipped.

Survey Shows Mail Increase in Glendale

GLENDALE, Oct. 31.—Surveys that have just been completed here, covering the past three months, show that the volume of mail handled by the Glendale postoffice during that period has increased 28 per cent in volume and 42 per cent in weight over the previous three months, Postmaster O. Ripley Jackson reported today. The survey was made at the request of John H. Bartlett, first Assistant Postmaster-General.

The parcel-post delivery in the city also showed an increase of 30 per cent during the three months covered by the survey.

The congestion that is steadily increasing in the local postoffice will be relieved to a certain extent by the opening of the new station at Brand Boulevard and Fairview street, but the growth of the mail service in the city is so rapid that it is considered ample justification for pressing the request that has been made to Washington for a Federal building in Glendale.

HOG PRICES SHOW DROP AT AUCTIONS

HANFORD, Oct. 31.—Hog auctions conducted the past week by the California Farm Bureau Marketing Association in the San Joaquin Valley at Fresno, Tulare, Visalia and Hanford, show a slight drop in prices, the top price for the week being $13.87½ per hundred weight at the Fresno sale. For the week 806 hogs by eighty-seven consigners sold for $23,127 and $653 worth of butcher stock cows, bulls and calves were sold. Prices for hogs, feeders and fat stock, have been good the entire year, ranging in round numbers from 14 cents to 16 per pound; the recent slight drops in prices are reasonable, in fact they came late this year and are expected to continue till after the holidays.

BURGLARS REAP REWARD

PASADENA, Oct. 30.—Several hundred dollars worth of silver currency, checks and wearing apparel were stolen by burglars last night from the homes of G. S. Lytle, 145 South Huntington drive, and William G Close, 1594 Channing Way, according to reports made to the local police today. The burglaries were committed in different parts of the city but police believe the same criminals are responsible in each case.

COME FROM FAR AND NEAR

Automobiles From Twenty-six States Wend Their Way For Out-of-the-Season Visit to Giant Forest in Sequoia National Park

GIANT FOREST (Sequoia National Park,) Oct. 31.—That motorists realize the Big Tree National Park is open the year around is proven by travel to Sequoia during October. Of the 900 cars and 3111 visitors who have visited Sequoia the following States have been represented: Arizona, Colorado, North Dakota, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, Idaho, New Jersey, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, New York, Texas, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming and Nevada.

Dining room service was discontinued at the Giant Forest Lodge this past Tuesday, but overnight accommodations may be secured at the lodge and emergency meals at the government mess until the construction crews, busy with road work, move out. Later overnight accommodations may be secured in ranger cabins and supplies may be purchased but visitors must do their own cooking.

Beauty of Giant Forest in its autumn coloring is most appealing and each year more persons are found making the trip here either in the fall or winter. In fact many enjoy it even more than in the summer.

Travel to General Grant National Park also continues heavy with roads and camp grounds open and conditions almost like summer.

DECIDE VITAL QUESTION

Pasadena Voters Called Upon to Determine Future Form of City Government

PASADENA, Oct. 31.—Pasadenans will visit the polls Tuesday to decide the most important municipal question that has ever come before local voters, in determining whether the city will retain the present form of City Manager government, strengthen it, or change to one of two schemes for a Mayor and Council government which appear on the ballot.

Proposition No. 1 provides for the nomination of City Directors from each of seven districts and their election by the city as a whole. Under this plan, the present Board of Directors would be replaced in its entirety by an election next spring.

Proposition No. 2 provides for the election of a Mayor at large and seven councilmen by wards, with other municipal offices as appointive positions, similar to the present system.

Proposition No. 3 calls for the election of a Mayor at large, nine Councilmen by wards and other officials such as City Clerk, City Treasurer and City Tax Collector at large.

If all three propositions should be defeated, the present Board of Directors and City Manager will be retained. This is generally considered a remote possibility, not so much because of dissatisfaction with the form of government as because of the present state of internal strife among the members of the Board of Directors. To "clean house" at the City Hall and take a fresh start with a new personnel is the desire of all factions.

According to general opinion, the main fight lies between Propositions Nos. 1 and 2, each backed up a strong group of active supporters. William Thum, former Mayor of the city, heads the Modern Government league which is now opposing the Mayor and Council plans and supporting the strengthened form of City Manager rule provided by Proposition No. 1.

At the present heated stage of the campaign, personalities and recriminations are being bandied freely and a determined effort to bring out a record vote is being made by all groups.

Last week the Voters' Municipal League and the Citizens' Union League, supporting Propositions Nos. 2 and 3, respectively, met in an attempt to throw their combined support to one of the two Mayor and Council measures, but each group stood pat and the attempt failed.

Another faction, called the Harmony Club, advocates the defeat of all three proposals, to be followed by a "general charter revision."

In addition to the governmental propositions named, proposals to increase the salaries of the local police and fire departments appear on the ballots. Both departments have conducted active campaigns and are confident of success.

Pre-election demonstrations will reach a climax tomorrow night in a big "Get Out the Vote" parade to be staged by the American Legion.

CELEBRATE OPENING OF NEW ROAD

Kern County Highway to be First Unit Leading to Mt. Whitney

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 31. — Kern county's most beautiful highway leading up Kern River Canyon to Kernville and forming the first unit of a road to Mt. Whitney, will be opened during the latter part of November and Sunday, November 21, a big barbecue and celebration will be given at Kernville, at which time the new highway will be officially opened and dedicated.

Upon a request from Supervisor J. B. McFarland, directors of the Bakersfield Civic Commercial Association, have agreed to take charge of the celebration and make arrangements for entertainment. Efforts will be made to secure the services of the Bakersfield High School Band, speakers will be provided by the association and invitations to the celebration will be sent to Gov. Richardson, highway commissioners and high officials throughout the State. The Civic Commercial Association will seek the co-operation of every service unit in the city, in making the celebration a success.

According to a communication from Supervisor McFarland to the association, Kernville, Onyx and Bodfish will join in preparing and furnishing a big free barbecue to be served at noon, to an anticipated crowd of thousands. The road from Democrat Hot Springs to Bodfish the intervening gap between Bakersfield and Kernville, along the picturesque Kern River Canyon, is rapidly nearing completion and will be in first-class order in time for the opening celebration.

DEDICATE AIRPORT

Giant Monoplane Takes Part in Bakersfield Celebration

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 31.—Floyd Bennett, flying the huge monoplane in which he and Commander Richard E. Byrd flew over the north pole, will arrive at Bakersfield airport shortly before noon next Friday.

The plane "Josephine Ford" will stop here two hours, and its arrival will be the signal for the dedication of the local airport with a celebration which is being planned by the Kern County Airport Committee and local chapter of the National Aeronautic Association.

Announcement of the date of the big plane's arrival was made here yesterday by Milburn Kusterer, itinerary agent for the north pole ship's Pacific Coast tour. Mr. Kusterer was guest of Howard Nichols, president of the Airport Committee, at a public luncheon given today in Hotel El Tejon to make final plans for the plane's reception.

Commander Byrd's plane is being brought to Bakersfield through the courtesy of the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for Promotion of Civilian Aeronautics and with the co-operation of the United States Department of Commerce.

COMMERCE CHAMBER SHOWS CITY'S GROWTH

BALBOA, Oct. 31.—The growth of this community during the past few years has been phenomenal, according to figures secured today from the Balboa Chamber of Commerce. The civic organization was formed in 1919 with A. B. Rousselle, now of Santa Ana, president. The organization boasted thirteen members at that time.

Despite the unlucky number with which the organization started it has grown until now the chamber has a membership of 210. Only a few of the original members remain in Balboa, but those who are still there belong to the organization today.

Among the charter members of the civic body were F. J. Knight, Harry Burns, A. B. Rousselle, Joseph Ferguson, Clarence Alves, William Elkins, S. R. Jumper, George Nolan, S. H. Goodykoontz, Daniel Sullivan, John Schilling, O. M. Brown and W. L. Jordan.

TO SAVE LAND MARK

POMONA, Oct. 30. — Launching a vigorous campaign to preserve the old Palomares adobe house on Cucamonga avenue here, from destruction at the hands of ambitious real estate promoters, the Valley Beautiful Club met in special session at the local Y.M.C.A. last night and formulated a resolution to be presented to the citizens of Pomona in which an appeal was made for action to preserve the old landmark for future generations.

SEE FINISH OF WATER FIGHT

State Department to Hand in Decision Soon

Pasadena Battles to Prevent Dam Project

Federal Government Against Crown City

PASADENA, Oct. 31.—The decision of the State Division of Water Rights which is expected finally to settle the authenticity of Pasadena's water claims in the San Gabriel Canyon is being eagerly awaited by local officials, and is expected to be handed down early next month.

Pasadena has contended that it is entitled to 65,000 acre feet of excess storm waters coming from the canyon, and on this basis has attempted by all legal means to block the Los Angeles county flood-control dam project in the canyon until the question of this city's rights is definitely adjudicated.

This course has been followed despite the fact that after hearings in Washington, D. C., Secretaries Work and Jardine overruled the Pasadena objections to the immediate start to the county project and authorized the Los Angeles flood-control district to go ahead.

It is admitted here, however, that the State Division of Water Rights' decision is the city's last straw. If it should give Pasadena any grounds for such action, it is expected that the city will attempt to enjoin the county's dam project until Pasadena is assured of receiving water for domestic use from the San Gabriel Canyon.

In previous controversies, the county has offered to impound the desired amount of water for Pasadena behind its dam, but has held that the control of the dam gates must be vested in the flood-control district. Pasadena's representatives on the other hand have demanded absolute control of the hypothetical 65,000 acre feet of water. At the present time, certain of the members of the Board of City Directors would consent to allow the control to be placed in the hands of the State Division of Water Rights.

Pasadena's present case, rests, however, with the decision of the State Division of Water Rights.

FULL DAY NEEDED TO CAST ALHAMBRA VOTE

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 31.—In addition to the State, Congressional and other offices to be decided at Tuesday's election, and the various State and county propositions, Alhambra voters will cast their ballots on the eighteen proposed city charter amendments.

One of these questions is to decide whether the police and firemen shall be placed under civil service. Members of the two departments favor the change. Another proposition which is creating considerable local interest is the amendment to make the City Attorney and City Treasurer appointive offices instead of elective. Another amendment would raise the tax levy from $1 to $1.10.

Several months ago the city commission appointed a charter revision committee to study the city charter and to suggest changes that might seem desirable. The present proposed amendments are, in part, the result of the report of this committee.

There has been, on the whole, little interest displayed in the amendments and no active campaign, either for or against them, has been carried on.

WANTS PAY FOR LEG

Hanford Man Refuses to be Ruled Out of Court

HANFORD, Oct. 31.—Probably the most persistent litigant this county of Kings has ever had is A. P. Gordon, who is suing Sheriff W. J. Hime and several of his deputies for $50,000 damages. He is endeavoring to get into court in the action, the damages being demanded for a lost leg, amputation having been necessary due to a gunshot wound inflicted by a member of the posse when Gordon was running amuck with weapons and terrorizing the countryside in the Mussel Slough district three years ago.

Gordon's fifth amended complaint comes up for hearing next Monday and is worded substantially the same as four other complaints which preceded it and which were ruled against. Judge Van Zante has intimated that the plaintiff will have to show more cause for action than he has or he will rule the suit out of court.

COLLEGE ALUMNI TO HOLD BANQUET

MONROVIA, Oct. 31.—The San Gabriel Valley Trojan Club will hold a banquet here Wednesday night at the Aztec Hotel, it was announced today by William H. Feeler, Monrovia high school instructor and president of the club.

Motion pictures of the Trojan football team in action and other activities of the University of Southern California campus will be shown following a 6.30 dinner.

A university orchestra will furnish music; Burdette Henney, U.S.C. yell leader, will direct the diners in songs and yells; and an address will be given by a faculty member.

The club comprises 250 U.S.C. alumni in Monrovia, Arcadia, Azusa, Covina, El Monte, Glendora, Sierra Madre and Alhambra.

GOODFELLOWS GET TOGETHER

ARCADIA, Oct. 31.—The Goodfellows Club, a new business men's luncheon organization, was organized here yesterday, with H. E. Harwood, druggist, as president, and W. C. Atkinson, secretary. Luncheons will be held each Thursday.

Charter members of Arcadia's first service club were Maj. Sam Schmerhorn, M. A. Collins, William Hoeffedits, Bob Gray, Charles Hawks, H. E. Harwood, Hugh Jones, John H. Hoeppel, William Atkinson, Newt Alcott, Al Doran, Pat Lloyd, W. H. Ruckles, Frank Benedict, Harold Leddy, Herman Moore, Henry Schwarzkopf, Russell Yates, John Vanderbeer, S. A. Wakeland, E. E. WINN WILL ASTOUNDS WIFE

Self-Slain Clubman's Testament Causes Talented Widow to Break Years of Silence

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (Exclusive.)—Reappearing before the public for the first time since she renounced a literary career of brilliant promise years ago to care for her afflicted and only child, Mrs. Mary B. Winn, in an exclusive statement to the Chronicle today expressed surprise and regret at the will left by her husband, the late Alva H. Winn.

Filed for probate in Superior Court here Friday, the instrument left the bulk of a $300,000 estate to others than the wife. Winn committed suicide in the garage of his Los Angeles home, on the 14th inst.

He had been prominent in financial circles of San Francisco for the last twenty years, serving as an official of the Mercantile Trust Company, the California Title Insurance Company, the Pacific Title Insurance Company and the R. R. Thompson Estate Company in Alameda.

LIFE DETAILS KNOWN

Intimate details of his actions just prior to the time he fired the fatal shot into his head were given for the first time. The body lay in the garage a week before it was discovered. Meantime, Winn was being sought throughout the Coast cities.

A life of sacrifice, spent in solitude at the altar of mother love, is revealed in Mrs. Winn's story.

"The will left by Mr. Winn was the greatest surprise of my life," she declared.

Explaining that she had thought all along that they were worth not to exceed $100,000, Mrs. Winn said she could not understand why she was kept in the dark in that respect, and why she was cut off with less than provided for under the community property laws of the State.

"But I do recall now that Mr. Winn used to tell me that $50,000 was all that any woman needed," she said.

MOTHER'S TRAGEDY

The tragedy of a beautiful, beloved and only child blinded at birth because of the carelessness of physicians and nurses, the aloofness from society, the years of bitter disappointment at not being able to lift the pall from the daughter's eyes, then the death of the girl, and her life alone while the husband was engaged in business or at his clubs, were told with simple directness by Mrs. Winn.

"Mr. Winn was an abnormally secretive man," she said. "I knew nothing about his operations, and if I had known he was worth $300,000 I would not have lived as I did. I had thought he might be worth $100,000, but no more."

Alva H. Winn, who was 65 years of age, rented an apartment at 908 South Normandie street, early last month. On the night of October 13, his wife reported him missing. Nine days later his lifeless body was found in the garage adjoining the apartment, a bullet in his brain and an automatic pistol lying at the dead man's side.

PHYSICIAN STARTS HIS SENTENCE

Doctor at Portland Turns Practice Over to Wife He Divorced

PORTLAND (Or.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Dr. Frank C. Hart, whose fight to escape court punishment after conviction of violation of the Mann Act, reached the United States Supreme Court, has given himself up to the Federal authorities and is now at McNeil Island on the first lap of his five-year sentence. He surrendered himself after Supreme Court denial of a new hearing had closed all chances of his being cleared. Notification of the denial arrived last night.

In a statement issued just before starting for Federal prison, Dr. Hart, who was formerly a prominent local physician, announced that he was turning his practice over to his former wife, who divorced him as a result of the entanglement which brought his sentence.

Curb Market for Workmen in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—New York has its curb market, but it cannot boast of any thing like the curb about San Antonio's City Hall, where any kind of workman under the sun can be found.

The workmen have private telephones beside the sidewalk and all start with expectancy when one rings. If one man can't do the work requested he turns the job over to another. Thus the entire city can find workmen by ringing or going to the City Hall.

Service for small bills

THE increase in living costs has no effect on the cost of Bureau power and light for the home. In fact, value considered, Bureau service is more economical than ever. Los Angeles homes average only $1.90 a month for domestic electricity—much less than you would pay in any other large city.

Cheap Bureau electricity makes for more comfortable and convenient homes. Without the fear of an enormous bill at the end of the month, the Los Angeles home manager may be prodigal in her electric demands. Extra appliances, more and larger lighting fixtures, longer hours of evening daylight — because the Bureau of Power and Light considers the people's interests first.

As a publicly owned utility, the Bureau of Power and Light always has and will continue to measure its domestic services in terms of economy rather than profit.

HUNTINGTON OIL OUTPUT MOUNTS

Daily Gain of 13,000 Barrels Scored in Week

Prospect Bright for Addition of 10,000 Shortly

Record of 90,000 Within Next Month Not Unlikely

With nine new wells completed during the past week, the Huntington Beach field leaped from 57,000 barrels daily average output to 70,000 barrels, with the prospect that the end of the present week may see another 10,000 barrels added to the field's yield. A mark of 90,000 barrels per day is not unlikely within the next month, in the opinion of experienced operators. There is a possibility that before the end of the present development in West Huntington Beach is reached the field may lead the State in daily production of petroleum.

The second zone in West Huntington Beach is proving to be far more prolific than the operators originally believed that it would be. Many wells are penetrating 700 to 800 feet of sand, and as a consequence 2000-barrel wells are being completed, with an occasional 3000-barrel well to raise the average.

But in spite of the prolific production Huntington Beach operators are finding it necessary to use extreme care in producing their wells, because of the danger which has developed of sanding up the wells, cutting out valve fittings.

Few producers in the west end of the field are allowed to flow unrammeled, because of this possibility. With an open "bean" the wells show a tendency either to make some sand in the output which, being under high pressure, cuts out pipe and valve-fittings like a rasp, or else the pressure forces the oil itself into the hole, and clogs it up.

An interesting feature of the development in the new field is the high quality of gas which the wells are producing. The gas output per well averages about 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 cubic feet per day, and it is reported to be running about three gallons of casinghead gasoline per 1000 cubic feet of gas.

SOUTHLAND COLLEGE LIBRARIANS TO MEET

NEW PLANT READY FOR OPERATION

Latin-American Milling Completes 200-Ton Mill for Durango Mines

Moffett & White, Inc., fiscal agents for the Latin-American Milling Company, report that the corporation's 200-ton lead-zinc milling plant has just reached completion and production of silver-lead and zinc concentrates is expected to start about the middle of November, operating through a Mexican subsidiary, known as the San Nicolas Mining and Milling Company. It owns 110 acres and has under fifty-year lease the Vacas mining group of 260 acres, making a total of 370 acres.

These properties comprise part of the La Parilla mining district, located in the State of Durango, Mex. Prior to Latin-American financing more than $500,000 had been spent in partial development of the properties and in building a 300-ton mill. The properties have a production record of several millions of dollars.

Operation of the properties ceased in 1906, due to lack of transportation facilities. As a result of previous mining and milling operations, there exists a tonnage estimated at a minimum of 279,000 tons, combined with 250,000 tons of mine ores blocked out and in sight.

With the National Railways now within seven miles of the property, cheap and adequate transportation is assured to the smelters at Torreon and San Luis Potosi.

Investigation of the properties was made by Simeon K. Dahl, metallurgical engineer, whose report indicates a minimum of 279,000 tons of tailings, containing gross values in excess of $7,000,000. In addition to these known values above grounds Mr. Dahl thinks that there is blocked out and in sight over 250,000 tons of silver-lead and zinc ores in the Vacas, San Marcos and Quebradilla mines. Assays indicate averages of twelve ounces of silver, 5 per cent lead and 12 per cent zinc on the Vacas ores. The San Marcos averages ten ounces of silver, 5 per cent lead and 5 per cent zinc, and the Quebradilla averages twelve ounces of silver, 1 per cent lead and 1 per cent zinc.

The Latin-American is financed by Los Angeles capital. It is a California corporation. Simeon K. Dahl is consulting engineer, O. Allen Anderson is superintendent in charge at the mines.

Milling Plant of Idaho Mine in Commission

The 100-ton daily capacity Iron Dyke milling plant of the Idaho Copper Company of Los Angeles is in regular commission, according to President O. H. Griggs, recently returned from a thirty-day visit to the company's Idaho property, and two carloads of concentrates are being shipped weekly to the international smelter averaging about 15 per cent copper and $15 per ton in their gold-silver content.

In the further development of the Dyke mine, Mr. Griggs states, the 400-foot working shaft is to be deepened an additional 200 feet, and at the 600-foot horizon drifts are to be run to get under ore bodies in virgin ground, the existence of which has been disclosed by diamond-drilling operations.

The new auto truck fourteen-mile road from the Red Ledge mine of the company to Homestead has been completed for seven miles. At the Red Ledge the company has completed some satisfactory diamond-drilling exploratory work which, Mr. Griggs says, has added materially to the ore tonnage previously developed.

Yellowstone Oil Assigns Permit in Maricopa Field

MARICOPA, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The Midway Northern Oil Company has taken 191 acres in the West Side oil fields, east and northeast of Maricopa.

The Yellowstone Oil Company has assigned a government prospecting permit covering ninety-one acres to the Midway Northern. The property lies in Sec. 7, 11-23. The Julian Petroleum Corporation filed a quitclaim in favor of the Midway Northern, to 100 acres of Sec. 32, 12-23.

An agreement between the Yellowstone, the Independent Oil Producers' Agency and the Union Oil Company shows that the three companies have canceled an agreement made in May of 1917. The agreement affected oil produced from Sec. 7, 11-23 east of Maricopa. Since the property never was developed, the contract expired without being placed in operation.

Angeleno Makes Good Report on Big Jim Strike

Henry J. Groha of Los Angeles, prominently identified with the oil industry of Santa Fe Springs, and who is now heavily interested in mining in the Patagonia district in Arizona, has wired friends here that the spectacular strike of marketable ore in the Big Jim mine is having a beneficial effect upon the mining industry of that section.

Mr. Groha, who had just finished an examination of the new discovery in the Big Jim, states the shaft has been sunk for thirty-three feet in fine shipping ore, with the bottom still in the same grade and character of mineral.

Three shifts are being employed at the mine, night and day, in the endeavor to demonstrate the size of this ore body, averaging 7 per cent lead and ten ounces of silver to the ton, aside from thirty inches assaying 31 per cent lead and fifty-two ounces silver.

DEEP SAND BOTTOM SOUGHT

Two Companies Launch Drilling Projects in Hunt For More Light on Ventura's Gusher Zone

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

One of the most interesting drilling contests the country has ever known has just been started in the Ventura-avenue field at Ventura, where the Shell Company and the Associated Oil Company have each started a deep test calculated to shove the drill through the bottom of an oil formation which, at this moment holds the world's record for thickness.

These two wells started with holes which will accommodate casing which is twenty-five inches in diameter on the inside. Special equipment will be used throughout, in order to comply with unusual mechanical requirements. The Shell well, which is down 1000 feet, is known as Gosnell No. 23. It is east of Ventura avenue, on the Gosnell lease. The Associated well, known as Lloyd No. 37, is about 1000 feet east of the Gosnell test, and 200 feet up the hillside.

The field recently celebrated the completion of Shell's Taylor No. 14, which was finished at 6414 feet and is yielding 3500 barrels a day. This well carries an oil formation all the way down from 3400 feet, with only thin streaks of shale between the heavy oil sands. This demonstrates at least 3000 feet of producing formation, and none of the operating companies has yet put a drill through the bottom of the formation. The policy has been to drill each succeeding well just a little deeper into the oil sand than its predecessor went. The bottom is still to be found.

Shell officials, who have had long experience in the Signal Hill field, which has long been famous for its depth of producing formation, assert that Signal Hill has not shown much over 1800 feet of oil formation, and has long since lost the record to Ventura. Owing to the tremendous gas pressure, the deep oil formation, and the other geological novelties in the Ventura avenue field, geologists say that they would not be surprised to see the drill still in oil sand at 7000 feet.

There is no doubt that several world's records will be broken in the drilling of these two deep tests by two of the most efficient operating companies in the oil fields of the West. The crews have already been instructed to set fifteen-inch casing instead of eleven-inch, at 3000 feet, and this in itself will break one world record in that it will be the longest string of fifteen-inch casing ever set in an oil field. It seems not unlikely that these tests may go to a depth somewhere between 7500 and 8500 feet, which will make petroleum history exceedingly interesting, for the reason that the Chanslor-Canfield Midway Oil Company is just now obtaining special equipment for a production test in its Olinda No. 96, at 8046 feet, at Brea-Olinda, while E. J. Miley has his Athens No. 6 on production in the Rosecrans field at about 7600 feet.

First Wildcat Under Way in Mexico State

TAMPICO (Mex.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The first wildcat oil well started in the State of Coahuila is now under way. The James F. Martin Drilling Company of Tampico is drilling it, and will go as deep as 3500 feet, if necessary. Indications are that oil sand may be struck nearer the surface than that, as all the Mexican oil wells have been brought in at depths less than 3000 feet. The wildcat is near Cuatro Cienagos, Coahuila.

Only a couple of small wells were brought in near Tampico last week, neither being larger than 250 barrels daily.

GOLD SLOPE MINING IS DRIVING TUNNEL

WILLCOX (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Cross-cut tunneling is being driven for 2200 feet into the mineralized zone of the Gold Slope Mining Company, which has property northwest of this point. About 6000 feet of drifting is included in the plans of Manager Willis A. Bondurant, a pioneer Arizona miner, with home in Los Angeles.

SHELDON SUPERIOR SHIPPING GOOD ORE

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Eight carloads of surface ore, taken from open cuts of the Sheldon Superior property, has returned $40 a ton. The mine, a mile from the well-known Sheldon property, is owned by an association of Prescott residents, who are hoping to build a mill for handling the ores, which are complex.

DIADEM

Pupils in a Marion county school were asked to use the word "diadem" in a sentence.

Here is what one wise lad wrote: "People who drive on the railroad crossing without looking, diadem sight quicker than those who stop, look and listen."—[Indianapolis News.

Facetious Trade Slogan

A steam boiler on a truck which figured in a recent industrial procession during "Civic Week" in Manchester, Eng., bore the inscription, "Stop me and buy one."

PANHANDLE EXTENSION IS SOUGHT

Active Hunt Scheduled Covering Portions of Three States

ARTESIA (N. M.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—In an effort to work out an extension of the Panhandle field, an active drilling campaign is scheduled for Western Texas, Eastern New Mexico and Southern Colorado. In New Mexico interest is centering in Union, Harding, Quay, Curry, Roosevelt and Lea counties.

A geological high, known as the Jordan Ridge, running in a northeasterly direction across Quay county, is believed to connect with the Panhandle field. To the south of this ridge in Quay county, two wells are now drilling. The Ohio Oil Company is putting down a test on Sec. 24, 7-29 on a block comprising 32,000 acres. The Gibson Oil Company is drilling on Sec. 25, 8-32 on a 42,000 acre block. The Argo Oil Company of Denver is preparing to start a test, on a 40,000-acre block, with the probable location on Sec. 5, 7-31.

In Union and Harding counties a number of locations have been made, with several wells drilling. In this section, Staley and associates of Wichita Falls, Tex., have purchased three leases from the State of New Mexico, comprising 95,000 acres running from Township 14, north, Range 30 east to Range 35 east.

The opinion of many operators and geologists is that the Eddy and Lea county fields will run in a southeasterly direction, connecting with the McCamey field in southwestern Upton county. Production in the Westbrooke well in Winkler county, has greatly strengthened this theory.

GOLD RUSH REPORTED IN NEVADA

Discovery Near Nyala is Declared Among Richest Made in Many Years

RENO (Nev.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Reports of a rich gold strike near Nyala, about 100 miles east of Tonopah, have started a rush of prospectors to the field. It is asserted that the vein has been traced for over 500 feet, averages over three feet wide, and shows shoots of high-grade gold quartz. Several mining men say that the discovery ranks among the richest made in Nevada in many years, but that deeper work will be required to determine its actual merit.

The old Ingomar lead-zinc mine, in the Yellow Pine district, has been leased to Goodsprings operators for two years by Congressman S. S. Arentz of Nevada. The property has produced in excess of $200,000, and commercial ore is reported to be exposed in old workings. The leasers plan to ship to Utah smelters.

Ore averaging over $70 per ton has been opened on the 100-foot level of the Mary B mine at Aspen, Colo., by the Mary B No. 2 Leasing Association, according to news received by interested Tonopah residents. The company is controled by J. A. Robbins, Los Angeles; E. M. Howard and C. C. Lord of Long Beach, and Thomas F. Hines, an Alhambra capitalist. Contracts have been let for driving drifts east and west on the 150-foot level, to be followed by deeper developments.

Interest in Old Calico Mining Area Reviving

Joe E. Shales of Barstow, who is in Los Angeles from his mines in the old Calico district, looking after a carload shipment of chloride ore running from 200 to 1000 ounces of silver to the ton, states that there is a revival of mining interest in that district, which is only 140 miles from this city.

Mr. Shales is now working ten men in ore extraction from a recent rich discovery on one of his properties, the high-grade being sacked for transportation by a ten-mule pack train, to the old town of Calico, to be hauled by motor truck to Yermo, a station on the Union Pacific, four miles from the mines.

The Calico district, Mr. Shales says, was discovered in 1882. It produced $71,000,000 in silver bullion in ten years, according to the records of Wells Fargo, this amount being augmented by crude-oil shipments to over $100,000,000, and the mines of the district are still going well.

OIL SHIPMENTS SET HIGH MARK

More Than 1,000,000 Barrels Leave Port Weekly

Thirty-seven Tankers Loaded Past Seven Days

Pacific Domestic Leads in Consumption

Fuel oil was shipped out of Los Angeles Harbor during October at the rate of more than 1,000,000 barrels a week, the total for the month being 4,051,936 barrels. This is one of the heaviest monthly movements of fuel oil that the State has ever known. September shipments of fuel oil amounted to 2,755,983 barrels.

Last week's bulk petroleum shipments from the harbor totaled 2,259,123 barrels, being about 400,000 barrels greater than the previous week's shipments. Thirty-seven tankers were loaded out. Fuel oil amounted to 898,045 barrels.

The Pacific domestic trade took 1,033,568 barrels, of which 475,500 barrels were crude, 331,141 barrels were fuel and 226,927 barrels were gas. The Pacific foreign trade took 329,162 barrels, of which 42,000 barrels were crude, 214,877 barrels were fuel and 72,285 barrels were kerosene.

The Atlantic domestic trade took 621,896 barrels, of which 255,462 barrels were crude, 191,054 barrels were fuel and 175,373 barrels were gas. The Atlantic foreign trade took 113,524 barrels of crude and 160,973 barrels of fuel. The shipments were as follows:

PACIFIC DOMESTIC

J. C. Fitzsimmons to Richmond with 70,000 barrels of crude for Standard Oil Company.
Lehue to Portland with 66,161 barrels of fuel for General Petroleum Corporation.
Richfield to Oakland with 25,000 barrels of gas for Richfield Oil Company.
Rincon I. to Oakland with 27,000 barrels of fuel for Richfield Oil Company.
H. M. Storey to Richmond with 101,000 barrels of crude for Standard Oil Company.
La Purisima to San Diego with 19,250 barrels of gas for Union Oil Company.

Twenty Men at Work on Lucky Boy Divide Mine

The Lucky Boy Divide Mining Company of Tonopah, Nev., is giving employment to a force of twenty men, according to a statement made by President Harry McNamara, just in from the mine.

The company has extensive holdings in California and Nevada, but work is being largely confined, at the present time, to the Mary mine near Silver Peak.

In the Simon-Athena district, also in Nevada, the company controls the Black Warrior gold mine, in the workings of which ore to the value of $400,000 is claimed to have been developed. Company stock is listed on the Los Angeles and San Francisco stock exchanges, and has had quite an extensive turnover during the past two weeks.

GLAUCONITE DEPOSITS IN TEXAS AREA

Clay Mixture of Early Geological Age Used as Water Purifier

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—A noted chemist and inventor has been in Texas making a survey of the deposits of a substance known as glauconite, which was formed in geological ages by a mixture of clay and the bones of dead fish, the chemists say.

Research laboratories of the East have become interested in the vast beds of glauconite, said to underlie certain sections of south and west Texas. Millions of tons of the substance are said to be available in these sections by the strip mining process.

The substance is now used in connection with a process known as "vanite" to remove magnesia and lime from drinking water and to destroy the disagreeable odor and taste caused by the use of chlorine in purifying drinking water.

Several carloads of glauconite have been shipped to the National Research Laboratory at Pittsburgh, where experiments have shown that it can be used to advantage, according to the chemist who recently made investigations in Texas. The product contains from 4 to 7 per cent potash, and may also be used as a fertilizer.

SULPHUR DEAL AFOOT

Large Deposits in Texas County Under Investigation

TOYAH (Tex.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive) Surface deposits of raw sulphur which cover a large area in Culberson county, thirty to fifty miles north of here, may be taken over and developed by the Union Sulphur Company of Sulphur, La., according to Thornwell Fay, Jr., representing that company, who has been investigating matters connected with the proposed industry.

Several attempts have been made at various times to commercialize these sulphur deposits but their remoteness from transportation facilities prevented the success of the enterprises, it is stated. An enormous tonnage of sulphur is in sight and test holes show that the bed extends deep beneath the surface.

OLD ROSECRANS FIELD REVIVES

Four Recent Completions End Development Lull

Barnsdall Gets 1250 Output from O'Dea No. 12

The old Rosecrans field, which has been plugging along an almost insignificant amount of development for the past year, is showing new signs of life. In the last ten days it has brought in four good producers, three of them yielding 1000 barrels a day or better.

The latest completion is the Barnsdall Oil Company's O'Dea No. 12, which went on production at the bottom of the lower Maxwell zone with an output of 1250 barrels a day. Barnsdall expects to have two more wells on production on the O'Dea property during the next few days.

The O'Dea operations are in the original Maxwell district, where the Union first found oil sand and the Superior Oil Company got its best wells. In the northern part of the field, generally known as the Athens area, where the old Potter No. 1 now the Howard Park, No. 1, was the first completion, the Union has finished its Howard Park, No. 30, making 300 barrels a day, and its Howard Park No. 31, doing 1000 barrels a day. Farther to the east the Big Five Oil Company recently finished its second well for a daily production of 1000 barrels.

The General Petroleum Corporation which was one of the first operators in the field, but chanced to hold leases which were almost off the structure, will shortly be making a production test in its Vaughan No. 4. The Vaughan lease is just north of the O'Dea, and when the first well was completed there it looked like a 1200-barrel producer, but went to water in a couple of days.

GOLD GULCH PROPERTY IN NEW HANDS

Bisbee Queen Group of Claims is Taken Over by $750,000 Corporation

BISBEE (Ariz.) Oct 31. (Exclusive) The Bisbee Queen property of thirteen patented claims has been taken over by a new corporation, understood to be closely connected with the United Verde Extension Mining Company of Jerome and Clemencesu. At its head is James S Douglas, president of the extension, whose home is in Douglas, where he has large banking interests.

A separate corporation, organized to handle the local work, will have a capital of $750,000, of which $300,000 will be expended in deep exploration of attractive silicious croppings. The extension is reported to have acquired 71 per cent of the stock of the former holding corporation, the Bisbee Queen Development Company. M. J. Elsing will have charge of the new work. The property lies in Gold Gulch, next to the ground of the Warren Realty and Development Company, on which is a 700-foot shaft.

The property of the Warren Ranch Corporation in the lower part of this district, has been bought at directed court sale by Horal A. Smith, for $170,000, the only bid offered. For eight years the property had been in the courts, in copartnership litigation between Smith and Henry Hoviland. Included are the Rough Rider mining claims noted as the basis of a court decision that locations under the mineral laws might be made on a mere supposition of value in unexplored territory below.

ARIZONA SMELTERS AFFECTED BY RAINS

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Production at the local smelters was affected by the recent storms, the heavy rains wetting down the bedding pits. At the Copper Queen no concentrates were received for a fortnight from the Phelps Dodge mill at Nacozari, owing to breaks in rail communications. The storm also stopped Copper Queen reconstruction work for a time.

OIL HOPES HIGH AT SEAL BEACH

Real Production Showing is Expected Soon

Two Marland Projects Near Completion Stage

Third Approaching Sands of Bixby No. 2

The Seal Beach field, which has had one well yielding 1800 barrels a day for the past three months, is likely to begin making a real production showing within the next two or three weeks. Marland has two wells in the oil zone from which Bixby No. 2 is getting its production, and another well which should be picking up the sand in a day or two. Standard has one well which is due to find the sand at any time, and has just spudded in another. Associated also has a well drilling in a favorable location.

If any of these wells show anything like the performance of the discovery well Seal Beach, in spite of its comparatively small extent, may soon become a material factor in the petroleum marketing situation.

Marland's Bixby No. 3, the second well to pick up the oil sand at Seal Beach is standing with water string cemented at 4358 feet, after drilling to a depth of 4402 feet. Bixby No. 4, which drilled to a depth of 4435 feet, is standing with casing cemented at 4424 feet. Both wells set eight-inch casing.

Marland's Selover No. 1 is drilling ahead at 4590 feet and is not far from the point at which geologists think the oil sand should be found. The Selover well is a considerable distance south of the Bixby wells, and it is thought to be much farther down on one side of the structure.

The Standard Oil Company, which spudded in its San Gabriel No. 1 on the property between the Bixby and Selover leases, is past 4400 feet in its San Gabriel No. 2—its first well in the field—and is expected to pick up the oil sand in a few days. Due to their location the San Gabriel wells may have to go deeper for the oil zone than the Bixby wells, but perhaps not so deep as the wells on the Selover property.

Traffic on New Atchison Branch Reported Heavy

ISOM (Tex.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive) Although the new branch line of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe which runs from Panhandle to Isom was opened for regular traffic less than a month ago, it is already handling an enormous traffic. The daily oil shipments alone, from Isom, average more than 125 cars. The number of cars moved daily is constantly increasing.

The inbound traffic of lumber, derrick timbers, oil field supplies and general merchandise is heavy. If the business increases much more, many additional passing tracks and larger terminals will have to be constructed, it is stated. Application will be made soon to the Interstate Commerce Commission for a permit to extend the line from Isom north to Spearman.

SHAFT GAINS DEPTH

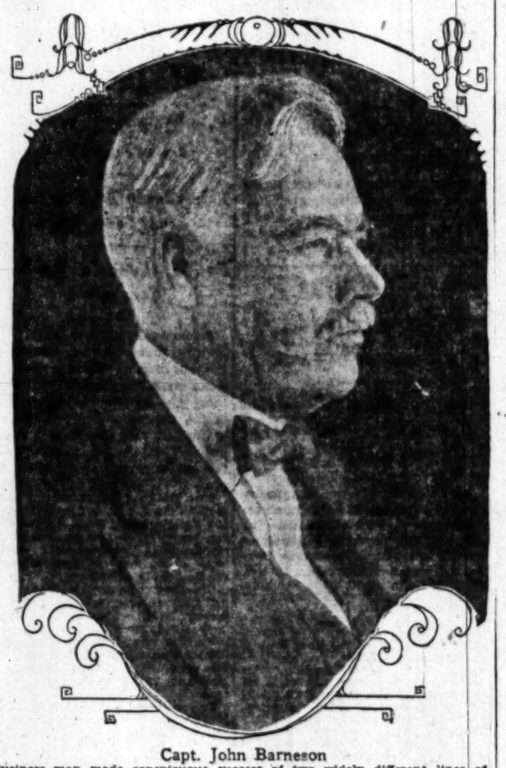
Ore Body in Big Jim Entered for a Distance of 21 Feet

PATAGONIA (Ariz.) Nov. 1. (Exclusive)—The main shaft of Big Jim Mines has penetrated the ore body it recently entered, for a distance of twenty-one feet, with the footwall of the ore shoot not yet in sight.

All of the rock taken out of the shaft since the strike was made has been put through the mill. More water is coming into the shaft, and this delays sinking operations, but the water is welcomed, as it means an ample supply for milling purposes before the shaft reaches its objective depth of 350 feet.

WHALER CAPTAIN WINS IN OIL

Petroleum Business Grows Immense



Capt. John Barneson

Business man made conspicuous success of two widely different lines of business, on land and sea.

THE glamor of the South Seas when he trod the deck of the fast clipper ships which once ruled the waves, the dangers and toils of the whaling fleets of the northern ocean, and finally an active role in the romance of petroleum—these are the high lights in the picturesque career of Capt. John Barneson, chairman of the board of the General Petroleum Corporation, and one of the most successful men in the American industry.

A quarter of a century on the sea—from birth to young manhood—bred into the being of Capt. Barneson a relish for salt water that the years, which time coupled with the substantial success of his life ashore, has never been able to overcome. He is still essentially the ship owner. Among the fondest memories of his varied life are recollections of the early days when, as a young skipper of 21 years of age, he trod the decks of his ship in the southern ocean.

Capt. Barneson was born in Wick, Scotland, the son of a sea captain, New Year's Day, 1862. He was only 4 weeks of age, when he made his first voyage, sailing from Aberdeen on the barque Clara Bayers, for Sydney. The first nine years of the boy's life were spent on his father's vessels, and then after a few years as school, he went to sea as a member of the crew of the barque Verulam.

After a year before the mast, the young sailer, then only about 13 years of age, was apprenticed to Cowlishaw Brothers, a Sydney shipping firm, and joined their new clipper, the Woolahra. Those were the sporting days of fast-sailing ships when sea captains took a pride in pitting the strength of their masts and their own daring against the violence of the tempest, and that was the school in which young Barneson received his early education. The Woolahra, one of the fastest ships of the day, made voyages to Shanghai with coal, to London with tea, and plied between various Antipodean and oriental ports, engaging during this time in races against such famous clippers as the Black Adder, Forward Ho, and others.

Then the steamer began to make inroads into the tea trade, and the Woolahra thenceforth became a wool ship, sailing between Sydney and London. At the age of 17 young Barneson was made second mate of the Woolahra, succeeding to this berth in the afterguard on the death of the regular second officer, and two years later became first mate of the same ship. It was at this time that young Barneson first saw the city of San Francisco in whose business affairs he was afterward to play such a prominent part. That was in 1882. The following year he obtained his master's certificate, and in 1885, at the age of 23, he became captain of the British ship George Thompson.

About this time the young captain married, and it was on one of his voyages to Papeete, Tahiti, that his son Lionel was born. Lionel Barneson is now president of the General Petroleum Corporation of California.

In 1890 Capt. Barneson resigned command of the George Thompson, and went ashore at Port Townsend, Wash., where he entered the shipping business. For eight years he remained ashore. When the Spanish-American War broke out he took command of the transport Arizona. This vessel was purchased by the government from the Northern Pacific Railway, which had operated it on the Guyon Line. This was a steamer, and was the first and only steamship commanded by Capt. Barneson.

The Arizona transported 1700 men from San Francisco to Manila. The voyage was made by way of Honolulu where a stop of two weeks was made, and returning the Arizona visited Hongkong and Honolulu, where Capt. Barneson resigned his command, and returned to Puget Sound, where he resumed his shipping business.

But San Francisco Bay offered opportunities to the young mariner which could not be resisted, and it was not long after this that he moved to San Francisco, and went into the shipping business. About that time the government organized the Transport Service in San Francisco, and Capt. Barneson was offered the position of marine superintendent, which he accepted. After about two and one-half years in that position, he again returned to the shipping business on his own account.

Capt. I. N. Hibberd of San Francisco was Capt. Barneson's associate at that time, and the partners acquired a fleet of steamers which they placed in service as whaling vessels in Southwestern Alaska. They established shore stations, and reduced the whaling business to a science, eliminating the long, dangerous voyages of many months which were customary in the old-time whaling business.

It takes fuel to operate steamers, and the bunkering of vessels on the west coast of America, where Capt. Barneson's operations were chiefly centered, was an expensive proposition. When petroleum was developed at Coalinga, the captain was one of the first men to see the possibilities of oil as an engine fuel.

In those days the oil industry was in swaddling clothes. There was not a pipeline in the State. Once the oil was out of the ground, it was a real problem to transport it. Capt. Barneson and his associates, conceived the project of a pipeline from Coalinga to Monterey, and the undertaking was carried through to successful completion. It was the first oil pipeline in California.

From that beginning grew the General Petroleum Corporation. It developed to such proportions that in a few years it eclipsed the shipping business which Capt. Barneson and Capt. Hibberd had built up. New oil properties were acquired, new fields were opened, new wells were drilled, and new pipelines were built. Today the General Petroleum Corporation of California is one of the outstanding operating companies of the entire country.

Hardly a major field in California has been developed without the participation of the General Petroleum, and the tankers which carry General Petroleum products to all parts of the world alone constitute a greater shipping business than Capt. Barneson even dreamed of establishing in his early days as a ship-owner.

Street Improvement Bonds

Issued by California Cities

NOW READY

TO commemorate the opening today of our new home, located in the Pacific Finance Building, we have gathered together a group of Street Improvement Bond issues, covering the public improvement of streets and roads in the various cities and counties thoughout California, which afford the man or woman with funds for investment an unparalleled opportunity to secure the absolute best in Street Bonds.

Each and every Street Improvement Bond offered here constitutes a Safe, Profitable and Carefree investment. Furthermore, each and every bond offered is specially priced for this occasion to the advantage of every investor. A real buy is assured the person with $100,000 to invest as well as the man or woman with $100.00.

Street Improvement Bonds are issued by California Cities to pay for necessary public improvements such as street paving, construction of sewer and storm drain systems, street lighting systems, etc. These improvements affect the welfare of each and every one of us, as they are public conveniences. Street Bonds are secured by well-located real estate, and take priority over all mortgages—present or future.

Now is the time to buy Street Bonds. Look over the following list, then call at our new office or send in your order for a bond or block of bonds by mail. Any amount from $100.00 up. We guarantee satisfaction.

AUCTION OF OIL LAND THURSDAY

State Will Lease 100 Acres in Ventura Avenue

Bonus of $50,000 Reported Being Prepared

Field Promises Daily Yield of 75,000 Barrels

The attention of many oil operators will be centered upon the Ventura-avenue field this week for the reason that on Thursday at 10 a.m., in the Los Angeles offices of the State Board of Control, the right to develop oil on 100 acres of State land known as the State School for Girls, will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder.

The board has already advertised the terms of the sale, setting forth the royalty it will expect in case oil is found on the tract. The action will be held to give operators a chance to offer a bonus for the privilege of developing the land. It was reported yesterday that one large operating company is prepared to offer a bonus of $50,000 for the lease. From what can be learned in petroleum circles at least four substantial companies will seek the lease.

The sale comes at rather an opportune time for the State, because the field has yielded, within the last ten days, about 7500 barrels of new production per day. The Shell Company completed two excellent producers and the General Petroleum Corporation got a small one.

The field is now yielding approximately 55,000 barrels of oil per day, and there is strong probability that it may reach 75,000 barrels a day before the end of the year. More than twenty wells are being drilled there, and quite a number should be completed this month.

The Petroleum Securities Company's Willett No. 1, on the south dip of the field, was going strong at about 5900 feet, with an abundance of gas pressure, when a portion of the underreaming bit was lost, and the crew is now engaged in a fishing job, which seriously delays progress and completion.

The Associated's McGonigle well, north of the Lloyd lease, is reported to be in an excellent body of oil sand at about 5400 feet, with such active gas pressure that it begins to look as though the well cannot be milled much deeper.

REOPENING MINE

Western Syndicate Operating Bobtail in Arizona

GLOBE (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive) Southwest of this city, the Bobtail mine is being reopened by the Western Syndicate, a Phoenix corporation, J. H. Slate, manager.

Shipments of ore to the Miami smelter have given returns of $40 a ton in gold, silver and copper, with 7 1-2 per cent zinc not recovered.

Selective flotation tests, made at the Midvale mill in Utah have resulted in saving of 97 per cent of the gold, silver and copper and 94 per cent of the zinc.

KINGMAN MINES PUSHING AHEAD

Banner Vein Holds Width of Shipping Ore

Deepening of Katherine Shaft to Start Soon

Malik Copper Option Reported as Surrendered

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The Banner vein at Stockton Hill is maintaining a width of fourteen feet of shipping ore, from three to six feet of heavy sulphide, running high in lead and zinc, as well as about an ounce of gold and material value in silver. Drifting on the vein has been carried about 300 feet at a depth of 275 feet, with crosscutting to the walls every thirty feet.

Work is to be started at once in deepening the Katherine shaft to 600 feet, with expectation that it will be continued down to 1000 feet, at which depth diamond drilling is reported to have found excellent ore. The mine has a marvelous body of ore between the 200 and 300 levels, with a single stope 600 feet long and sixty-two feet wide, all declared in milling ore, with streaks of high grade.

Katherine Extension is down below 300 feet and will be continued to 350, where a cross-cut will be run to the vein, about 300 feet distant. Still larger development work is to be done at 450 feet of depth, with possible connection with the 400 level of the Katherine. The shaft is in a granitic formation declared to assay from $4 to $7 in gold.

Calumet and Arizona is reported to have surrendered its option on the Malik copper property, near Chloride, after driving about 1000 feet of tunneling.

At Oatman, much work was found necessary in putting a shaft of the United Eastern in shape for handling the work of the adjoining Western Apex property. The east drift of the Apex 700 level is being driven through good ore toward United Eastern ground at the rate of eight feet a day. Samples run up to $63 to the ton.

The Line Road tunnel of the Stemwinder Company on Goldroads ground is being pushed along a vein from two to four feet in width, with assays up to $100 gold. Extension of 300 feet will be needed to cut a rich cross-fracture region. The remodeled mill is to be started next week.

RALLY FOR MASONIC CLUB

The Masonic Club of Los Angeles, 619-21-23 South Grand avenue, will have a membership rally at 8 p.m. Thursday evening, the 18th inst. The rally will be in celebration of the first anniversary in the club's permanent home. A dinner for members will be served and a program of entertainment given. Immediate reservations are asked.

LARGE BLOCK OF PAY DIRT READY

Gold Lead Placer Plans for Steady Production

North Star at Grass Valley Reported as Active

Amador County Mine Group to Deepen Workings

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—With a large yardage of profitable gravel exposed, and flumes, sluices and bins in position, the Gold Lead Placer Company, largely controlled by Southern California, is preparing for a period of steady production. The placers are located near the old camp of North Bloomfield, above Nevada City, and rich gravel was recently encountered there.

With excellent ore showing in the new deep workings, below the 6500-foot incline area, the North Star mine, at Grass Valley, is keeping a battery of sixty stamps in commission. It is officially stated that good ore has been opened on the 6600-foot level, and that an important discovery is reported at an incline depth of 7000 feet in the No. 1 winze. The North Star ranks among the most noted producers in California, and has been worked more or less steadily since 1852.

A campaign of deep developments is under way on the great Mother Lode gold belt of Amador county, with the Argonaut, Kennedy, Central Eureka and Moore companies chiefly interested. The Argonaut is preparing to send its deep shaft to a point approximately a mile from surface, and the Kennedy plans to reach a total vertical depth of 6800 feet. The Central Eureka announces the Old Eureka shaft will be sent to great depth and extensive lateral developments prosecuted. These mines already are among the deepest gold producers of the world.

The Bright Star Gold Mining Company, controlled by Los Angeles capital, has received a permit from the California Corporation Commission to sell additional stock for financing extensive work on its placer and quartz holdings, located near Mokelumne Hill. The company holds the claims under lease and bond, and reports excellent prospects.

Extensive development of barium deposits at Castella, above Redding, has been launched by the Glidden Company of California. Alexander Sclater of Los Angeles is among the capitalists interested. The barium is reported to be of high quality and is largely used in paint manufacture.

WATER WELL LEASED

General Petroleum to Pay $600 a Year for Use

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 31. (Exclusive) The General Petroleum Corporation has taken a five-year lease on a water well on Sec. 28, 27-27 in the Poso Creek fields, according to an agreement filed here.

The oil company will pay $600 a year for use of the water in developing Secs. 3 and 14, 28-27, southeast of the water well.

MINE IN NEVADA BOOSTS OUTPUT

Tonopah Extension Taking Out 200 Tons Daily

Cloverdale Canyon Placer in Rich Pay Dirt

Copper Strike in New Section of Mason Valley

TONOPAH (Nev.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Production of the Tonopah Extension has been raised to 200 tons daily as a result of favorable development of the Bermuda vein from the West Tonopah shaft.

The ledge, first opened last spring has been exposed for a distance of of 600 feet and has stimulated prospecting of other virgin areas with promising results.

The monthly bullion yield of the company is now averaging around $44,000 per month, nearly double the amount produced in the earlier months of last year.

Rich gravel has been developed in the holdings of the Cloverdale Canyon Placer Company, in Cloverdale Canyon, thirty-five miles north of Tonopah. The company is composed of Los Angeles capitalists, headed by Charles F. Murray and Carl Stephens, and has conducted prospecting with drills for several months.

Holes drilled at depths carrying from forty-three to sixty-two feet have demonstrated extensive auriferous deposits, said to average over $1 per cubic yard. It is planned to install a dredger if explorations continue to be satisfactory.

Rich copper ore has been opened in a new section of the Mason Valley mine, near Wabuska, according to news reaching Tonopah. The strike was made at a depth of 400 feet, about 450 feet north of the main workings, and is said to average 6 per cent copper, with some silver and gold occurring. The mine is owned by the Mason Valley Mines Company, operating the Bluestone group and the Thompson smelter.

Tonopah Belmont Company reports that the work of enlarging its mill at Hamilton to a daily capacity of 100 tons has been practically completed, and the plant will go into commission about November 5. The management states that recent developments in the Cornell and Nevada silver-lead-gold properties have been highly satisfactory, with the outlook favorable for a long era of profitable production. The Belmont mine at Tonopah, is said to be improving, with good ore recently opened in new ground.

Seven Troughs Reorganized Company, controlled by M. J. Monnette and other Los Angeles capitalists, is establishing a large camp at its holdings near Seven Troughs, and is shipping a powerful compressor, electric generator and other equipment to the mine. Work of driving the lower tunnel to cut the downward extension of the Coalition vein-system will be rushed, and veins in the upper levels developed to provide ore for an early run of the ten-stamp mill.

ANNOUNCEMENT

THE Broadway Department Store wishes to announce that its principal assets and business are being taken over by a new corporation to be known as

BROADWAY DEPARTMENT STORE, Inc.

The Officers of the new company will be:

MR. MALCOLM McNAGHTEN
President

MR. HARRY PHILP
Vice-President and General Manager

MR. ARTHUR STRASBURGER
Vice-President in Charge of Merchandise

MR. JAMES A. LAMB
Secretary-Treasurer

All of the men named above have been active for many years in the management of The Broadway Department Store.

With the exception of Mr. Arthur Letts, Jr., who is retiring to devote his time to his personal interests, there will be no change in management.

The broad policies of management and high standards of service upon which the business was founded thirty years ago will continue.

THE BROADWAY DEPARTMENT STORE

New Issue — October 30, 1926

$3,000,000

Broadway Department Store, Inc.

(LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA)

Fifteen-Year 6% Sinking Fund Debentures

To Be Dated November 1, 1926 — Due November 1, 1941

To be authorized and issued $3,000,000. Interest payable May 1 and November 1 without deduction for present normal Federal Income Tax not exceeding 2% per annum. Pennsylvania, California and Rhode Island personal property taxes not exceeding four mills and Massachusetts income tax not exceeding 6% per annum, refundable. Principal and interest payable in New York at the principal office of Dillon, Read & Co., in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness. Coupon debentures in denominations of $1000 and $500, interchangeable, registerable as to principal only. Redeemable as a whole, or in part by lot, on any interest date, on thirty days' notice, at the following prices and accrued interest: To and including November 1, 1931, at 105; thereafter to and including November 1, 1936, at 102; thereafter prior to maturity, at 101. Central Union Trust Company of New York, trustee.

The indenture will provide for an annual sinking fund, payable semi-annually, of $120,000 or 15% of net earnings of the preceding fiscal year after allowance for dividends on first preferred stock, whichever is greater, to be used in the purchase, or redemption by lot, of debentures.

From his letter Mr. Malcolm McNaghten, president of Broadway Department Store, Inc., summarizes as follows:

THE COMPANY

Broadway Department Store, Inc., has been organized, under the laws of Delaware, to acquire the assets (except certain miscellaneous investments and excess working capital aggregating approximately $1,557,000), business and good-will, and to assume the liabilities (except certain Federal, State and local taxes estimated at $292,000) of The Broadway Department Store which, with its predecessor, has conducted a department store business in Los Angeles, California, at the same location for more than thirty years. Sales in 1925 amounted to approximately $17,000,000. The store has more than 13 acres of floor space; the number of employees averaged about 2400.

EARNINGS

Earnings of The Broadway Department Store, for the four years and six months ended June 30, 1926, after deducting income (averaging $35,482 per annum) to reflect the elimination of miscellaneous investments and excess working capital not to be acquired by Broadway Department Store, Inc., and before Federal income taxes, as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., have been as follows:

Year Ended December 31
1922	$1,139,065
1923	1,275,815
1924	945,864
1925	1,137,127

6 months ended June 30, 1926, $512,324

Earnings shown above averaged $1,113,376 per annum, or more than 6 times the maximum annual interest requirement of $180,000 on these debentures. Both the sales and net profits for the six months ended June 30, 1926, as shown by the books of The Broadway Department Store, indicate an increase over corresponding figures for the first half of 1925. The store's sales and net profits for the second six months of the year normally exceed those for the first six months.

MANAGEMENT

The management will consist of Mr. Malcolm McNaghten, president, and Messrs. Harry C. R. Philp and Arthur Strasburger, vice-presidents. Mr. McNaghten became secretary and treasurer of The Broadway Department Store in 1920 and financial vice-president in 1923. Mr. Philp, who entered the business at its inception, became general manager in 1908, and vice-president and general manager at the time the business was incorporated in 1919. Mr. Strasburger entered the business in 1905, becoming merchandise manager in 1913, and vice-president in charge of merchandise in 1923.

These executives, and other interests identified with The Broadway Department Store, are purchasing for $1,500,000 cash, representing principally a reinvestment of moneys received by them from the sale of the business, the entire issue $1,500,000 par value 7% non-cumulative second preferred stock and 51,000 shares of the common stock.

Statements herein are in no event to be construed as representations by us

We offer these debentures for delivery if, when and as issued and accepted by us, subject to the approval of all legal matters by our counsel. It is expected that delivery will be made on or about November 16, 1926, in the form of temporary debentures of the company, or interim receipts of Dillon, Read & Co.

From his letter, Mr. Malcolm McNaghten, president of Broadway Department Store, Inc., summarizes as follows:

EARNINGS

Earnings of The Broadway Department Store, for the four years and six months ended June 30, 1926, after deducting income (averaging $35,482 per annum) to reflect the elimination of miscellaneous investments and excess working capital not to be acquired by Broadway Department Store, Inc., and after deducting annual interest on $3,000,000 6% debentures presently to be outstanding and Federal income taxes at the rate of 13½% per annum, as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co., have been as follows:

Year Ended December 31
1922	$829,591
1923	947,880
1924	662,472
1925	827,915

6 months ended June 30, 1926, $365,310

Net earnings shown above averaged $807,370 per annum, or more than 3.8 times the maximum annual dividend requirement on $3,000,000 par value first preferred stock presently to be issued, and for the year ended December 31, 1925, were approximately 4 times such dividend requirements. After deducting from net earnings for the year 1925, as shown above, annual dividend requirements on $3,000,000 par value first preferred stock and $1,500,000 par value second preferred stock there remains $512,915, or more than $5 per share of common stock presently to be issued.

Both the sales and net profits for the six months ended June 30, 1926, as shown by the books of The Broadway Department Store, indicate an increase over corresponding figures for the first half of 1925. METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY Qualitative analyses will be given in this department of The Times to correspondents on ores and materials free of charge. Make each sample of an ounce or so in weight. Be sure to write a letter stating what tests are desired and give the approximate locality from which samples were taken. Do not pulverize the specimens. Give your name and address on paper wrapped with samples.

Cinnabar Absent

HAWTHORNE (Nev.) Oct. 18.—Question: I am sending you two samples of rock which contain something besides cinnabar. Would you kindly let me know what other metals or minerals are present and oblige. F.

Answer: The samples do not react for cinnabar. One of the specimens is jasper and part of it could be polished into a fair so-called gem. The other sample is a mixture of quartz including the jasper and chalcedony varieties. In this sample traces of microscopic pyrite were found, and the pyrite is auriferous. The pyrite content is in too low percentage, however, to pay for mining.

Clay

LAS VEGAS (Nev.) Oct. 18.—Q.: I am sending to your "In the Earth" department some clay or rock samples on which I would like to have qualitative analyses. The locality from which the specimens were obtained is thirty-five miles from Las Vegas and sixteen miles from Boulder Canyon dam site. I am not a subscriber to your paper as yet, but soon will be. W.

A.: Sample No. 1 is a variety of halloysite in part. It carries a fair percentage of hydrous aluminum silicate (kaolin.) No. 2 swells immensely in water and it is probably bentonite; this specimen might be representative of clay suitable for filtering purposes, but a practical test would be required to determine finally. The samples indicate boron minerals near your claims, if not really on the property. T.

Free Gold Absent

ELSINORE, Oct. 19.—Q.: I am sending you two samples to be qualitatively analyzed. One of the specimens is earth and the other is ore. T.

A.: No. 1 consists of two samples of pegmatyte (graphic granite) with some crystallized common black tourmaline in the rock, known as schorl. No. 2 is sandy limonite stained with yellow hydrous iron peroxide. There is more or less microscopical yellow mica in the sample which is often referred to as "cat gold."

Concentrating Ore

ADELANTO, Oct. 20.—Q.: Please find under separate cover three samples of ore. Do they carry any gold, copper, silver or lead? The samples were taken from the Silver Mountain mining district and about twelve miles from Adelanto. M.

A.: For gold and silver values kindly consult assayers. Sample No. 2 resembles gouge matter; it is a very much altered rock; it seems to be a mixture of Samples 2 and 3 and carries low percentages of sulphates (of iron, chiefly) also. No. 3 is a low-grade tetrahedrite (fahlerz.) It is not the greatly valued "gray copper" variety known to the mining boys in the hills. Chalcopyrite (copper-iron sulphide) is sparingly present with arsenopyrite and a slight zinc (blande) reaction was noted in analyzing the specimen. Lead absent. No. 3 is quartzitic and concentrating (sulphide) ore; it carries more or less microscopic pyrites with traces of chalcopyrite. Lead in very low percentage found.

Mica Schist

GARDEN GROVE, Oct. 20.—Q.: I am sending you a sample of rock for qualitative analysis. Found in Ventura county. Would you kindly send your report to me as soon as possible? My husband will soon be home and wants the results of your test. Is the fee for your service $1, and if so I will send it. MRS. X.

A.: Your letter is published in full. No charge has ever been made for services rendered by this department of The Times. It's otherwise on private analyses, however. The sample by you submitted for tests carries no free gold whatever; other specimens might contain gold and there is probably no mineral of commercial value in such rock. There is a chance of finding the named yellow metal at the locality from which the sample was obtained.

Tourmaline

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—Q.: In the attached parcel you will find a sample from Red Mountain, Riverside county, California. What is the black crystallized stuff? Has it any commercial value? Also what is the quartz-like vein matter in which the crystal is imbedded? Does any of it indicate mineral values in deeper levels? If so, what mineral? K.

A.: The blackish-blue crystallized stuff is near-gem tourmaline, but it is not known what lower levels in the mine will produce. The matrix in which the crystal is imbedded is quartzitic rock mixed with massive garnet, ferruginous quartz and a little iridescent quartz (rainbow quartz.) We found one single microscopic cube-pyrite in the mass. Free gold absent.

Not Bauxite

CLAREMONT, Oct. 21.—Q.: In the mountains north of San Bernardino there is a vein outcropping four feet wide and several hundred feet long, coming up through the limestone. Under separate cover I am sending you five samples. Nos. 1 and 2 are off the vein. No. 3 clings to the footwall. No. 4 is in the bed of a running spring. No. 5 is of another vein. I am not satisfied with my classification. I feel that Nos. 1, 2 and 4 are bauxite. Will you kindly straighten me out and give me something of the possible value of the minerals? M.

A.: The samples are very much altered. No. 1 carries more or less lime carbonate; traces of sodium chloride and aluminum silicate. No. 2 is altered shale stained with hematite. No. 3 is on the order of No. 1. No. 4 is a mixture of impure hydrous magnesium silicate with a little aluminum silicate; hematite present. No. 5 is a low-grade iron-jasper rock. The tests for aluminum oxide on the samples resulted in the fact that the named oxide is not present.

Silicate and Carbonate

POMONA, Oct. 21.—Q.: To whom it may concern: These samples of rock were found ten miles from Mojave. Assay for silver or any other substance. C. E. Z.

A.: It is not our wish to be "funny" over anything, but your initials stand phonetically for See Easy. The sample carries magnesium-lime carbonates and is spotted with microscopic dendritic (fern-like) iron and manganese. Microscopic pyrite in traces only, and for silver-gold values please consult assayers.

Seven Samples

TEMESCAL CORONA, Oct. 21.—Q.: We may find tin yet! I am sending you samples of a lime deposit showing over a considerable extent of surface, top and sides of hills. I am given to understand that the surface minerals would do for dressing of land, and in places would think that gypsum is indicated. MRS. C.

A.: The seven samples are mixed together and none is numbered. Three of the specimens are low-grade and silicious limestone containing a low percentage of gypsite (impure gypsum.) The four larger samples are mixtures of lime and magnesium silicates. It is probable that the entire lot of specimens represent minerals of problematical commercial value. Let us fervently hope that we may find tin yet!

TAILINGS DUMP LOST IN FLOOD

Investigators Expecting to Purchase Fail to Find Trace on Visit

TOMBSTONE (Ariz.) Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—Two local men recently went to Contention to sample two tailings dumps of pioneer milling operations, with expectation of purchase for cyaniding. On arrival at the mill sites they found that the dumps had wholly disappeared, having been washed away by the San Pedro River floods.

Local miners remember a parallel story, when many thousands of tons of tailings from the old Congres mill were blown into the desert by a hurricane.

BIG JOB FOR ROTARY DRILL

Contract to Drill Five New Wells Announced

Four Completions of Small Output Reported

Two Maljamar Tests in Lee Attract Attention

ARTESIA (N. M.) Oct 31, (Exclusive)—A contract has been closed with a local rotary drilling contractor, for the drilling of five wells near the Rehn No. 1 producer on the Winans ranch, eight miles south of this city, and west of the Pecos River. Rotary tools will be used to the capacity, after which standard tools will be employed.

The Rehn well is situated one-quarter mile north of the old Brown producer and has been pumping at the rate of fifteen barrels daily.

Production was slightly increased in the Artesia field during the week by the completion of four wells. The Danciger Oil and Refining Company has a 100-barrel completion known as the Besson No. 3, on Sec. 17, 18-28. In the north extension, Phillips & Welch Brothers have completed their No. 3 well. It is making approximately fifteen barrels a day.

West of the field, the Dave Compton No. 2, on Sec. 3, 18-27, is a small producer. The Empire Oil and Gas Company has completed its second shallow producer on Sec. 2, 18-27, in a sand encountered from 1607 to 1625 feet, and being good for thirty barrels.

In Lea county, close watch is being kept by operators and scouts on two tests being drilled by the Maljamar Oil and Gas Corporation. Their No. 1 on State acreage on Sec. 16, 17-32, is running five feet higher than the discovery well, drilling out of the salt at 1960 feet. The No. 1 on the Grace Mitchell permit on Sec. 3, 17-32, is also running higher. The salt in this well was picked up at 965 feet.

The Skelly Oil Company will drill to completion its No. 1 producer on Sec. 22, 17-31, during the coming week. When capped this well had been drilled three feet into the sand and was estimated at 250 barrels. Location for the No. 2 has been made.

The Prairie Oil and Gas Company is rigging up for its No. 1 test on Sec. 10, 17-31.

A fishing job is delaying completion of the Ohio Oil Company's No. 1 on the William Mitchell permit on Sec. 18, 17-32, the hole being down 3000 feet. Rigging up of the Wooley-Jones No. 1 on the McIntyre permit on Sec. 21, 17-30, has been completed.

JEWS CHANGE NAMES

The Jewish aptitude for a change of surname is reported to be manifesting itself in Palestine, where many of the Zionist settlers are adopting the new Hebrew designation "Mizrachi," meaning easterner, says the Manchester Guardian. Once upon a time a whole great Jewish community was compelled to make such a change of name by law. After the Prussian War of Liberation in 1813, an edict was issued ordering all Jews within the Prussian realm to Teutonize their surnames. Most of those affected chose new designations from nature and originated the tribes of Rosenstein, Rosenberg, Blumenstein, and so forth.

PROVES A DIPLOMAT

Senator Robinson was talking in Little Rock about a corporation that is notorious for its successful raids on the tariff, says the Chicago Daily News.

"This corporation," he said, "reminds me in its lobbying skill of young Reggie Smithers, the suburbanite.

"Reggie, one fine Saturday afternoon, appeared at the bungalow next door and said:

"'Hello, George. Using your lawn mower this afternoon?'

"Neighbor George hesitated.

"'Er—yes, Reggie,' he said, 'I'm afraid I am.'

"'Right-o!' said Reggie. 'Then you won't be needing your tennis racquet. I've busted mine.'"

How She Does It

Mrs. A: Don't you find it difficult to keep your husband home evenings?"

Mrs. B: Not at all. I simply suggest taking him to a cheap movie and he can't get into his slippers fast enough.—[Boston Transcript.

WILLIAMS LINE PLANS INCREASE

Intercoastal Freight Fleet to Get Added Tonnage

Announcement in Answer to Withdrawal Rumors

Local Port Totals for Year to Pass 1925 Mark

The Williams Line, leading insurgent of the intercoastal freight fleet, not only has no intention of withdrawing from the coast-to-coast service but is preparing to add new tonnage to its fortnightly service, according to announcement made yesterday by George Williams, president. Mr. Williams's announcement follows rumors that the Williams Line was preparing to leave the field, following abandonment of the entire intercoastal service of the Garland Line; all seven ships of that fleet being chartered to European coal trade, and the subsequent placing of eleven Transmarine Line steamers, also a nonconference line, into the trans-Atlantic coal trade.

In a dispatch yesterday to J. C. Hammerberg, district manager of the Williams Line, Mr. Williams said:

"The withdrawal of this great amount of intercoastal tonnage for service in the trans-Atlantic coal and grain trade will serve to materially strengthen the intercoastal situation. It will particularly stiffen rates of eastbound lumber.

"The Williams Line has been uninterruptedly in the intercoastal trade for the past six years and has no intention of withdrawing. The Williams Line is making money and plans to place additional tonnage with the seven ships now operating."

Authoritative reports were received from New York yesterday to the effect that five additional intercoastal steamers have been chartered for trans-Atlantic coal and grain trade, the rates for which are now the highest in history. These latest charters include the Luckenbach liner Eastern Knight, the Quaker liner Orient, the American-Hawaiian liner Artonian and two steamers of the Luckenbach Line.

The Williams Line at present operates seven ships, of 50,000 deadweight tons, out of Los Angeles Harbor. Four of these, the Willpolo, Willfaro, Willhilo and Willsolo, are owned by the company. Three others, the Eagle, Tiger and New Britain, are under time charter.

NEW RECORDS IN COMMERCE FORECAST

Los Angeles seaborne commerce for 1926 is destined to show an increase of 1,500,000 tons and more than $100,000,000 in excess of figures for 1925, according to E. N. Varnado of the uptown office of the Marine Exchange. He based his figures on the first ten months of this year, tabulations including October just passed, which excelled all previous records in the history of the harbor.

Last year's commodities ran $760,000,000. Now to tack another $100,000,000 on for this year's mark and one wonders how the home-town pride will rant itself. "Youngstern" now barely entering the city's commercial life will can recall that the port's whole population used to gather at "7 o'clock when a ship came in. Today a score come every twenty-four hours, and few more interest and their movements become commonplace. That is, to every one except Varnado, who is busy hour scrutinizing out-of-port records and writing in new ones.

October provides two or three such records for transcribing. Many ships have had both the pilot and 2,062,152 tons handled in or out over local docks, and valued at $76,139,225. October chalkstone loads pleasakes with 2,894,725 tons, worth $85,226,004.

August's foreign exports topped them all with 513,824 tons, worth $7,400,340. Oil October came along and smashed them with 545,277 tons, valued at $10,348,853. June's foreign import record was expected to stand some time with its 351,852 tons, worth $3,294,207, but October's figures were 58,093 tons, valued at $4,453,826.

Month after month, the outbound light cargoes westbound on the intercoastal route, yet Los Angeles received last month 98,205 tons, worth $21,651,325, an exceedingly high mark. Practically every one of the trades showed greater volume and values as evinced by detailed figures as follows:

Outbound—	Tons.	Value.
Hawaiian	27,054	697,750
Intercoastal	422,994	11,548,419
Coastwise	382,716	14,360,512
Total	1,585,941	$37,152,712
Inbound—	Tons.	Value.
Foreign	98,095	$ 3,012,672
Hawaiian	7,906	360,570
Intercoastal	99,385	21,654,325
Coastwise	267,998	21,451,507
Total	581,624	$46,109,329

Five hundred and ninety-six arriving ships of 1,611,443 net tons participated in October's commercial conquest, dropping or loading myriad odd items in not only every American port, but the harbors of more than forty foreign nations. Five hundred and four of these arriving ships flew the American flag, Great Britain following with forty-three; Norway, fifteen; Japan and France, six each; Germany, Holland and Sweden, four each; Denmark and Panama, three each; Mexico, two, and Italy and Danzig Free State, one each. Vessels carrying passengers, as well as freight, numbered 134; general cargo carriers, 168; tankers, 162; lumber, 113, and miscellaneous, nineteen. The far eastern service there were 324 ships; in the intercoastal, 125; foreign, 120 and coastwise, including Hawaii, five.

More than 117,597,000 board feet of lumber arrived on 101 ships, during the month, swelling the port's receipts for the year to date to 1,001,-326,000 feet, delivered on 1,025 carriers.

Petroleum products went forward in the amount of 9,350,061 barrels, the Pacific Coast being the greatest purchaser, taking 2,731,962 barrels; the Atlantic Coast, 2,682,919; Pacific foreign, 2,004,-490, and Atlantic foreign, 1,436,693 barrels.

Fuel oil was the greatest outbound petroleum item, composing 4,469,281 barrels and followed by crude, 2,884,197; gasoline, 1,696,111; kerosene, 301,497; Diesel, 297,645; benzine, 69,-411; nafta, 72,283, and lubricating oil, 3022 barrels.

Incidentally the Dutch East Indies' production is favored inadequate for its local needs and the Norwegian tanker Fuldenfjord, under charter to Shell, sailed Saturday for Balikpapan with a load of distillate to be refined into gasoline and kerosene there. It is the second such shipment recently.

Capt. H. G. Slabery, in port yesterday with the Williams liner New Britain, has been highly commended by marine insurance underwriters for his distinguished service in handling the crew and supercargo which broke out on board that vessel on October 3, last, while the steamer was 360 miles off Charleston, S. C. During the thirty-six-hour run to port and the subsequent twenty-six-hour fumigation of the blaze in port at Charleston, Capt. Slabery kept the fire confined to No. 2 shelter deck, although the decks and tarpaulins of ship in the vicinity were red hot, with inflammable cargo on all four sides.

Upon final examination of the ship at Los Angeles Harbor, it was announced yesterday a general average of only 15 per cent will have been declared. Capt. Slabery was also commended for his forethought in bringing to his aid the naval transport Chaumont and the Pullard Steamship Guard cutter Seneca. Government vessels being unable to claim salvage of a ship in distress.

First of the fortnightly steamship lines to establish its own agency at Los Angeles the Furness-Pacific, Ltd., will open its doors for business this morning in suite 520 of the Central Building with E. V. Rose of Vancouver as manager. The organization, the same as were formed by the Western Steamship Agencies, Inc., till the latter a former representatives of Furness, disbanded soon after the coming of repeal. The latter was inspired by the port's increased business for Furness ships, which entered the field three years ago and now number five, with additions to and from Pacific ports and the United Kingdom. Another subsidiary of the parent Furness-Withy lines, the Furness fleet of globe-girdling freighters via this port, which are expected also to be handled by Rose's office. The new manager has been nineteen years in Pacific shipping, beginning with the old Pacific Coast Line. Port years ago he returned to the Furness agency on Vancouver, whence he came into this promotion.

Bertram Holmes, editor of the Commercial News, has the distinction of being the only male member of the women's Traffic Club of Los Angeles. The appointment, conferred last week, makes him only an honorary member.

Two hundred and eighty passengers will depart aboard the Panama-Pacific liner Manchuria, when she sails at 7 a.m. today for Havana and New York. The liner advanced her hour of departure to favorable tides, due to her deep draft, occasioned by an unusually large California cargo. Passengers include Dr. Nathan Kraus of New York; Mrs. W. C. Van Fleet and Miss Julian Fleet, widow and daughter of the late Federal Judge; George V. Griffiths, Los Angeles contractor; Arthur E. Clarke, Idaho banker; Misses Ellen and Ruth Dolney of Santa Barbara; William Denby, Miss Elizabeth Dunoony and Mrs. Perriman Eddy of Long Beach.

Led by the Dollar globe-circling liner President Hayes from New York with passengers and freight, twenty vessels are scheduled to arrive in Los Angeles Harbor today. The fleet includes passenger carriers, nine general cargo vessels, five lumber steamers and seven are tankers.

High atop the "Punch Bowl," Hawaiian monument, now rests an arrow pointing to Los Angeles, in memory of Mrs. Albert Bent, wife of the president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, is partly responsible. On the chamber's recent excursion to the islands, Mrs. Bent found on that mighty pinnacle, overlooking Honolulu, an important scenic spot, except Los Angeles. Although no arrow pointed to their apologies. It was indeed a great oversight and would have to be corrected. Before the Bents left, the attendants were true to their word, came hurrying up loads of letters in boxes, and the considerably sweating Bents blamed to the world again, the magic words, "Los Angeles."

M. G. Linder, assistant general freight agent for Struthers & Barry, is back at his desk again after an operation in an uptown hospital. L. G. Cushing, assistant general passenger agent, superviesd Linder's work during the latter's absence.

GOOPS!

A Daily Lesson in Manners for Children

BY GELETT BURGESS

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SOUR MILK AND TEMPER

Now, milk will sour, and so will you,
If you get hot and nervous, too.
Keep cool and sweet, and you will seem Always like milk that's full of cream.
It's cream that makes one like you so.
Goops' temper's like sour milk, you know.

PLATICAS DE LOS LUNES

Por el Profesor R. Guerrero
DEL DEPARTAMENTO ESPANOL DE "THE TIMES"

Numero 480

En el ejemplo 15 de la Plática 479 dice "Debapo" en vez de "Debajo".

En los ejemplos del 1 al 4, de la Plática 479, vemos empleado el verbo "calcinar" como si tuviera significado idéntico al de "quemar", en unos casos, o a los de "calentar", "recalentar" y "requemar", en otros. Lo cierto es que "calcinar" tiene en química una significación especifica, y es la de reducir a cal viva los minerales calcáreos, privandolos del ácido carbónico por el fuego. Por extensión se aplica a la acción de someter al calor los minerales de cualquier clase para que de ellos se desprendan las substancias volátiles. En este sentido dicimos "magnesia calcinada", por ejemplo.

En su "Lexico Andaluz" hace notar el señor de Toro que en Andalucia se suele usar "calcinar" por "fastidiar", y agrega que probablemente ese sentido es provocado por la palabra "quemar", sustituida por "calcinar", considerada esta como más culta. Malamente también, se emplea en Méjico, "calcinar" por "quemar", según lo asientan Ramos y Duarte. En esta acepción incorrecta lo ha usado el argentino Lugones en la frase 3.

Desde el ejemplo 5 hasta el 12, inclusive, vemos impropiamente usados el adjetivo "caliginoso" y el sustantivo "caligine". Parece increible que hasta escritores J. nota, como Salvador Rueda y Vicente Blasco Ibáñez, hayan tomado "caliginoso" por "caluroso", "ardiente", "quemante", etc., y "caligine" por "calor", "ardor" o "bochorno".

"Caligine" significa sencillamente "niebla", "oscuridad", "tenebrosidad"; y "caliginoso", "denso", "obscuro", "nebuloso". Se derivan del sustantivo latino "caligo", que denota "atmosfera densa", "bruma", "vapor", "niebla", y por extensión, "oscuridad", "tinieblas", "lobreguez", "ceguera mental", "torpeza de percepcion", etc., y del adjetivo latino "caliginosus", que significa "lleno o cubierto de bruma", "sombrio", "oscuro", "lobrego", "tenebroso", y por extensión, "incierto", "dudoso".

En vista de lo expuesto, quien se precie de hablar bien el castellano no debe decir que "es muy caliginoso el clima del Valle Imperial", ni que "recibio todo el dia los caliginosos rayos del sol". Mucho menos hablar del "caliginoso resplandor de los mirajes", inintelligible despotrique del señor Vargas Vila. En cambio, esta muy bien decir que "han sido caliginosas las mañanas y las noches del mes de Octubre en Los Angeles", y que "ocurrio un choque de automóviles a causa de la densa caligine que habia". Diremos, por último, a este respecto, que la frase 13 puede pasar, siempre que Sicardi haya querido significar que la "tela de araña" a que se refiere tenia un aspecto nebuloso.

En la frase 14 nos habla Rueda de la vida "denigrante" de los barqueros. Ahora bien, "denigrante" es lo que denigra, deslustra o mancha la reputación, y es casi seguro que no es esto lo que quiso decir el escritor. Ha de haber querido referirse a la miseria y escualidez de la vida de esos pobres trabajadores. Comete asimismo el soleciamo de emplear como activo el verbo "rebullir", que sólo se usa como neutro o reflexivo. La frase aludida debe modificarse así para subsanar ambos errores: "Las casetas de madera donde rebulle (donde se gita) la vida miserable de los barqueros".

La "órbita" no es el ojo, como se lo figura Ganivet, autor de la frase 15 de la Plática 479. Las órbitas o cuencas son las cavidades eh donde estan encerrados los ojos. Lejos, pues, de ser salientes, son entrantes.

El adjetivo "pruriginoso" se aplica a aquello que es de la naturaleza del "prurigo" o que lo produce, y "prurigo" es una de varias dermatosis o enfermedades de la piel, que producen gran prurito o comezon. No se comprende, pues, por qué califica Estebanez Calderón, en el ejemplo 16, de pruriginoso el bullir de las dedos. Debió haberle llamado "febril" "agitado", "nervioso" o "precipitado".

Desde el ejemplo 17 hasta el 20 vemos diversamente aplicado el término "gleba", cuyo, verdadero significado es el de "tierra", "terrón que se levanta con el arado". En la frase 17 no está, pues, mal dicho "hombres de la gleba" para designar a los jornaleros agricolas, y pudo el escritor haber dicho igualmente "siervos de la gleba". Pero al hablar en el mismo ejemplo del "alto proletariado explotador", revela ignorar el significado de la voz "proletario". El proletariado, dice el señor de Toro, es el conjunto de proletarios, es decir, de los ciudadanos más pobres de la nación. El proletario no ha explotado nunca a nadie, y aun en las democracias más avanzadas constituye el rebaño que trabaja y obedece a otros. Los siervos de la gleba son proletarios tambien.

En los ejemplos 18, 19 y 20 emplean los escritores "gleba" para denotar los hombres que en ella trabajan, y cumple advertir que esta metáfora no está aún sancionada por el buen uso.

En la frase 21 nos sorprende Vargas Vila con el neologismo "glebatario", por "siervo de la gleba". Huelga decir que la palabreja es del exclusivo cuño de su autor.

En el ejemplo 22 y último de la Plática 479 vemos con extrañeza que, según Vargas Vila, los pueblos mongólicos tuvieron que emigrar hacia el occidente para venir a poblar la America! Tambien nos habla el propio autor de un istmo de "Bhering". Quiso tal vez decir "Behring", y el cajista le jugo una mala pasada.

Sirvase el estudiante buscar y corregir los errores de lenguaje que haya en los siguientes lugares: 1. Caer cual enjambres de hienas sobre los ganados (Sarmiento, "Facundo", 20, ed. Nación). 2. Pues así debio ser, pese a esos seres dañinos, irritables, agresivos, que usan grafas, que se llaman eruditos, que serían capaces de desplumar un celaje y de envenenar toda la alegria del mundo en nombre de ese concepto infantil de la verdad histórica (Amado Nervo, critica en los "Lunes del Imparcial", citada en la colección "La Patria Española", p. 30). 3. Los milagros de Lourdes han puesto a Roma en un triste predicamento (Rubén Darío, "La caravana pasa", 57). 4. El triunfo no puede ser más completo, pues aunque el clero católico se encuentre en un gran predicamento, la existencia de Dios y del mundo espiritual esta muy bien probada (Id., "Ibid.", 59). 5. Ponia a los papás en el predicamento de tener que pellizcarla disimuladamente (Moreno Brandao, "Los privilegiados", 3). 6. En ese predicamento y con esas perspectivas, salió Cayetano (Id., "Ibid" 68).

Florida Beach Rip Tide Takes Four Victims

WEST PALM BEACH (Fla.) Oct. 31 (AP)—Four men are known to have drowned off the Palm Beach coast today, victims of a strong undercurrent along an unpatrolled beach. Three of the men were drowned while attempting to rescue Miss Jessie Coons, a daughter of one of the victims.

George W. Coons, 40 years of age, assistant construction engineer of the Seaboard Airline Railroad, died in an attempt to rescue his daughter, while Capt. John Cash, 40, of the Palm Beach police force, and Alex Decker, 50, drowned trying to rescue Coons, after the daughter had been saved.

Several hours earlier Jus Swanson 57, drowned off the same beach likewise caught in the undertow.

PARACHUTE JUMPER KILLED

HUTCHINSON (Kan.) Oct. 31. (AP)—Jack Harwood, 26 years of age, a parachute jumper, was killed here today when his parachute failed to open after a jump from an airplane at an elevation of 2000 feet.

GIRLS LED TO DISEASE BY VANITY

Doctor Lays Increase in Tuberculosis to Heeding Fashion's Dictates

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—The modern girl's Spartan sacrifices for a boyish figure and her other sacrifices to current dictates of vanity are making her an increasing prey of tuberculosis, Dr. M. Alice Asserson of the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association, declared today. Dr. Asserson said this disease among girls is steadily on the increase, whereas among all other groups it is declining.

Dr. Asserson's statistics showed that among girls from 20 to 24 years of age, 370 out of every 100,000 died tubercular, which she pronounced "exceptionally high."

"The flapper period, 15 to 19 years, is nearly as bad, with a death rate of 237," she said. "Among girls from 10 to 14, who presumably were under parental control, the rate was but sixty-seven."

Dr. Asserson gave various reasons for these high death rates. Young wage-earning girls frequently skimped food to buy clothes. Society and working girls alike denied themselves nourishing food "from a dread of gaining weight." Desire for a good time cuts into requisite night's sleep. Girls coming from the country or from small towns to an overcrowded city have lowered resistance and become ready prey to tuberculosis.

Dr. Asserson said the association was making a special effort to reach young women of this age.

SPRING AND WINTER WED

MEDFORD (N. Y.) Oct. 31. (AP)—Dr. Silas Rogers Corwith, said to be 66 years of age, was married today to Miss Viola Marie Alter, 18.

Bank Robbery Suspect Faces Federal Count

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (Exclusive)—A charge of impersonating a government officer will be placed against Harry T. Higgins, now held in the County Jail at Modesto in connection with the robbery of the Turlock bank, April 1. Department of Justice agents said that a complaint against him will be sworn out before United States Commissioner Krull tomorrow.

Higgins is accused of impersonating a bank examiner in order to gain access to the funds of the Turlock bank. When the cashier had brought out all the funds for a count, the pseudo bank examiner and a confederate held him up and escaped with $15,000.

Officers who arrested Higgins in Los Angeles, where he is widely known as a salesman and owner of a $50,000 apartment-house, said he had on his person a supply of engraved cards of the office of the Comptroller of Currency, Treasury Department, Washington.

San Francisco Tabloid to Go Under Hammer

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31. (AP)—The plant of the defunct Illustrated Daily Herald, one of three tabloid newspapers, established by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is to be sold under the hammer here the 10th inst. An advertisement announcing the auction sale was inserted today in a morning newspaper. The sale is being made by the receiver, John W. Brodix, by order of the United States District Court.

The Daily Herald suspended publication several months ago. About the same time Vanderbilt's tabloid in Miami, Fla., also suspended, while the Illustrated Daily News in Los Angeles was placed under new management.

DIVORCED HUSBAND WIFE'S FARM HAND

ALL READY FOR BALLOT BATTLE

Los Angeles to Cast Third of Total Vote

Republicans Predict Victory Throughout State

Ballot to be One of Longest Ever in California

Citizens of California will go to the polls tomorrow to vote on one of the largest ballots ever presented to the electorate of this State. It is estimated that approximately one-third of the total vote of the State will be cast in Los Angeles county.

The polls will open at 6 a.m. in the 2513 precincts in this county and close at 7 p.m. Returns will be rushed to the office of Registrar of Voters Kerr, and within a few hours the general trend of the election in this county can be gauged.

The voters will elect a full ticket of State officers, twenty-one State Senators, eighty Assemblymen, a United States Senator, eleven Congressmen, three Supreme Court justices and county officials.

In addition to candidates, the entire State will vote upon twenty-eight State measures. In Los Angeles city, in its 1414 precincts, votes will be cast upon twenty-five city propositions. There are four county questions on the ballot. The Los Angeles County Flood Control District, which includes all the county except Catalina Island and a few isolated districts, will vote upon the proposition of incurring a bonded indebtedness of $26,887,278 for flood control.

REPUBLICAN VICTORY SEEN

The Republican State Central Committee yesterday predicted success for the Republican nominees on the State ticket, for Senator Shortridge, the Republican choice, and Republican Congressional nominees. The Republican ticket is as follows: For Governor, C. C. Young; Lieutenant-Governor, Buron Fitts; Secretary of State, Frank C. Jordan; Controller, Ray L. Riley; Treasurer, Charles G. Johnson; Attorney-General, U. S. Webb; Surveyor-General, W. S. Kingsbury; member State Board of Equalization, H. G. Cattell.

In Los Angeles county Charles H. Randall is making a strenuous fight to overcome the normal Republican majority in the Ninth Congressional District where W. E. Evans is the Republican nominee. While Mr. Evans has the advantage, according to observers, Randall has attempted to confuse the issue the Republican headquarters urge every Republican to get out and work for Evans to insure his election. The other Congressional District race in Los Angeles county is practically decided, as Joe Crail, the Republican nominee, has only the opposition of a Socialist candidate.

VICTORY CONCEDED

In the three Senatorial and in fourteen Assembly races in this county the victory is conceded the Republican nominees. In the Sixty-fifth Assembly District, the Republican party chose as its nominee Willis M. Baum on the death of the incumbent. Mr. Baum is opposed by two men running as independents.

Two full-term positions and one unexpired term position on the State Supreme Court are being contested. Supreme Court Justice Curtis and Appellate Justice Langdon are considered as having the advantage over Appellate Justice Houser for the full-term positions, while Supreme Court Justice Finlayson has received the indorsement of the majority of the responsible interests of the State to retain his position against three opponents, none of whom has had judicial experience.

Five full-term positions and one short-term position on the Superior Court bench are to be filled at the election. The Bar Association has recommended the election of Charles Burnell, Harry Hollzer, P. E. Keeler, Ruben S. Schmidt and Myron Westover to these positions. H. S. G. McCartney and Douglas L. Edmonds are contesting for the short-term post. Five full-term positions and two short-term positions were decided at the primary.

Capt. George K. Home is opposing William I. Traeger, the incumbent, for Sheriff. Supervisor Cogswell, in the First District, is opposed by Fred T. Beaty. Sidney T. Graves, Assemblyman, appears to have the advantage over Councilman A. J. Barnes, for Supervisor in the Third District.

Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of public Instruction, is unopposed for re-election, as are Chief Justice Waste, Appellate Justice Conrey and Appellate Justice York and County Assessor Hopkins.

STATE MEASURES

Much interest is being displayed in the State measure, of which there are twenty-eight. Two are distinctly moral issues, of which No 6 is an attempt to legalize race-track gambling, and No. 9 is an effort to repeal the Wright Act, the State liquor enforcement law. A hot fight has been waged over the merits of No. 17, which requires the Bible in the public schools, but does not impose it upon the children of those who would object.

Three are bond isues. The old Socialistic scheme to authorize an issue of $500,000,000 for "water and power" is again on the ballot, having been defeated twice before. This is No. 18. No. 10 contemplates the issuance of $6,500,000 in bonds for badly needed university buildings at Berkeley, new buildings at the Westwood site for the university in Los Angeles, and State buildings in Los Angeles and Sacramento. The other bond issue is No 1, to raise $20,000,000 to lend on veterans' farms and homes.

No. 8 is a highway measure designed to complete the highway system of the State and apportion the highways justly; No. 4 is a highway measure

VOTE TOMORROW!

There are cogent reasons why every registered voter in California should participate in tomorrow's general election.

These reasons relate not only to the duty each citizen owes his community and State, but are very specifically bound up in the welfare and economic interests of the individual.

Generalities on the duty of voting are not likely to appeal to those who consider themselves too busy or not sufficiently interested to mark a ballot. There is a duty, of course, which all voters owe to the general good, but this statement is presented in large measure on the basis of the self-interest of the voter himself.

Regardless of the pressing importance of the personal affairs confronting each registered voter in this State between the hours of 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Tuesday, the various measures, and the candidates for office, on the general election ballot are of no less consequence.

As the obligation of voting is common to all, the results and effects of the election will be common to all—clerks, business executives, doctors, stenographers, laborers, bankers, teachers. No individual, no group has less interest in the election and its outcome than any other individual or group.

Voting is largely a matter of being willing to take a few minutes out of the day's regular routine—of going to a polling place twenty minutes or half an hour before leaving for work at the accustomed hour, or of pausing long enough to vote during the day or in the late afternoon, following the close of the business day.

Various bond issues and proposed tax increases on tomorrow's ballot propose the expenditure of more than $700,000,000. If YOU believe this money should be spent, or if YOU believe it should not be spent, your only opportunity for expressing an effective opinion is in your vote. YOU alone are responsible for the men elected to public office.

If YOU fail to express your preference, the choice of others will determine the result. If a sufficient number of voters remain away from the polls, a minority—frequently an organized and selfish minority—will control your government, spend your money, make your laws and to an extent perhaps not realized, will determine the scope of your individual prosperity and well-being.

There are measures on tomorrow's ballot involving a difference of opinion and of interest between sections of California. The Times believes the intelligence of every elector will urge the necessity for voting tomorrow.

WENIG SPEAKS AT CHURCH

Oratory Winner Lauds Benefits of Competition; Collection Taken to Aid College Course

Such competitions as the international oratorical contest recently held in Washington should be of service in promoting the future peace of the world, Herbert Wenig, Hollywood High School student who won the event, declared at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Jefferson street and Third avenue, last night.

"The holding of international oratorical contests is very appropriate," young Wenig said. "The problem of world peace is now being shouldered by the statesmen. Eventually the burden will be borne by the younger generation."

HERBERT WENIG

The youth of the nations is being brought together by the international oratorical contest he continued. Those taking part, together with their school-fellows, are being drawn together on a basis of understanding in government. The competition, he said, teaches tolerance in government.

Wenig described the first international oratorical contest which was conducted in Washington on October 15 in the presence of a distinguished audience, President Coolidge, he said, had made an inspiring address, containing many terse and epigrammatic ideas of a lasting quality.

ANTHEM INSPIRES

Remarking that the national anthem of each competitor was played as each appeared, young Wenig said that never had the "Star Spangled Banner" sounded nobler and more inspiring to him than when it was rendered to mark his appearance.

Wenig's remarks prefaced the delivery of his oration on the Constitution, with which he won the international contest. He had previously taken first place in the American oratorical contest on the subject of the Constitution.

Every seat in the church was occupied, and the aisles served to accommodate the overflow. Wenig was given an enthusiastic reception. Dr. G. A. Briegleb announced just before the collection was taken up that a part of the receipts will be used to help Wenig through college. The oratory champion plans to work his way through some California institution where he will study law. Wenig expressed his appreciation of the act, which came in the nature of a surprise.

Dr. Briegleb introduced Prof. William A. Hensey, Hollywood High

VOTE OFFERS NEARS CLOSE

Candidates in "Times" $50,000 Prize Contest Have But Week to Get 100,000 Bonus

With the greatest of all vote offers in the Los Angeles Times $50,000 prize campaign closing Saturday, the 6th inst. at 9 p.m., candidates seeking to win the thirty automobiles and other valuable gifts this morning enter upon a busy week of club building. Every $30 club of new subscriptions is worth 100,000 extra votes, in addition to regular votes, and all candidates are eager to make the best possible showing during this period.

This is also the last week in which 12,000 free votes will be given as a nomination credit. Any man or woman who enters the campaign after next Saturday will receive only 2000 free votes as a starter, and those who have put off entering should send their entry blank at once.

Another important reason why new candidates should enter before the week is out, is that they will receive a first subscription credit of 20,000 free votes if the subscription is received before next Saturday night. After that time, the offer will be withdrawn.

A $30 club of new subscriptions turned in this week will net all the regular votes and a bonus of 100,000 extra votes. Since there is no limit to the number of clubs a candidate may turn in, the possibilities of running up a commanding vote total are readily apparent.

Vote standings which appeared in the Sunday Times yesterday, showed that a new contestant entering now can easily catch up with the leaders by obtaining a few subscriptions. The race is just beginning, and will continue until December 18, but an early start is all-important. Further details of The Times' great prize offer, together with a nomination blank good for 12,000 free votes, will be found elsewhere in this issue of The Times.

State Head of Legion to Visit Here Thursday

Dr. John F. Slavich, Department of California commander of the American Legion will reach Los Angeles Thursday, to install the newly elected officers of Los Angeles Post No. 8, according to word received by Charles P. Ogden, adjutant of the post.

DR. JOHN F. SLAVICH.

This is the first official visit of the new State commander to the local post and a special reception committee selected by Col. O. C. Wyman, commander of the post, will be at the station to greet Dr. Slavich when he arrives on the Owl at 8:40 Thursday morning.

The State commander will be present in the evening at a dinner being arranged by the American Legion Auxiliary in the banquet rooms of Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa street.

The new post officers to be installed are Archie H. Vernon, commander; Miss Marie Renard, Charles P. Ogden and M. C. Collingwood, vice-commanders, J. A. Bishop, treasurer; Dr. Gordon Palmer, chaplain; Robert W. Holliway, historian; Clyde E. Horton, sergeant-at-arms; M. B. Silberberg, judge advocate; Miss Maude Cyr, Charles G. Bullis, Van Hogan and Franklin K. Lane, Jr., executive committeemen.

DAVID KIDSON BURIAL ARRANGED FOR TODAY

Funeral services for David Kidson, a resident of Los Angeles almost fifty years, who died here last Saturday morning, will be conducted this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the chapel of Edwards Brothers, 936 West Sixteenth street. Kidson was born in Sioux City, Iowa, in 1857, and came to Southern California in 1882. He leaves three sons, Edward H., a member of the police department; Herbert D. and Richard I. Kidson, and a daughter, Miss Winifred Kidson.

This is also the last week in which 12,000 free votes will be given as a nomination credit. Any man or woman who enters the campaign after next Saturday will receive only 2000 free votes as a starter, and those who have put off entering should send their entry blank at once.

Another important reason why new candidates should enter before the week is out, is that they will receive a first subscription credit of 20,000 free votes if the subscription is received before next Saturday night. After that time, the offer will be withdrawn.

A $30 club of new subscriptions turned in this week will net all the regular votes and a bonus of 100,000 extra votes. Since there is no limit to the number of clubs a candidate may turn in, the possibilities of running up a commanding vote total are readily apparent.

Vote standings which appeared in the Sunday Times yesterday, showed that a new contestant entering now can easily catch up with the leaders by obtaining a few subscriptions. The race is just beginning, and will continue until December 18, but an early start is all-important. Further details of The Times' great prize offer, together with a nomination blank good for 12,000 free votes, will be found elsewhere in this issue of The Times.

CHILDREN DIE IN HOLIDAY REVEL

Youth Playing Pranks Killed When Piling Falls

Girl Goes to Death From Burns of Lantern

Baby Fatally Seared With Fire From Candle

Three children paid with their lives for the momentary happiness of Halloween. The first to die was Harry Dan Antwerp, 11 years of age of 1430 Ocean Boulevard, Long Beach. In company with a half a dozen other children he was playing pranks in the neighborhood when a fifteen-inch piling toppled from a lumber stack and struck him on the head. He died on the way to the Seaside Hospital.

The second child victim was Faith Bernice Perry, also 11, who was playing near the Perry home at 1114 Yale Drive, Glendale, with a candle-lighted lantern when her clothing caught fire. Before the flames could be smothered she was burned so severely that she died early yesterday in the California Hospital.

The report of the little girl's death had hardly been made public when attendants at the Queen of Angels Hospital announced the death of 2-year-old Willie Parcelo, victim of a similar accident.

The boy was playing with a Jack-o'lantern in front of his home at 7709 South Figueroa street when the candle ignited his clothing.

WOMAN DEAD, THREE DYING IN TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS

Mrs. Grace Moore, 25 years of age, whose home is in Long Beach, died in the French Hospital yesterday from injuries suffered in an automobile accident at Davidson City Saturday night. Luther B. Wood, 70, and Frank Carter, 25, are believed to be dying as the result of other accidents over the week-end, while a number of other men and women were victims of traffic crashes of a less serious nature.

Wood, whose home is at 1619 Sixth avenue, was crossing that thoroughfare at Washington street with his wife, Mrs. Anna Wood, when he was struck by an automobile. He suffered concussion of the brain.

Carter, who lives at 1054 North Sierra Bonita street, suffered a fracture of the skull when he was hurled from a machine at Pico street and Bronson avenue.

Joe Scott, attorney, suffered a sprained left shoulder in an automobile collision at Twelfth and Arapahoe streets yesterday, police reported. Four persons were hurt, none seriously.

Alfonso Scott, 24, a son of the attorney, was cut on the body and the left leg. Another son, C. J. Scott, 21, escaped injury. Lieut. Thomas McCarthey of the U.S.S. Decatur, riding in the same car, was cut on the right arm.

John Alex, 119 West Sixth street, San Pedro, driver of the other car, was unhurt. With him were Miss Lillian Spies, 19, and her sister, Miss Clara Spies, 17, both of 116 West One Hundred and Seventh street. The former suffered cuts on the head.

One man in an automobile containing four sailors from the U.S.S. Idaho, which was sideswiped by a fruit truck at One Hundred and Twentieth and Main streets, may die police reported.

A. L. Halozek was most seriously injured, suffering a fractured skull. The others hurt are A. G. Moser, lacerated hand; F. Boyd, broken right arm, and H. A. Thompson, broken right elbow and body bruises. Halozek and Moser were taken to the Seaside Hospital and later to the Navy Hospital ship Relief. The others were taken to their ship.

The accident occured about 4 a.m. The truck, it was reported, did not stop and Bruce Miller, 2230 South Wall street, took the injured to the hospital.

PARALYZED POLICEMAN GIVEN HOME

Disabled Officer Watches Dream Materialize With Aid of Co-workers

Amid the clatter of hammers and the buzzing of saws, Patrolman Young, paralyzed as the result of a traffic accident, yesterday sat in his wheel chair with his family gathered about him and watched his "dream home" materialize as a splendid actuality.

With the raising of the walls Officer Young also witnessed the materialization of the good fellowship accorded him by every member of the Los Angeles police force. For it was through the individual and voluntary donations of each member that the building of his home was made possible.

While Police Captain Shand, who has had much to do with planning of the officer's home, superintended the activities and prepared with his head chief a special barbecue luncheon to celebrate the fete, fifty carpenters worked like bees in order to get the house completed in the one day. The carpenters, according to Capt. Shand, also donated their labor to the stricken officer.

The new home was erected on Val Jean street, about two miles west of Van Nuys.

Officer Young was severely crushed between two street cars about a year ago, and as a result is paralyzed below the hips.

Todays Bible Text

"And the King went up into the house of the Lord, and all the men of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the people both small and great: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was found in the house of the Lord." BAPTISTS LAY CORNER-STONE

Hundreds View Sunday Ceremonies

Auspicious Occasion for Churchmen

Rev. James Francis, pastor of the First Baptist Church, holding level (right) while Weymouth Crowell, builder, sets the cornerstone for new $1,000,000 house of worship.

AMID impressive ceremonies the corner-stone of the $1,000,000 First Baptist Church under construction at Leeward and Westmoreland avenues, was laid yesterday afternoon, by Weymouth Crowell, the builder. Some 500 people, representatives of all churches, watched the affair which included speaking by prominent churchmen and singing by a special choir and the congregation. Dr. Remsen D. Bird of Occidental College spoke on "The Church and Christian Education;" Dr. Arthur J. Smith, noted missionary to China, on "The Church and Christ's World-Wide Program." There were shorter talks by Rev. James A. Francis, pastor of the church, Dr. O. P. Gifford and Dr. E. P. Ryland.

A yellowed copy of the Los Angeles Times of September 30, 1897, was taken from the memory-box in the corner of the old church on Flower street and placed in the new corner-stone, together with a copy of the issue of October 27, 1926, containing an advance story of yesterday's event.

Another feature of the afternoon was the presence of two charter members of the church, Mrs. Eugenie Cooper of 315 South Second street, Alhambra, and Mrs. Annie E. Rose, 727 West Thirtieth street, Los Angeles, who assisted in the founding of the church fifty-three years ago, and who are now the only surviving charter members.

STREET PAVING ORDERS

The City Council has ordered the permanent paving of Jefferson street from McClintock avenue to Vermont avenue, and of Mission Road from Huntington Drive north to North Broadway. Protests against the improvement will be heard by the Council December 3.

"SAY IT WITH CIGARS"

"The Woman" Declares Fair Sex Find Attribute Lacking Until Now, But "The Man" Advises Femininity to Dip Snuff—It's Individual, Anyway

A recent dispatch from London told of the formation of a club by women to popularize cigar smoking by members of the fair sex. Regular meetings of the unique club are held and politics and other matters of grave importance are discussed. One of the rules of the club is an obligation to smoke in public and lots are drawn to select members for this purpose. The club was founded by an exponent of feminism, who invited a number of friends to tea, handed out cigars and delivered an address on "Doom of Male Control." Feeling that such a marked step in the advancement (or retreat) of women's rights merited discussion, The Times has asked two well-known writers—a man and woman who prefer to keep their identity secret—to express their opinion on the matter. Their reactions follow:

THE WOMAN

It may sound a trifle outre for women to smoke cigars. But oh, we do so want to be as wonderful as the men.

Humbly we realize that the men have some attribute lacking in us. It seemed to be smoke. We hoped cigarettes would do. They did help. Suffrage soon followed cigarettes for women.

But it seemed desirable to combine it with short hair. That helped a bit. Women broke into all sorts of political jobs when bobs came in—even if the long-haired ones mostly got 'em.

But the most authoritative political gentlemen do seem to smoke big black cigars.

These British dames who are trying out the cigar idea are described as "the wives and daughters of wealthy business men," probably glorious Rotarians. Their men probably have an enviable superiority complex and, their female appendages, after psyching them thoughtfully, naturally feel that cigars may be the explanation. Very well then. They want to feel as superior and wonderful as their men. It's a very laudable ambition.

THE MAN

A custom of many years among the flappers of Mandalay, the Philippines and various sections of Malaysia, cigar smoking by women is not new stuff, but it remained for the feminist movement to get up a club to further the custom. One wonders why women do not do anything as individuals, in the so-called civilized countries. In the uncivilized they undoubtedly smoke because they enjoy smoking, and no club is necessary.

Men never organized a club except for the purpose of having a respectable place in which to drink rum, but ladies seem to have to organize to do all sorts of things, including the reading of papers on "Doom of Male Control." Women seem to be afraid that if they do not present a united front on smoking, betel chewing, snuff dipping, the precise size of hats and tilt of hat brim, length of skirts and the like the men won't marry them. So they have clubs.

Of all the bad habits women might as well acquire while they are about it, snuff dipping is the one that recommends itself the most. It gives such a lovely color to the teeth.

World Festival Presentation to Start Tonight

Featuring a cast of principals engaged from professional stage and screen talent, the Festival of Nations will stage its premiere tonight in the Polytechnic High School, Hope and Washington streets, under auspices of the Council on International Relations.

Four scenes that will represent the council's plea for world peace are features of the festival, showing colorful and exotic scenes enacted by native Russian, Japanese, Chinese and Latin American actors and actresses, dancers, singers and musicians.

Dr. Rufus B. Von KleinSmid, president of the University of Southern California, is head of the Council on International Relations. Chalmers Brooks Fithian, dean of the National Pageant Association, was engaged to direct the festival.

A matinee will be given next Saturday, in addition to a performance every night this week.

The entire Los Angeles consular corps, with Count Tolstoy as the representative of Russia, will witness the opening performance.

The production is directed by Chalmers Brooks Fithian. In the prologue Claire McDoell, Charles Hill Mailes, Lambert Baker and Carlisle Tupper take the parts of the four principal symbolical characters.

Keyes to Call Miss Shaffer and Mrs. Frame

Cleaner Identifies Garment as Evangelist's

Fire of mysterious origin swept through the photographic department of The Times yesterday morning destroying a large number of negatives of pictures taken during the Aimee Semple McPherson disappearance investigation and the conspiracy charge hearing.

Investigators declared the flames burst out immediately below a box of McPherson negatives which were on a table. A large number of negatives which cannot be replaced were destroyed.

The origin of the fire is a mystery but the flames were prevented from spreading or doing serious damage by automatic water fireplugs in the room. Damage was nominal.

Two women, whose names received prominent mention during the Aimee Semple McPherson conspiracy hearing, are scheduled to be questioned today by Dist.-Atty. Keyes in connection with two new important developments in the case which, the prosecutor asserts, more definitely links the name of the evangelist with Kenneth G Ormiston, fugitive radio engineer, and the Benedict cottage at Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Two women are Miss Emma Schaffer, the evangelist's private secretary, and Mrs. Elizabeth Frame of Santa Monica, close friend of the evangelist and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, according to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Dennison. Mrs. Frame, the State charges, acted as go-getween for Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman while the latter was admittedly attempting to perpetrate the Carmel "Miss X" hoax.

According to Mr. Dennison, Miss Schaffer is to be questioned on two important phases of the case which developed following the finding of a trunk, supposedly Ormiston's at a New York hotel, and the seizure of the "Wuff" love letter, which Mr. Keyes says, was written by the religious leader and sent to Ormiston in New York.

DRESS IDENTIFIED

The questioning of Miss Schaffer is considered highly important following the asserted identification of a dress in the trunk seized in the East as Mrs. McPherson's. According to Mr. Keyes, this dress was identified as Mrs. McPherson's through a dry cleaner's mark on a small tag attached to the inside right shoulder of a silk-cord dress. This dress, with the other garments, is en route to Mr. Keyes in the trunk.

Detective Horn of Mr. Keyes's staff informed Mr. Keyes the cleaner's mark was placed in the dress by the Fanset Dye Works on Glendale Boulevard, and that the records of the dye cleaning establishment are said to show that the dress was billed to Miss Schaffer and brought to their establishment last November by Dorothy Ayres, who said she was a stenographer at Angelus Temple.

QUESTIONED ON TAG

Miss Schaffer is to be questioned concerning the laundry mark and also will be questioned about the "Wuff" letter, Mr. Dennison stated. The purpose of the questioning of Mrs. Frame is said to involve the "Wuff" letter.

The calling of the two women to the District Attorney's office for questioning was considered extremely important in view of Mr. Keyes's assertion he knows the identity of the person who, he avers, mailed the letter, and that he knows the identity of the "E" person mentioned in the letter.

"I'll be K. O. unless 'E' breaks—and God forbid that happening," reads one sentence of the "Wuff" letter. The District Attorney asserted he is confident he knows the identity of "E."

RECORDS SEIZED

Through the identification of the dress by the cleaners' mark, Mr. Keyes asserts, he has proof Mrs. McPherson was the woman companion of Ormiston during the latter's ten-day stay at the Carmel cottage last May.

The records of the cleaning establishment were seized by Detective Horn and are now in possession of Mr. Keyes as evidence in the case.

According to the records, the dress with the laundry mark was brought to the establishment on November 13, 1925, which was on a Friday. Edward F. Federhardt, superintendent of the cleaning plant, told Detective Horn there were three tassels on each side of the front of the dresses when it was received. During the cleaning process, he said, one of the tassels was lost.

Mr. Federhardt said the tassell was later found but that Miss Schaffer failed to call for it. The superintendent promised to turn over the tassel to Detective Horn today.

PROOF HELD STRONG

This proof will be so strong, he said, inasmuch as one of the tassels on the dress in the trunk with the laundry mark is also missing and that a comparison of the tassels will readily show to whom the dress belongs in addition to the proof gained through the laundry mark.

As soon as the trunk arrives, and it is expected to reach Los Angeles tomorrow, Mr. Keyes's investigators will check further to determine the ownership of the other dresses in the trunk. This is expected to be accomplished through the records of at least two Los Angeles shops where a number of dresses and a pair of shoes were purchased.

The Lancer

by Harry Carr

WE ARE informed by an excited press agent that the new Vitaphone will preserve our outpourings of genius for posterity.

What the p. a. really said was that our genius "will now be immortal."

But alas, the generations to come will be more interested in their own affairs, and in their own genius.

THEY'LL RUST RIGHT THERE

Which is well. In the first place, I can't think of anything of this generation that needs saving—unless it would be the editorial comments by Rose and Steve on the McPherson kidnaping case.

It would be a rough joke on the innocent generations to come to hand them some of our brand of genius in cans. All that I could hope for them, in all Christian charity, is that they couldn't find the can opener.

HENRY'S SPEECH

Henry Ford has given birth to his first public speech. It was forty-nine words long.

In other words, Henry didn't have anything to say. So he didn't say anything. Which seems to be the groundwork for a great and impressive oratorical career.

Orators, generally speaking, never have anything to say. But they say it anyhow.

DECEMBER AND MAY

The average age of marriage in California is 25. Which is 14 years younger than the old Greek philosopher says a man ought to marry.

Aristotle fixes the right age for the blushing bridegroom at 39; the girl at 19 or 20.

With that kind of start, he feels that a man has some sort of half-way chance to get a vote in the affairs of the household.

It is certainly a fact that some of the happiest marriages I have ever known have been December and May affairs.

When they are both 25, the wedding bell is simply a gong calling them to their corners for the fight. An old dog seldom squabbles with a pup.

BEAUTY CLASSES

It rather takes your breath away to learn that one of the public schools is starting a course in beautifying—

Classes to be addressed, no doubt, by the learned professor holding the Chair of Lip Stick. To be examined for promotion by the learned savant who lectures on dabbing the nose with the powder rag.

But hy-hum! If girls are resolved to get the blush of youth at the corner drug store, they may as well learn how to put it on without looking as though they had fought a tornado in a paint store.

OLD LUCKY BALDWIN

Old Lucky Baldwin was one of the unusual and extraordinary characters of California. With his lurid love affairs—his racing stable and his lawsuits.

To the last, the old man kept on hoping that he was going to find another Rey El Santa Anita—or an Emperor Norfolk among his racing colts.

The last time I saw him, he drew me to one side; and told me that he had found the great colt of all time.

Old Lucky never realized his real luck. His great ranches—the Felipe Lugo, El Puente, Santa Anita and

As important a decision as the voters of Los Angeles county will be called upon to make tomorrow lies in their choice of Sheriff.

The two candidates between whom this choice must be made are George K. Home and William I. Traeger, incumbent.

Capt. Home was a member of the Los Angeles Police Department for twenty-two years, where he rose from patrolman to Chief.

During his career he solved numerous sensational crime mysteries that gave him an international reputation as a detective of unusual ability.

He arrested the murderers of Patrolman Hathaway, Motorcycle Officer Kronchnabel, Detective Downey, and others.

He assisted in the apprehension of James B. and John J. McNamara and their conviction for the bombing of the Los Angeles Times, Oct. 1, 1910.

He was highly complimented by the late Dist.-Atty. Woolwine for his work in apprehending Charles W. McGwire for the dynamiting of the home of Attorney Oscar Lawyer in 1910.

The administration of Sheriff Traeger has not been remarkable for either economy or efficiency.

The escape of prisoners has been so frequent as to be a recurrent scandal. Notable among such escapes were those of Clara Phillips, the hammer murderess, who got away to Honduras and whose return cost the county a large sum, those of Herb Wilson and confederates and—since the new jail was occupied—numerous others.

Two-score prominent Los Angeles citizens have joined in the following statement, appealing to the voters of the Third Supervisoral District to cast their ballots at tomorrow's election for Sidney T. Graves to represent that district on the governing board of the county:

The statement follows:

"We believe that, to protect their interests, the citizens of the Third Supervisoral District should elect Sidney T. Graves to the Board of Supervisors at the election Tuesday and we appeal to these citizens to cast their ballots for Mr. Graves.

"He is a life-long resident of Los Angeles and knows its needs. He is thoroughly acquainted with the Third Supervisoral District and its problems. He is a man with the perception and ability necessary to analyze and solve those problems.

"During his long business career in Los Angeles Mr. Graves has deservedly gained a reputation as a man of efficiency, honesty and conscience. He has that high moral standing in the community absolutely necessary for a public official. He stands for all that is best in government and in citizenship.

"For eight years he has served the Sixty-third Assembly District at Sacramento with more than ordinary faithfulness, ability and distinction His fellow-members of the Legislature, particularly of the Los Angeles county delegation, respect and indorse him No further indorsement should be necessary.

"The Third District needs a real business man, an executive of honesty, ability and integrity to represent it on the Board of Supervisors. Mr. Graves is that man and not only the district but the county at large will benefit by his election.

"The county government spends millions of dollars yearly. It is going through a period just now when there are many public improvements, many weighty questions of public policy to be decided.

"Mr. Graves, we believe, is a man with the ability to decide such questions rightly and with the welfare of the county paramount. The county needs exceptional public servants and Mr. Graves meets the requirements."

Antripating a State and countywide victory which will sweep all the party candidates into office, the Los Angeles County Republican Central Committee will hold "open house" at its headquarters in the basement of the Stowell Hotel tomorrow evening, where returns from the general election will be announced, according to a statement at the headquarters.

Eighteen Glendale ministers and religious leaders have united in a statement praising W. H. Evans of that city, Republican candidate for Congress in the Ninth District, at tomorrow's election, as a moral leader of force and reputation in his community and an earnest and loyal advocate of prohibition.

If he is sent to Congress from the Ninth District, Mr. Evans will give his forceful and earnest support to the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, it was declared in the statement.

Col. Robert E. Frith of Monrovia, Federal prohibition director for the district of Southern California, has given his unqualified support to the candidacy of Mr. Evans.

The indorsement of Mr. Evans by Col. Frith was contained in a letter from the prohibition director to the candidate.

Bringing to a close the intensive campaign for re-election that he has conducted throughout the First District since the primary, Supervisor Cogswell will address a mass-meeting in the Maywood neighborhood tonight and indications are that a gratifying turnout of voters will signify their support of the senior member of the Board of Supervisors.

The meeting will be in the Packard Building, 915 Slauson avenue, Maywood, and speakers announced, in addition to Supervisor Cogswell, are Leonard Wilson, county commander of the American Legion, and former Mayor Louis N. Whealton of Long Beach.

Almost unanimous support has been given the county bond issue of $5,000,000 for the acquisition of land in the Civic Center, it was announced yesterday by the committee in charge of the work. Indorsement has recently been given by a committee including Mayor Cryer, the Board of Supervisors, and many city and county officials. Among the list of organizations supporting the measure is the following:

Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Los Angeles City Council, Affiliated Improvement Associations, Los Angeles Traffic Commission, Hermosa Chamber of Commerce, Los Angeles City Planning Commission, Alhambra City Council, San Gabriel Trustees, Central Labor Council, Pomona Chamber of Commerce, City Planning Association, Long Beach City Council, Pasadena Chamber of Commerce, County Association of City Planners, Glendale Planning Commission, San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, Hollenbeck Heights Improvement Association, Pomona City Council, Glendale City Council, Biltmore Improvement Association, Medical Women's Society of Los Angeles county, Artesia Chamber of Commerce, San Dimas Chamber of Commerce, Westlake Hills Association, Lincoln Square Civic Club, Redondo Beach Chamber of Commerce, Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

Kimpton Ellis and Joseph W. Vickers, the latter recently appointed Superior Court judge by Gov. Richardson, yesterday announced their indorsement of the Bar Association's list for Superior Court judges, full term. These candidates are Judges Hollzer, Burnell and Keeler, Municipal Judge Westover and Judge pro tem. Ruben S. Schmidt. Ellis and Vickers also indorsed Douglas L. Edmonds for short term, Superior Court, Supreme Court Justice Curtis and Appelate Justice Houser for the long term Supreme Court posts, and Supreme Court Justice Finlayson to succeed himself for the short term.

A statement setting forth the attitude of the executive committee, Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, upon measures up on the State ballot and denying that any action had been taken indorsing No. 28, the Federal plan for reapportionment, was issued yesterday, as follows, over the signatures of Mesdames J. B. Lorbeer, W. W. Slaydon, John S. Thayer, Charles S. McKelvy and T. G. Lewis:

"We are cognizant of the fact that Los Angeles district clubs have received through the mail a letter from the Federal Reapportionment Committee of San Francisco, including a resolution passed by the executive committee of the State Federation.

"We wish to call your attention to the fact that the executive committee is not the executive board, but consists only of the State president and the two secretaries, all of San Francisco, and is not therefore representative of the State.

"The resolution does not express the sentiment of Los Angeles district, which is more than one-half the membership of the entire State. Los Angeles district board took no action relative to either No. 20 or No. 28, for, while undoubtedly the majority, possibly all of the board, believe that No. 20 is just and that it assures only just representation, yet, stretching as our district does over five counties, we felt it wiser and fairer to definitely take stand on moral issues only.

"The district board took action to oppose No. 6 and No. 9 and the president's council indorsed No. 10. On all other measures we have endeavored to give bith sides of the question."

Dr. R. A. Millikan, famous scientist of the California Institute of Technology, yesterday emphasized the importance of public support for the plan to erect new State University and State office buildings, as presented by Proposition No. 10 on tomorrow's ballot. In the belief of Dr. Millikan the requirements of expansion must be met and progress already attained kept pace with if California is to bear the full harvest of her enterprise and prosperity.

In a general rally to the support of Proposition No. 20, guaranteeing reapportionment on a basis of population, many new indorsements are pouring into the All-Parties Reapportionment Committee, 246 South Hill street, while hundreds of individuals are volunteering active help in rolling up a big majority for the measure at the polls tomorrow, and in defeating Proposition No. 28, which seeks reapportionment on a basis of acreage.

An appeal for a "No" vote on Proposition No. 9, the repeal of the Wright Act, was issued yesterday by Prohibition Administrator Frith, as follows:

"The people of California Tuesday will vote on whether to retain the Wright Act as a law of this State or repeal it. I can not too strongly urge those who believe in law-enforcement to stand squarely behind the Wright Act and vote "No" on this amendment. To revoke this act would be the greatest possible handicap on the officers you have selected to enforce law and order. A repeal of the Wright Act will simply strengthen the criminal class. The public is only too prone to criticise enforcement officers in the execution of their duties and by taking away this power it reduces their efficiency just that much more. Certainly the people of California want to make this State a place where they can reside with comfort and instill into their children high ideals and respect for law. I cannot condemn too strongly this vicious attempt to destroy the efforts of the self-respecting people when the Wright Act was passed. To repeal this act is opening the doors to wholesale violation of law and order."

J. B. Lippincott, consulting engineer, who for a period of seven years was a Park Commissioner of Los Angeles in collaboration with H W. O'Melveny and H. W. Keller, stated yesterday that he is decidedly in favor of provision of $8,000,000 of bonds for county parks, one-half of this issue to be devoted to the acquiring of public beaches.

The final message of appeal for full support of Proposition No. 20-A, a measure which provides for a $1,-800,000 bond issue for more municipal playgrounds, was sent out yesterday by the Volunteer Citizens' Campaign Committee. This bond issue has been indorsed by more than 300 Los Angeles organizations, including the Board of Education, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Affiliated Improvement Association, Third Supervisor District Chamber of Commerce, Central Labor Council, Los Angeles Federation Parent-Teacher Associations, church, welfare and civic organizations and practically all industrial associations.

Four defeated candidates for the Superior Court bench, Robert Abbott, Elliott H. Barrett, Sloan Pitzer and John Luter, yesterday joined in a statement to their friends, asking support for Judge Myron Westover.

They declare Judge Westover's legal knowledge, courteous treatment of witnesses and his excellent record in the Municipal Court entitles him to the vote of every thinking citizen.

"We urge you to vote on Tuesday and to cast your ballot for a man who will lend credit to the Superior Court."

The West Hollywood Chamber of Commerce and the Florence Chamber of Commerce are the latest organizations to indorse county bond issue No. 2, which provides $5,000,000 to pay the public's share of eliminating dangerous grade crossings in Los Angeles county.

Initiative Measure No. 17, which provides for an amendment to the State Constitution permitting the reading of the Bible in the public schools, will pass by a reasonable majority, according to the prediction of Leroy H. Civille, executive secretary of the Bible Protective Association of California, who has received reports from workers for the measure in all parts of the State.

FIGURES CONFOUND NORTH

Report of State Controller Discloses Why We Are Entitled to Fair Share of Roads

By a coincidence which almost certainly was not intentional, the annual State Controller's summary of the financial condition of the several counties of California reached this city yesterday, two days before election.

No more powerful argument has been advanced during the campaign for Proposition No. 8, which proposes to give Southern California her dues in the matter of State highways—road-building and maintenance funds in proportion to her wealth and tax rolls—in contradistinction to No. 4, which proposes to continue and aggravate the present situa on, which collects two-thirds of the money from Southern California and gives it one-third for its roads.

Under the provi ions of No. 8, the thirteen southern counties are to receive only one-half of the available road funds. The proposition is scouted by the north on the ground that the south is asking far more than her share. In the light of this contention, the figures of State Controller Riley, a northern man, are illuminating.

THEY SHOW THAT OF THE TOTAL WEALTH OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, PLACED BY THE CONTROLLER AT $7,664,457,974, THE THIRTEEN SOUTHERN COUNTIES WHICH COMPRISE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA HAVE $4,090,807,259, OR CONSIDERABLY MORE THAN HALF. The remaining forty-five counties have $3,573,640,715 of the total.

The table further shows that Los Angeles county is first in real estate valuation, first in value of personal property and first in total wealth of all the counties. The value of real estate in Los Angeles county is placed at $1,534,333,150, while San Francisco county, the nearest contender, has real estate values of only $338,555,620.

Personal property values of the same two counties are listed as follows: Los Angeles county, $391,936,-745; San Francisco county, $106,570,-196. The total value of property as returned by the various county auditors shows Los Angeles county leading by a wide margin, with the following figures quoted: Los Angeles county, $3,013,299,305; San Francisco, $981,589,421; Alameda, $423,-519,899; Kern, $184,850,240, and Fresno, $182,480,313.

unfavorable to Southern California and adding another cent to the gasoline tax.

APPORTIONMENT ISSUE

Reapportionment is represented by two measures. No. 20 would apportion the State on a population basis, while No. 28 would apportion the State Senate by acreage and the Assembly by population.

No. 3 would place a 2-cent tax on oleomargarine. There are four taxexemption measures: No. 11 would exempt secondary schools; No. 12 would give exemptions to all veterans; No. 22 would exempt young forests; No. 25 would exempt cemetery lots.

No. 2 deals with the taxation of highway carriers and No. 7 deals with taxation of short-line steam railroads. No. 13 widens the suffrage. No. 5 grants State officers higher salaries, No. 14 deals with capital stock increase in corporations, No. 15 deals with school district organization, No. 19 provides for the partial retirement of judges, No. 26 gives the Appellate Court the right to take testimony, and No. 27 would create a judicial council.

COUNTY AND CITY BONDS

The county has proposed three bond issues totaling $18,000,000. They are $5,000,000 for grade-crossing elimination, $5,000,000 for civic center lands, and $8,000,000 for public parks and beaches. A fourth question proposes the creation of seven supervisorial districts instead of five, as at present.

The city propositions have appended the letter "A" to differentiate them from the State measures. There are nineteen charter amendments, five bond issues, totaling $4,750,000 and one stra

HOME DISCORD MISLEADS BOYS

Juvenile Delinquency Laid to Parental Troubles

Proper Training Missing, Judge Keeler Says

Crave for Excitement and Thrills Also Blamed

Lack of control in the home is the rincipal contributing factor in ju- enile delinquency cases, it is shown a report issued by Superior Judge Keeler covering three months of ob- servations made while he was sitting s judge of the local Juvenile Court. According to the report, 37 per nt of the boys who came before idge Keeler last summer blamed eir troubles on friction between emselves and stepparents. One- urth of the juvenile cases were aced to lack of proper home super- sion, 25 per cent to bad associates d mental disorders were held re- onsible for the remaining 15 per nt.

"In considering a cure for juvenile linquency," read the report, "we ust first take into consideration the me environment of the child.

"Divorce is one of the greatest ohlems in this respect. Quite fre- ently divorce, especially where ere are children, results in the eaking of every aspect of home en- ronment. The children may be jes- d back and forth by fate, first to e parent and then to that parent, d they grow into adolescence with- t the benefit of the parental co- eration that comes with a happy me life and implicit understanding tween father and mother.

NO UNDERSTANDING

"As the figures show, many of the rs who come before our courts me trouble, with stepparents as e cause which starts them on the d that leads to Juvenile Court. is is perhaps due to the fact that many such instances there is no pathetic understanding and co- eration between the boy and his pparent."

Judge Keeler went on to say that per playground and recreational ilities, especially in crowded cities, re a tendency to remedy these cases. ing from bad association.

Children crave excitement and rills," the report continued. "If y can't get them in the line of lesome recreation, we find them rning to mischief, which often ds to crime and the reform schools court supervision.

It is evident, therefore, that the e cities must take means to see t their youthful residents have ple opportunity to expend the ir energies in a wholesome man- in health-building play and ex- se. In the smaller communities in the farming districts, the dren find an outlet in hunting, ing, swimming and other out- r forms of recreation, which are n denied to the children of fami- residing in the more metropoli- cities."

FROM OTHER STATES

hat the spirit of wanderlust, h leads many thousands of boys y from home every year, also is onsible for a large number of nile offenses, is evidenced by the that the report shows that 85 cent of the boys sent to the ion School of Industry at Ione from other States, and that an- r 11 per cent have not been idents of California for more than ear.

dge Keeler believes fathers and hers should try to gain a sym- hetic understanding of their chil- in all matters, that they might e the home a more attractive e to youth than the "love of road that often beckons with a promise of adventure and glory, to lead to crime and a blighted in the nation's penal institu- ."

TEACHERS' VISIT HIGHLY LAUDED

Mexican Educators Voice Approval to Plan

Interchange as Fostering Good Will Urged

Benefits Given Publicity by College Attendants

vidences of international good will engendered when a number of exican public-school teachers were attendance at Claremont College st summer are replete in articles Mexican publications and in let- s received here from the teachers ce they resumed their daily work home.

"It is to be hoped that these ex- sions which have so elevated the achers' spirits will be repeated from ar to year," says El Regional: "The overnment paid the expenses of the achers and it is to be praised."

El Regional outlines a plan begin- ing with the sending of school di- ectors and says, "after the directors e teachers should go."

"Would that this plausible ex- mple might be imitated by other overnments and that in this ealthful interchange between Mex- o and the great country to the orth a greater effort might be made give to it all the amplitude it erits," says Baja California Ilids- nda. "Attendance at the schools has been in every way beneficial and ighly profitable."

The appreciation of the different ctivities of the life of a neighbor- g country, the study of its lan- uage, the visits to its many beauti- ul and interesting places, the les- ons received, the courtesy, the hos- itality and the attentions of the merican people are things whose alue will never be lost," Maria uisa Chagoyan, one of the student- teachers, said in a letter received here since she resumed her work in Mexican schools.

In a letter from Luz Anda De Al- faro is the following:

"All the Mexican teachers will be better able to appreciate today the efforts which our respective govern- ments are making to extend the in- finite frontier of the spirit in the noble ideal of a better understand- ing of both countries."

"When we realize," says a letter from Margarita Diaz De Ruiz, an- other student, "that we do not hate each other, on the contrary, we learn to appreciate one another and love our neighbors as ourselves. I sug- gest that every State in our Republic send as many students as pos- sible next year. It will be of great value to both nations."

From Prof. C. Aguilion, who was here, came a letter in which he said:

"We are very glad to learn that this plan of exchanging students be- tween the two countries will con- tinue next summer and for many summers. On both sides we can learn much and derive much benefit. We do our very best to show our Amer- ican friends, in the best and most honest way we can to extend friend- ship and fellowship between the two countries."

"The idea is to be applauded," wrote Angel Arriola, "and the inter- change is essentially advantageous for all and I am sure that in view of the beneficial report of those sent from Sonora and Baja California the governments of those States, those of other Mexican States and even groups of professors will aid in the enter- prise."

"Real understanding and estima- tion were established between Amer- icans and Mexicans," Ida Appendini wrote, "and I hope that this inter- national exchange of teachers and students will continue to grow."

LANDLUBBERS SCUTTLE TAR

Sailor "Boarded" by Auto Pirates and Cash Taken; Grocer and Pedestrian Robbed

A grocer was robbed on the way home from his store, a pedestrian was followed into his apartment and beaten, and a sailor was "hove to" in the center of the downtown business district and "scuttled" by bandits early yesterday morning according to reports to the police.

Harry Glatt reported he had just left his grocery store at 101 North Western avenue and had reached Wilshire Boulevard and Oxford ave- nue when two men in an automobile drove up to the curb and, threaten- ing him with revolvers, robbed him of $320 in cash.

Six men, stated H. Reyes, followed him into his room at 430 North Hill street and, after beating him severe- ly, robbed him of $50.

The sailor, J. S. Janis of the U.S.S. California at anchor in Los Angeles Harbor, was walking with a woman friend at Fourth and Main streets shortly after midnight, he told po- lice, when an auto swerved up to the curb and four men leaped out. They jumped upon him, he reported, and while three of them pummeled him with their fists the fourth took $2 in cash from him and $10 from his companion.

Several newsboys obtained the li- cense number of the car and this was turned over to the police for in- vestigation.

TWO WOMEN TO FACE QUIZZING

yesterday for a statement concern- ing the asserted identification of the dress. In her sermon on Saturday night she referred to the trunk epi- sode as a "frame-up" and said it would have been possible for news- paper reporters to carry off her dresses as they had access to her home She also hinted it might have been a woman who carried off the dresses.

As a result of her sermon state- ments Attorney Hahn, counsel for Mrs. Wiseman, issued a strong state- ment yesterday.

"Mrs. Wiseman is out of town rest- ing today and I don't consider it worth while bothering her about the ridiculous accusation of Mrs. McPher- son," the attorney said. "It is just as false that Mrs. Wiseman stole Mrs. McPherson's clothes and put them in the trunk as it is silly that newspaper reporters removed them from the temple mansion."

All evidence pertaining to the Mc- Pherson "avenger notes" will be giv- en to United States postal author- ities for investigation should Judge Samuel Blake fail to hold the evan- gelist to trial in Superior Court on conspiracy charges, it became known yesterday through the Federal pos- tal inspector's office.

Mr. Keyes has reserved the bulk of evidence for his own use until the close of the hearing.

With the new evidence tending to link Ormiston's name with the events surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. McPherson, it was recalled yes- terday that Mrs. Ruth N. Ormiston, wife of the radio man, who is now in Australia at the home of her father, some time ago announced her intention of returning to Los Angeles early in 1927 and instituting suit for divorce. It is believed the events of the last few days will hasten Mrs. Ormiston's trip.

W. I. Gilbert, chief of counsel for Mrs. McPherson, was expected to sub- mit the defense brief this morning to Municipal Judge Blake. Later in the day Mr. Keyes was to submit the State's brief. The opposing attorneys are to appear before Judge Blake on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock to submit arguments on the briefs.

It was freely predicted Judge Blake will render his decision, after hearing the arguments Wednesday, as to whether the evangelist and her co- defendants will be held to the Super- ior Court to face a jury on conspiracy charges. Mr. Keyes has indicated he will also ask that Mrs. McPherson be bound over on other charges which, he said, were developed by the testi- mony given during the hearing.

PASTOR PROMISES TO NAME CHAMPION LIAR

Aimee Semple McPherson will name "the biggest liar in Los Angeles" at 3 p.m. next Sunday, she promised her congregation at Angelus Temple last night. Smiles and knowing glances in the audience indicated that the ac- tual naming will furnish no sensa- tion to Angelus Temple.

The evangelist started out by say- ing she didn't intend to say any- thing about the trial. Then she re- ferred to the feminine garments and red hair found in a trunk be- lieved to belong to Kenneth G. Ormiston and ascribed to her by Dist.-Atty. Keyes, saying they weren't hers and she doesn't know anything about them. The thing is a frame-up, she asserted, describing the trunk phase as the last straw to the patience of her followers. Now they will not believe anything said against her, she declared, amid loud applause.

Mrs. McPherson asserted that a newspaper, which, she said, was mak- ing millions of dollars out of her trial, had offered $1,000,000 to some one to disprove her story. She did not name the paper.

Mrs. McPherson supported one and denounced two of the propositions to be voted on at the general election tomorrow. She came out for the placing of the Bible in the schools, saying it would not necessarily force the reading of the Bible, but would merely put a copy into each school. Reading it, she said, would be at the option of the teacher and such organizations as the Parent-Teachers' Association.

The evangelist urged a vote against the measures to legalize race-track betting and to repeal the Wright Act. If the racing amendment is adopted, she declared, the other States will de- ride California. She warned against passing a measure that would give the gamblers a chance to run the State. Speaking on the Wright Act repeal, she said it would weaken the prohibition law, which she believed should be strengthened.

Mrs. McPherson's sermon was on the subject of the good and the bad heart. She illustrated from two large drawings of hearts placed on the plat- form. She announced 156 persons had joined the temple during the day.

At the beginning of the afternoon service Choir Leader Nichols mounted the platform and stated the choir "had a drop in the bucket" offering, which he handed Mrs. McPherson. Holding a piece of paper aloft, the evangelist announced "it's a check for $500 which has been kept a secret for me, collected by the choir Mon- day night to apply to the defense fund—may the Lord bless the choir."

It was then announced the pro- ceeds of the afternoon collection would be applied to the defense fund, and Mrs. McPherson requested dol- lar contributions. It was not an- nounced how much money the ushers collected.

STOLID GERMAN? NAY, NOT SO!

Film Arrival's Greetings Effusive

Welcoming Recruit

Harold Lloyd, Emil Jannings and Mildred Davis (Mrs. Harold Lloyd.)

THREE hundred persons waited an hour for a past-due train to wel- come Emil Jannings, German film actor, his wife and members of their party at the Santa Fe station yesterday afternoon.

The actor's greeting to many of his men friends whom he had known abroad was effusive. He hugged them and kissed each.

Born in Brooklyn, Jannings with his parents moved to Germany when he was only a year old, so he is a bit short on the English language; he spoke through any and all of half a dozen interpreters.

Yes, California is wonderful; it far exceds his expectations, he said in German.

"I shall make my home in Ameri- sa," it was translated.

"How do you keep in such mar- velous condition?" asked a fair ad- mirer.

"Just walking—walking and box- ing." Mrs. Jannings spoke German, French and occasionally a slight ac- cented English.

Was she intending to enter pic- tures herself?

"No, no, I have great big baby— one in movies—that is enough. What would it be when he come home from work to find me away—in the movies, too? Ugh! No," she smiled.

Jannings has signed with Para- mount.

Among those to greet the party were Ernst Lubitsch, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, Baron Kocsian, Sam Jaffe, production manager for Lasky West Coast studios; E Lloyd Sheldon, editor in chief for Famous Players- Lasky Corporation; a score of Euro- pean film folk who knew Jannings abroad and forty or more screen ac- tors and actresses.

WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE ON CROSS-COMPLAINT

Community property worth $75,000 is listed by Mrs. Martha Crayne in a cross-complaint to the divorce suit of Daniel E. Crayne. Crayne charged that his wife was unreasonably jeal- us of him, and interfered with his business. Mrs. Crayne countered with an accusation that Crayne was in love with a certain Myrtle Cox. She is represented by Attorneys Milton Co- hen and C. O. Bacon.

Note how Parker Desk Pens Lie Level Without Drying!

Out of harm's way by day—Secure in your drawer by night

Pens with Over-size Ink Capacity—
Non-Breakable Permanite Barrels—25-Year Points

Produced by Geo. S. Parker, originator of the Lucky Curve Feed and the classic Duofold Pens

ONLY in Parker Fountain Pen Desk Sets do the pens lie level (as well as tilt and stand upright) yet remain moist with ink, ready to write.

We, as others, first tried resting the pens in rigid upright cups to keep the points from drying. But we found upright pens in danger of every arm that reaches over the desk.

Besides, men want their pens to lie level so the set can be slipped in a drawer at the close of day and locked up.

We built some fifteen models trying to solve the problem.

Then one day our efforts were richly rewarded. We devised the Ball-and-Socket Holder, and in less than three months a waiting world ordered Parker Desk Sets far in excess of our capacity.

Consider yourself lucky that you've waited for this innovation. And lose no time in selecting your model from the nearest Parker Dealer.

A Nebraska prisoner who ate nothing but bread and water for two weeks gained three pounds. This will give the mere thought of a bread-and-water sentence a new terror in the minds of many readers.

A RAY OF HOPE
The new cathode ray announced by scientists is reported to grow hair where hair has not grown for years. This will be glad news to many bright and shining pates.

CROSS-LEGS
Girls should not sit cross-legged; for it produces curvature of the spine, says Dr. Beatrice N. Phillips of Kalamazoo, Mich. If you cannot sit cross-legged, what is the use of a boy-bob and pair of pants?

HELIUM
Synthetic helium has been made out of hydrogen gas by two German scientists, Prof. Paneth and Dr. Peters, of Berlin University. Has it come to that? We cannot even have our helium without a substitute that is just as good.

ANOTHER QUEEN
A woman who was a nurse in the war has been elected commander of a post in the American Legion in Boston. However, there are queens who are commanders in American homes without the formality of an election.

GOLDEN ROD
And now it has been discovered by botanists and physiologists that golden rod does not produce hay fever, after all. Because it has been caught in the bad company of ragweed it has gotten the blame. It will take some time it live it down.

CHESHIRE CATS
A club has been formed by wives and daughters of some business men of Wallasey, Cheshire, Eng., to popularize cigar smoking among the sex. They take an obligation to do it in public. Their ultimate objective is the "doom of male control." Could these be some of the original Cheshire cats?

"UNCIVILIZED NOISES"
Angora, the capital of Turkey and also of cats, has issued a municipal decree against "uncivilized noises." Under this head come shoutings of goatherds and cowherds and also the voice of the town crier announcing lost articles. They might introduce some civilized noises like motor cops snorting after their prey.

"BURN A BALE"
Once during the war a slump in cotton occurred and South Carolina started the slogan, "Buy a bale." With the cotton again in the dumps the slogan now suggested is "Burn a bale." The plan is to burn 4,000,000 bales on an agreed day all over the South. There appears to be a blessing of scarcity as well as a blessing of plenty.

COP GOLF
A golf course is to be laid out for the Chicago cops. The objective announced is to teach them to be gentlemen. Gangsters do hate to be arrested by roughnecks. It grinds the gentle soul of a gunman to have a cop say, "Whadja yu think yu are?" Chicago might put dress suits on her police and arm them with squirt guns loaded with rose water.

A SPACIOUS COUNTRY
Including the recently acquired territory of Wrangell Island, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics now covers over 8,000,000 square miles, from which not so many as eight ideas have emanated since the revolution. But then a whole idea to the 1,000,000 square miles would be altogether too much to expect from a country ruled by Socialists.

DID YOU KNOW?
Who knows that a Presbyterian missionary is responsible for one of California's great industries, asks a writer in the bulletin of the Central Brazil Mission. Bahia, Brazil, is the native home of the finest oranges in the world; it is the place of origin of the seedless orange. In 1870 Rev. F. C. Schneider, the first Presbyterian missionary to Bahia, secured and sent to California slips of the seedless orange.

WHY, INDEED?
Stefansson says he believes that when a thorough study is made of that square mile of 10,000-foot-deep ocean in which the North Pole lies it will be found to contain as many shrimps, fish and seals as an average square mile of equally deep ocean equally far from land. But why carry a lot of fishing tackle all the way to the North Pole when the tuna bite so freely over at Catalina?

LEADING TO THE QUEEN
Out of the rumors, intrigues, plots and doubts ascending in a steady stream from the special train of Her Majesty, Queen Marie, there appears to be this modicum of worth: she is doing a world of good for American democracy.

The attitude of a certain portion of American citizens toward royalty, which has for decades occasioned ill-concealed sneers from our friends, the Europeans, is undergoing a dry-cleaning process.

Queen Marie is the queeniest of all European monarchs, despite the fact that her monarchy would compare unfavorably with any number of American States. She is beautiful; she is married to a Hohenzollern and she herself is descended from the proudest lineage; she has been photographed and publicized more widely than any other living woman.

She decides to come to America and give democracy an opportunity to stare. Immediately grand preparations are made by leaders of the Four Hundred and innumerable mayors, boards of aldermen and publicity hounds.

No sooner does she land upon the cringing soil of New York than an odor begins to float about the trip. Firstly, what is behind it, anyhow? Is she harrowing the fertile field for a stupendous collection of dollars? Is she going into motion pictures with a regal gesture?

Such a spectacle! She can't talk to reporters, as she is tied up with a contract. She can't come to California because the regal exchequer can't stand the strain of paying railroad fare—her itinerary being confined to roads where she travels for $1. The Rumanian Embassy must needs hustle out and borrow beds to sustain the royal sleepers. She even catches a cold!

And King Ferdinand, who seems to have been dropped more or less into the discard with the Lences, accumulates enough courage in her absence to arise, assume kingly dignity and demand her return. Or so is the story.

Wherefore, 115,000,000 Americans, reading these matters and pondering them, conclude that a cat may look at a queen and have a good laugh. The sacredness which invests a throne seems to be in a fair way of vanishing in a rumble of chuckles, so far as America is concerned. Hereafter we may look with interest upon a monarch, as an earthly mortal, but not as some strange apparition from the stars.

WILL BRITAIN INTERVENE?
Dismay is expressed in various parts of the civilized world over the many triumphs of the Cantonese Reds in China and the steady progress they are making in acquiring new territory by conquest. Because of the serious menace to her commercial interests Britain is more grievously concerned than other countries, though America hardly can look on with complacency while province after province is being subjugated by the Russianized Cantonese, who have marched to victory in many places and now threaten that stronghold of western influence in the Orient, Shanghai.

Cablegrams from China continue to recount the progressive conquest of large sections of the vast republic by the Cantonese government, aided by Russian officers and Russian gold. Within a few months, by force of arms, oriental intrigue and wholesale propaganda, Red control has spread to six provinces and is extending northward. The present tenure of the Cantonese covers nearly 650,000 square miles, a territory over four times the area of California and having a population of about 180,000,000, or 65,000,000 more than that of the United States.

However, as fighting continues in four of these provinces, the Reds may yet have to evacuate many of their positions. Still little is heard of the efforts of Sun Chuan-Fang and Wu Pei-Fu to oppose the northward march of the invaders. Recently the Cantonese took Chungking, an important city, and from Amoy come reports that the regular government is being disintegrated by intrigue. Not only have the Reds gained many adherents in Shanghai, but also in Nanking and Foochow, and there is local battling there.

While the reports of these conquests doubtless are hailed with joy at Moscow, what they mean to the civilized world is anything but gladness. The spectacle of sober, frugal, ancestor-loving China going over to the soviet system in which sobriety, frugality and family ties mean nothing, is in itself an unpleasant one, but it involves more than that—it constitutes a menace to world peace.

In London they are asking, "Will Britain intervene?" Some of the more conservative journals, including the Telegraph, reply that she already has intervened and that this course is regrettable. For wherever British marines have patrolled the rivers or British consuls have laid down the law Peking has objected most strenuously. If the Reds, backed by Moscow, continue to advance, this objection may be withdrawn. Canton has laid a heavy tax upon imports and exports. This, together with the increasing peril of British subjects in China, is moving many Britishers to demand a really effective intervention into which they hope to drag other powers. It remains to be seen how such a plan will work out. It is doubtful if it will find much support at Washington, at least for the present, though, of course, our government and our people do not like the picture of ultimate soviet dominance of China any more than the British do, and still hope to see the failure of the Red campaign.

AN OLD SAW VERIFIED
The world has had for uncounted generations an adage to the effect that what is meat for one is poison for another, but it is doubtful if anybody really believed it. Advice on diet and exercise, smoking and not smoking, tea and coffee drinking is passed out freely and assurance is given that it applies to everybody, regardless of the various and often contradictory nature of the advice, which might give rise to the suspicion that there is more than one road to every goal.

The latest illustration of the truth of this old saw comes from Yosemite Park, where rangers report that bears are not affected by tear gas. The tear gas had been used in an effort to stop raids by the bears on camps and cabins and, instead of producing the expected flood of lachrymal fluid, the experiment has proved a washout. The bears paid no attention to a dose of pungency that would have routed a regiment. Their raids continue, and no food left anywhere in the park is safe.

This fact may be added to others of observation—for instance, the apparent relish with which canary birds swallow cayenne pepper and the fact that partridges appear to be immune to doses of strychnine that will kill crows—as among the interesting things that so far lack explanation.

The rangers suggest that bears may lack tear glands, a guess that has not yet been backed up by testimony on the part of anatomists. It is understood, however, that old trappers and woodsmen are ready to come forward in numbers and swear that bears do, on occasion, weep bitterly. If the Yosemite rangers insist on some device that will cause bears to cry they might try motion-picture comedies, since bears evidently do not have the same emotional reactions as human beings.

Permanent melancholy might be instilled into the souls of these park denizens by bringing them to Los Angeles and showing them the city administration and having them sit in at a few sessions of the City Council.

On the other hand, the spectacle might give the bears a hearty laugh.

ARE COLLEGE YEARS WASTED?
As an adviser of youth H. G. Wells appears to be a good historian. He stands at the college door and seems to try to shunt the students aside from matriculation.

He dogmatically declares that "The Four Years of College Are Wasted." High school and grammar school are not put under the ban. But youth squanders its time in a university!

"A time must come when Oxford and Cambridge, Yale and Harvard will stand empty and clean for the amateur of architecture and the sight-seeing tourist," is his prophecy.

Oxford and Cambridge "fail to do any adequate educational work upon the larger part of the youngsters. Only a minority do sound work. They do it against current opinion. Much of it they could do far better in closer touch with London or in any other habitable town," is another sweep of his broom.

"The modern university," as Carlyle said long ago, "is a university of books."

And yet an American educator said some time since, put a teacher "on one end of a log and student on the other and you have a university."

Valuable as a library is, a university is vastly more so. Truth is propagated by personality. Every great movement of the world's history has been an idea embodied in a mighty personality. Books are secondary.

A recent finding of the Macmillan Company is as follows: "If you have a liberal education your life is worth nine and one-third times as much as if you had only a high-school education; 215 times as much as if you had only a common-school education, and 817 times as much as if you had no education."

That 7700 of the 10,000 in "Who's Who" have had college educations does not disturb the equanimity of Wells's power of statement.

That there have been 352 men with university training to one without in the House of Representatives and 530 with university diplomas to one without in the Senate may not be known by Mr. Wells.

In speaking of Wells's "normality," his Boswell, Beresford, says, "That he had a capacity so to see life was either a lucky accident or due to some traceable composition of heredity."

Can Wells be justifying his own haphazard culture? Would a regular university course have rendered him more satisfactory, if less interesting? Is he the incarnation of his own system? Is this the animus of his recent explosion?

He invariably permits the absence of good judgment to mar his attractive style. Regardless of conventions, does he say something different to secure a clientele of readers? Whether it be old stumps or colleges, does not blowing things up draw a crowd?

Is not a brilliant mind frequently abnormal? Do not readers often go to him for entertainment, even in history? Is there surprise that people take sharp issue with his conclusions?

Detachment is the peril of individuality. Liberty easily slips off into license. Wells is an entertaining writer. As a romancer he was a distinct success. His history of the world is about as useful to the student seeking truth as Bill Nye's history of the United States. His opinions and deductions concerning social conditions are those of a Socialist of the end of the century. He clings to theories that have been exploded by experience. His attacks on higher education remind one of Don Quixote tilting with windmills. The people of his imagination are a race apart. They are not human beings. They lack, like Wells himself, the common touch.

Instead of drawing his characters from life Wells draws life from these creatures of his fancy; and perhaps that is why, serious himself, he cannot understand why cultured and sensible people refuse to take him seriously.

SOVIET GLOOM
Nothing indicates more clearly the gloom that has fallen upon the people of the Socialistic Union of Soviet Republics, or demonstrates more fully the failure of its system of government, than the official figures compiled at Moscow showing the terrible increase of suicides in Russia. These figures show this increase to have been nearly 400 per cent since the revolution and over 500 per cent since the beginning of the century, when the Czar held sway over the Slavs.

There is no doubt that the swelling of the death rate by suicide has been very largely the result of the adoption by the soviets of the new economic policy which has borne down so heavily upon the peasantry. For a considerable period after this policy became effective the peasants were required to purchase all their goods from the state co-operative stores, although in many instances they could buy much more cheaply from independent traders. Many of these latter, however, were driven out of Russia by reason of their loss of trade. The government bought the peasants' grain at its own price, often too low to give a return that permitted anything more than the poorest sort of living.

Gloom spread over the agricultural population. The peasants saw that the rosy picture of Communism was a frightful illusion. They had been oppressed by the Czar, but they found themselves still more greatly oppressed by the soviet government. They pursued their labors in a listless way, their systems undermined by malnutrition, and many of them cared no longer for life. Suicides increased and during the last few years have become appalling in number.

Realizing the situation, the government is now permitting private traders to sell supplies to the people and is encouraging the peasants to produce more grain by allowing high prices. This is a setback for Communism, but it is a distinct gain for the Russian people.

NOT BAD CITIZENS
Our four-footed taxpayers, the dogs of Los Angeles, have made a record they need not be ashamed of. There are between 30,000 and 40,000 of them and only about 200 of them have been convicted of losing their tempers to the extent of biting. Our two-footed taxpayers can learn a lesson in patience and forbearance from these "lower" animals that should add to the present too small sum of human tolerance. What our dogs chiefly need is not chains and slavery, but more drinking fountains.

HOW TRUE!
"The life of today," writes Florence Hull Winterburn in a magazine article on modern family tendencies, "can never again be the life of the past century." Yes, and two plus two never will make five. And on careful investigation the fact probably will be disclosed that the Dutch are firmly intrenched in Holland.

"ON FULL HAY"
A 33-year-old Texas mule was retired from an ice wagon the other day "on full hay." But the mule insists on jumping the fence and following the wagon. And likely, when he was hitched to the wagon, he balked.

SOME REFLECTIONS

BY J. A. GRAVES

Happiness is a boon all of us desire, some of us attain and some of us never possess. The first object of any human being in life is to make a living. Food is the first requisite of human, as well as of all other animal life. A newborn babe is not long in this world until it wants its hunger satisfied. When that want is satisfied the child expresses contentment—its first feeling of happiness—and if its little stomach doesn't ache it immediately goes to sleep and, if left alone, will sleep until hunger disturbs it.

After the human animal acquires what we call a living it develops a taste for the esthetic and for ornaments and personal adornments. It satisfies a craving which is natural to it. Then there awakens a want for luxury, for better things. Some for fame and honors strive, things which usually come as a reward for services rendered the human race. To a properly constituted human mind the mere fact of existence, the ability to do, the fact of accomplishment—the opportunity to relieve suffering and misery of those less fortunate than oneself, should bring happiness. Good health is a prime factor in producing happiness. For that very reason the proper physical development, without which there cannot be good health, of the human being, from its very infancy, should receive careful attention. The first lesson inculcated into the human understanding should be how to live. Few people know how.

Webster's dictionary defines happiness as "good luck; good fortune; prosperity." It gives as another definition the following: "An agreeable feeling or condition of the soul arising from good fortune or propitious happenings of any kind."

Pope says of it: "Oh, happiness! Our being's end and aim." And he further says:

"The learned is happy nature to explore,
The fool is happy that he knows no more."

Seneca, in accord with all the other Stoic philosophers, preaches that contentment and the contented mind alone bring happiness. His argument is that we must take what comes to us in life, be it riches or poverty, health or disease, joy or sorrow, as we find it, and only he is happy, or entitled to be happy, who can adjust himself to all the circumstances of life without a murmur or complaint.

In a beautiful essay on the "Secret of Happiness" that most charming and entertaining writer and nature-lover, John Burroughs, lays down the doctrine that "Happiness is the result of all that is just and sane"—a most excellent definition, to my mind. In this age of excited activity and frequently unjust and ever-increasing criticism of established rules and precedents.

The Latin poet, Horace, again and again indulged in the warmest praise of the pleasures of country life. He always urged the simple life as conducive to man's longevity and serenity of mind.

Balzac did the same thing and has woven into his underfoot stories more beautiful descriptions of country life and country scenery than any other writer I know of—Scott himself not excepted. Most of the English poets were partial to country life. All of the older writers, English and American, have extolled country life as the true source of happiness. In one of his shorter poems Pope tells us: "Happy the man whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound;
Content to breathe his native air
In his own ground."

One of America's greatest word painters tells us in his terse and forcible style that "Happiness is the legal tender of the soul."

As staid an author as Vattel, in his "Law of Nations," pays the highest tribute to the agriculturist. In fact, he places the science of farming and agriculture on a high plane, where it ought to be. And, in discussing happiness, he says: "Happiness is the point where center all those duties which individuals and nations owe to themselves. This is the great end of the law of nature. The desire for happiness is the powerful spring that puts man in motion; felicity is the end that all have in view, and it ought to be the grand object of the public will." He also contends that it should be the highest aim of the state to provide for the happiness of the public. After laying down various rules for bringing about this result he adds: "To instruct the nation is not sufficient. In order to conduct it to happiness it is still more necessary to inspire the people with the love of virtue and the abhorrence of vice. Those who are deeply versed in the study of morality are convinced that virtue is the true and only path that leads to happiness."

Truly ideal, in the earlier days of America, must have been the life of the planters of the Southern States. Their estates were almost feudal in proportions. While possessing none of the modern educational advantages, they managed, through private tutors and a few academies and institutes, as their seats of learning were called, to educate their children. Their sons, especially, were trained for public life and developed into orators and statesmen of the highest standing and ability.

Contrasted with the more peaceful days of the early life of the republic, I fear that modern life is too strenuous for complete and unalloyed happiness. We live in too great a rush; in too much excitement; under too great a nervous strain to be happy. We enjoy thrills, get enthusiastic, get worked up to a pitch of frenzy over religious questions, politics, the great national games, baseball and football, automobile speed contests, airplanes and motion-picture shows. All of these things, however, leave the human mind in such a condition that its longings are only satisfied by more frequent and more hazardous repetitions of the sports that thrill. I fear that the "contented mind" which Seneca speaks of and so lovingly dwells upon as true happiness is almost a negative quantity in these days.

I am not one of those who believe that you can legislate the millennium or by laws or statutes control the morals any more than you can the brains of the race. I am one of those old-school, old-fashioned sort of persons who believe that parents are responsible for both the excellency and the delinquency of their offspring. I notice that those people who are not running over with fads of the "new life," who are not too busy in their professions of religion, who are not eternally endeavoring to reform their neighbors who, in fact, keep their fingers out of other people's pie, concentrating their own families the efforts that many waste on entire communities, bring up children who are an honor to themselves and a credit to society.

Idleness destroys both peace of mind and happiness. All healthy human beings demand, for their physical and mental welfare, some sort of activity. I am sure that following the butterfly experiences of fashionable women cannot bring happiness to anyone. No woman is happy who spends half of her life at pink teas or because she can parade a crowded thoroughfare in high-heeled shoes, a picture hat and a short skirt. The chances are that when she reaches home she feels depressed because her heels were not higher, her hat larger or her skirt shorter. A male loafer cannot be happy. He gets tired even of himself and then grumbles at all humanity.

The frivolous pleasures that are too often indulged in, to the exclusion of the more serious things of life, to the detriment of health and morals, must be those to which Robbie Burns alluded when he said:

"But pleasures are like poppies spread,
You seize the flow'r, the bloom is shed.
Or like the snowfall in the river,
A moment white, then melts forever."

Great wealth does not in itself bring happiness. In fact, many wealthy people are most unhappy. Few of our modern captains of industry, the men who control the finances of the nation, are happy. Their responsibilities are so great that they do not have time to be happy.

The possession of power, the possession and pomp of office fails to extend to any human being true happiness. There goes with these things a responsibility which cannot be escaped or avoided, a responsibility which destroys all hope of happiness.

The great conquerors of the world, its greatest generals of all time, from Hannibal down to the present time, were not happy men. The very powers that made them usually worked their final destruction. They ever stood in the shade of impending disaster. Napoleon undoubtedly possessed more genius for war than any man who ever lived, yet he never was a happy man. Success was undoubtedly dear to him. If there was one spark of conscience in his make-up the misery he caused during his career must have been a constant menace to him.

To my mind true happiness is only found in the home, in family ties and responsibilities, in the companionship of husband and wife with their children.

I believe in the sanctity of the marriage tie and the sublimity of the domestic altar. I sincerely believe that the home influence makes or mars the human character. I am of the opinion that the only true happiness is found in the marriage state, in the home, in its surroundings; in the social acquaintances that result from the marriage state; in the joys and even the burdens of rearing children, educating them, teaching them the objects of life, pointing out to them the straight and narrow path of duty and honesty.

There is bliss unalloyed and imperishable in the acquaintanceship of an honest young couple which leads up to marriage. But lovers are not always happy. There is often a tinge of bitterness with the sweet; fear sometimes drives happiness to despair. This feeling is well illustrated in those beautiful lines of Moore's where he describes the parting of the faithful Hinda from her beloved Hafed. Every noted writer of tragedy or fiction has given expression somewhere to the same sentiment.

Again I say that true happiness, lasting happiness, happiness proof against adversity, sorrow, misfortune, even death, is only found in the home and home ties. In the true home love rules supreme, and where can you find a more beautiful picture than that of a father, mother and children, united, actuated by common impulses, held together by the closest ties, respecting each other, loyal in love and in sympathy with each other. Campbell, in his "Pleasures of Hope," gives us these apt lines:

"And say, without our hopes, without our fears,
Without the home that plighted love endears,
Without the smile from partial beauty won,
Oh, what were man! A world without a sun."

Too often, I am sorry to say, many married women, for that matter, who do not appreciate there are many married men and their blessings.

in the burdens of rearing children, educating them, teaching them the objects of life, pointing out to them the straight and narrow path of duty and honesty.
There is bliss unalloyed and immeasurable in the acquaintanceship of an honest young couple which grows up to marriage. But lovers are not always happy. There is often a tinge of bitterness with the sweet; fear sometimes drives happiness to despair. This feeling is well illustrated in those beautiful lines of Moore's where he describes the parting of the fateful Hinda from her beloved Selim. Every noted writer of comedy or fiction has given expression somewhere to the same sentiment.

Again I say that true happiness, lasting happiness, happiness proof against adversity, sorrow, misfortune, even death, is only found in the home and home ties. In the true home love rules supreme, and where can you find a more beautiful picture than that of a father, mother and children, united, actuated by common impulses, held together by the closest ties, rejoicing each other, loyal in love and in sympathy with each other.
Campbell, in his "Pleasures of Hope," gives us these apt lines:

"I say, without our hopes, without our fears,
Without the home that plighted
love endears,
Without the smile from partial beauty won,
O what were man! A world without a sun."

Too often, I am sorry to say, many married women, for that matter, who do not appreciate what are many married men and their blessings.

MORE MERRITT SENSATIONS DUE

Second Week of Divorce Case Opens Today

Wife Will Conclude Her Testimony on Stand

Property Holdings to Come in for Consideration

More sensational details of the wrecking of the matrimonial bark sailed by Hulett C. Merritt, Jr., millionaire Pasadenan, and his attractive wife, Mrs. Lou Merritt, are scheduled to be revealed this morning in Judge Keeler's court when the second week of Mrs. Merritt's contested divorce suit gets under way.

Mrs. Merritt herself will occupy the stand this morning to conclude the testimony she started last week, according to announcement by her attorney, Lyndol Young. It is expected Attorney Young will seek to obtain from the witness testimony relating to the extent of property holdings in which Merritt is interested. It is contended by Mrs. Merritt that her husband controls community property valued at more than $2,000,000, and that he is possessed of a separate estate valued at upward of $1,000,000, although Merritt himself has denied he is possessed of any such amount of wealth.

The first week of the hearing was marked with the testimony of John Campbell and Lloyd Oren, formerly employed in the Merritt family and now retained by Mrs. Merritt.

Campbell and Oren went into the details of an asserted trip taken by Merritt through the Pacific Northwest last fall, during which, they declared, he participated in several parties and entertained a woman identified as Marjorie Stubblefield in Roseburg, Or., and Chico in this State.

In his cross-complaint, Merritt charges his wife was friendly with Oscar Zebal, a San Francisco salesman, and another man identified as Duncan McKinlay while she was on a trip to Honolulu and the Far East last year. Merritt also charges his wife embarrassed him by issuing checks on a bank in Tulare in which she had no funds at the time.

Mrs. Merritt has made a general denial of these charges.

Postal and Customs Gains for October Surpass All Prior Records

Postal and United States customs receipts for Los Angeles and Southern California, respectively, during the month of October, as reported by Postmaster O'Brien and Collector Schwaebe yesterday, indicate gains that surpass any previous month in the history of Federal business in this section.

With a total of $800,510.76 taken in by the postoffice for the month just ended as against $695,872.85 for October, 1925, Postmaster O'Brien estimated the increase to be more than 15 per cent. At this rate postal income will exceed $9,000,000 for 1926.

Exports from Southern California ports leaped to $9,450,000 last month as compared to $5,568,265 in October, 1925, and imports totaled $4,733,000 as against $4,618,545 in October, last year. Collections jumped to $652,000 as compared to $485,594.10 in October, 1925, and shipments to Hawaii totaled $562,000.

Peach Twigs and Scientific Planning

THE peach twig dips downward, so many believe, when held over underground water supplies. So firm is the faith of some people in its supposed infallability that they never undertake the labor and expense of digging a well without making a test for hidden water with this natural divining rod.

In preparing for the growth of telephone facilities to meet future demands, there is no peach-twig substitute for foresight. All expenditures of labor and money must be based on scientific planning. Careful studies must be made of present and future conditions in the locality to be served. Probable population and the volume and nature of telephone traffic must be estimated years ahead. Plant must be made capable of expansion. Capital must be arranged for in advance if growth is not to be delayed.

Constructive Work of Chest Wins Approval

Dealing with better health, better citizenship and character building, Community Chest welfare agencies are carrying out a constructive program in Los Angeles, according to John E. Coffin, Los Angeles civic leader.

There are crippled children's hospitals, hospitals which care for prospective mothers who are unable to pay fees for medical attention, sanatoriums for tubercular and sick men, women and children—all maintained by the Community Chest, points out Coffin.

The third annual city-wide appeal of the Chest will be held the 9th to 23rd inst., when an army of 15,000 volunteer workers will cover Los Angeles asking citizens to contribute generously of their funds for the city's welfare program. A budget of $3,220,114.35 has been set for the goal of the appeal which will maintain 154 agencies.

Final Entry of Divorce Decree Frees Comedian

Lloyd Hamilton, motion-picture comedian, today is free of marital bonds, his attorney, Mark M. Cohen, having seen to it that a final decree was entered in the divorce suit brought more than a year ago against Hamilton by Mrs. Ethel Hamilton.

At the trial of her divorce suit, Mrs. Hamilton testified her husband deserted her after more than eleven years of married life. Hamilton did not contest the case, but in a property settlement which was effected by counsel, he agreed to give Mrs. Hamilton a $15,000 home and a $100 a week alimony until she might marry again.

DEMURS TO SPOUSE'S VIEWS ON MARRIAGE

Herman A. Williams, as his wife understood the matter, did not object to a woman, as such. He merely made the reservation that he would prefer to be in a position to "kick her out when he got tired of her," in the words of Rose Mary Williams's cross-complaint for divorce. Thus, Mrs. Williams pointed out, her husband did not think much of marriage and she was caused extreme mental anguish. The marital litigation in the Williams family was opened by Williams with the filing of a complaint in which he charged that Mrs. Williams was unduly jealous. In her cross-complaint Mrs. Williams excepted to the use of the word "unduly." She declared that when Williams went camping he ignored his wife and took one Edna Perry along with him.

CITY CLUB WILL HEAR DEBATE ON BIBLE USE

"Shall the Bible Be Permitted in the Public Schools as Provided in Amendment No. 17?" This question will be debated at the City Club at noon today when the amendment will be supported by Rev. W. S. Fleming of the Methodist Church of Chicago. Mr. Fleming's opponent will be Dr. L. I. Newman, rabbi of Temple Emanu-El of San Francisco. At the open forum this evening members of the club will discuss various issues on tomorrow's ballot. Wednesday at noon George Seibel will speak on "A Clean City." Friday at noon there will be a community sing, while at the Saturday luncheon Leon R. Yankwich, Charles A. Ballreich and Ray Malcolm will discuss "What changes, if any, should be made in the direct primary?"

BUILT BY VOLUNTEERS

WATTS IRKED BY DIRTY STREETS

Town's Lone Sweeper Left Thoroughfares at Mercy of Any and All Refuse When Community Was Annexed to Los Angeles and His Pay Ceased

The Board of Public Works has recommended to the City Council that $985 be appropriated to pay the cost of sweeping the streets of the newly annexed Watts section of Los Angeles for the remainder of the fiscal year. The city of Watts had a lone street sweeper of its own in the pre-annexation days. When annexation came there were no funds with which to pay his salary, and so much to the disgust of the people of Watts, street sweeping in that section ceased.

"So this is Los Angeles!" complained Watts residents to the Board of Public Works, which has, in turn, asked the City Council for the funds to return to the streets of Watts the street sweeper and his brooms.

The Board also called attention to the facts that Watts is not alone in its complaints as to the lack of street sweeping, as other parts of the city are also neglected due to an insufficient force of street sweepers. Since the force of street sweepers was last increased, the board said, 135 miles of streets have been paved and require cleaning, and the board said that twelve additional street cleaners were needed, including the Watts street sweeper. The Council was asked to appropriate $12,805 to employ these men for the remainder of the fiscal year.

The $12,805 includes the salary of the Watts street sweeper.

Are You "Toxic"?

Good Health Requires Good Elimination of the Body Poisons.

WHEN one hasn't good elimination, and there is a poisoning of the blood from the waste products of metabolism, one is said to be "toxic." The kidneys are the blood filters. Functional inactivity of the kidneys permits a retention of waste poisons in the blood. Symptoms of this toxic condition are a tired, languid feeling, drowsy headaches and dizziness and, often, a dull, nagging backache. That the kidneys are not functioning as they should is sometimes shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many readers have learned the value of drinking plenty of pure water in this condition and the occasional use of a stimulent diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's Pills have been winning friends for more than forty years the country over. Doan's are a stimulant diuretic* acting on the kidneys only. Users everywhere endorse them. Ask your neighbor!

SOCIETY

Two salons have occupied the attention of all of Paris during the past two weeks, the twentieth International Automobile and Motor Boat Show in the Grand Palais des Champs Elysees, and the twenty-first International Salon of Photographic Art at 51 rue de Chichy. The United States is well represented in both.

Of course the Salon des Automobiles draws the greater amount of interest. More than 200 models, comprising the last word in motor building and art of all countries, are on display. Probably no nation is so thoroughly represented, either in quality of cars or in variety and beauty of models, as the United States.

Scores of leading American automobile men crossed to Paris for the show, among them being Alexander P. Sloan, Jr., H. H. Rice, H. H. Bassett, M. P. Forbes, Lawrence P. Fisher, P. W. Worthington, Charles Sheppy, Joseph M. Stephenson, Harvey M. Crane, William J. Davidson, Enos A. de Waters, Ernest W. Seaholm, Ormond E. Hunt, Benjamin H. Anibal, and Herbert C. M. Stevens.

Thirty countries are represented in the photographic salon with 2500 entries as compared with the usual 1500. The display for the United States is second only to that of France. Curiously, it is made up almost entirely from two sections, the Pacific Coast and the Atlantic seaboard, and although it comprises some of the best work of the salon, it cannot be credited altogether to native Americans, for much of it is done by Japanese artists residing on the Pacific slope. Strangely enough, in contrast, the exhibit from Japan contains nothing worthy of mention.

From Los Angeles, Fred Archer and Will Connelle of 731 South Hope street have each a sketch, there are four bromos by Shimojima-Kaye of East First street and six exhibits by W. P. Woodcock of 669 West Twenty-third street.

Mr. and Mrs. George Converse of Santa Barbara have sailed for America on the George Washington after an extended tour of Europe.

Mrs. Anita Baldwin of Arcadia sailed on the Leviathan on its last homeward trip, while George C. Harrington and Raymond L. Kimsley of Santa Ana, were aboard the same ship, which carried the Queen of Rumania and her royal suite to the United States.

Mrs. Lillian A. McDonald sailed for home aboard the President Polk on its last trip. Mrs. MacDonald visited India and much of the Orient before going to Paris and while in the French capital she helped the Countess de Caen in her work for victims of the World War.

Mme. Vittorio Maccafferi of Florence, Italy, has arrived in Paris and has with her Mrs. James H. Adams. They are domiciled at 6 Avenue de la Bourdonnais. Later Mme. Maccafferi will come to Pasadena to visit her father.

Mrs. John C. McKeon, who has been stopping at the Pont Royal Hotel in Paris, is returning to her home in Pasadena, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Prior, also of the Crown City. They have been touring Europe by motor with Miss L. L. Little.

Mrs. Johnston Preston of Hollywood, gave a dinner of eight covers in her apartments in Paris, honoring Walter Chandler, former Representative for New York, who is passing the winter in the French capital.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius A. Hallgerten, the latter formerly Mary Elizabeth Jacobs of Pasadena, whose marriage was an event of the American colony in Paris recently, are passing their honeymoon in Biarritz.

Mr. and Mrs. Eustace Hurrell and daughter have been visiting Lausanne, guests at the Alexandria Grand Hotel.

A. A. Byers and family have been stopping at the Hotel Metropole in Locarno, Switzerland, while Frank Nelson was a recent visitor to Berlin, stopping at Hotel Bristol.

Mr. and Mrs. William Preston Harrison are registered at the Central Hotel in Berlin, while Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Boyd of Pasadena, who visited all the points of interest in France, returned to the United States aboard the S. S. Lancastria. They are planning, however, to return for a longer stay in 1928.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Corrett of Santa Monica, are staying at Hotel Crillon in Paris, after visiting in London, and Miss C. B. Heywood of Los Angeles, has been visiting in Geneva, Switzerland, as a guest of Hotel la Residence.

Mrs. C. C. Alexander of Hollywood has arrived in Paris, accompanied by Miss Helen T. Alexander and they are staying at 238 Rue de Vaugirard. They are planning to remain for the winter.

Mrs. Fred Gould of Los Angeles, has been visiting in Lausanne, Switzerland, as a guest of Hotel Mirabeau, while Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gill are stopping at the Beau-Rivage-Palace Hotel there.

Mrs. Frances S. Braun of Los Angeles has been elected a regular non-resident member of the American Women's Club of Paris. A feature of interest is that the Women's Athletic Club of Los Angeles has become affiliated with the local organization of the French capital.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilson of Los Angeles have been enjoying a most delightful sojourn in Munich, leaving there the 1st inst., for Vienna, for a week's sojourn, thence on to Venice, Florence and Rome. They are planning to sail for home the 28th inst., after a seven months' tour in Europe and the British Isles. While in Oberammergau they had a most interesting chat with Anton Lang, the Christus of the Passion Play.

Cruise Around the World

Planning a six months' cruise around the world, Mr. and Mrs. Webster B. Mable, Mrs. Nellie K. Packard, Mrs. Mae J. Kohler, Mrs. Mary M. T Runnels and Mrs. Elnora T. Brockway are leaving the 16th inst., aboard the S.S. President Polk from Los Angeles Harbor. They will stop first in Honolulu and then on to China, Japan, India, Ceylon and Egypt, and after arriving in Europe will proceed by automobile through the continental countries.

University of California Notes

Sigma Delta Pi, eldest women's professional music sorority of the University of California, Southern Branch, recently entertained at two delightful musical soirees. The first affair was given at the home of Miss Esther Beer and the second at the home of Miss Eileen Carey. Squire Coop, head of the music department at the university and director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Chorus, was guest of honor.

Betty Bushlong, pianist, Orva Johnson, trumpeter, and Evelyn Edlund, violinist, were recently initiated into the organization. The ceremony was followed by a dinner in the Rose room of the Mary Louise.

The following girls are members of the organization: Eileen Carey, Mildred Moore, Frances Hayes, Pearl Allison, Alice Kelley, Blythe Taylor, Lucey Lewis, Esther Beer, Virginia Watson, Margaret Harrington, Gloria King, Frances Elliot and Mmes. Walter McManus, John Sprangler and Ralph Densmore. Pledges of the organization are Frances Ludman, Olive Englund, Eliose Gilstrap and Katherine Potter.

Among delightful affairs of recent date in college circles was the football dance given by the pledges of Delta Delta Delta Sorority, Theta Pi chapter of the Southern Branch, in honor of the active members. The affair was given at the chapter house on North Berendo street. The football motif was carried out in the decorations, the programs were tiny footballs and the flowers and banners were in blue and gold, the school colors. The music was furnished by Kenneth Mitchell's Hollywegians. May Brittain was in charge of the affair. She was assisted by Lorene Furrow, Evelyn Woodruff, Aileen Wilson, Elaine Gannon, Helen Archer, Dorothy Broadway and Jean Krause.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Concerning Shoes

Alternate different pairs of shoes if you wish them to last.

Never wear shoes when in need of repair. Have them mended before they are hopeless.

Have your shoes polished regularly so as to remove dirt before it has worked into the leather and caused real damage.

Consider what you need most when purchasing shoes and don't wear dancing slippers to work and expect them to last as long as a business shoe.

Fine Lace

Very delicate lace can be washed without mishap or strain upon it if put in a Mason jar and then the jar partly filled with warm water and reliable soapsuds. Screw on the lid and shake vigorously for several minutes. Rinse just as carefully and dry by placing between two towels for a while and then spread out on one towel in the sun. Pull into shape instead of ironing.

Plenty of Time

Prepare the gelatine desert before washing the breakfast dishes and you will be certain of its getting firm.

CUTLET EN CASSEROLE

Take a medium cutlet, cut with a sharp knife into three-inch squares and place them in a casserole dish. Cut with a scoop small round potato, carrot and parsnip balls, a cup and a half in all, and pare a cupful of button onions; add these to the cutlet with one cupful of red stock, pepper, salt, a dash of mignonette pepper and a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Take one tablespoonful of rice flour and mix it smooth with a little water and add to the gravy, putting in last a half-tablespoonful of melted butter. Cook in a medium oven an hour and a half, or until the meat is done.

CHERRY CREAM PIE

Line the pie plate with rich flaky crust. Open a quart jar of preserved cherries, strain them and heat the juice, adding to it a cupful of cream; thicken slightly with cornstarch and when slightly cool fill in the cherries and turn over the cream; put on the top crust and bake.

SPINACH PUREE

Wash carefully two quarts of spinach and cook until tender in a small quantity of water. Rub through a sieve and add three cupfuls of rich stock and season to taste. Stir to a paste one tablespoonful of butter and the same quantity of flour and one cupful of hot milk. Add this to the soup and let all boil up together, stirring to keep it smooth. Serve with croutons.

SWISS STEAK

Take a piece of top round steak, dust it with pepper, salt and paprika, dredge it on both sides with flour, then put it into a hot frying pan with enough hot fat in it to cover the bottom. Cover the pan and let the steak cook. When done through, pour over it a cupful of thin tomato sauce, add the juice of an onion and a half bud of garlic. Cover and simmer gently for half an hour. Serve with the gravy turned over it, on a hot platter, with a border of mashed potato around the edge.

FIG SALAD

Take one-half pound of figs and chop fine with a few pecan nuts, a small cupful of fine chopped pineapple and a small green pepper; mix with a rich mayonnaise dressing, place on white lettuce leaves and garnish with olives.

WASHINGTON PIE

Take three-quarters of a pound of butter and cream it with one and a half pounds of brown sugar; add six eggs, the yolks beaten with one pint of sweet milk. Sift in one and three-quarter pounds of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and lastly fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Have ready a half-pound of currants washed and dried, a half-pound of stoned raisins, a quarter pound of finely sliced citron, a grated nutmeg, add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla flavoring; sprinkle the fruit with a little flour before adding it to the cake. Mix well and bake in a shallow square pan for an hour and three-quarters. Cover the cake with a deep soft sugaring and ornament it with a border of pink and white candies.

BEAUTY ON DISPLAY AT SHRINE LUNCHEON

Bathing beauty styles for 1930 will be portrayed Thursday noon at the Shrine luncheon in the Biltmore, when Chairman J. Ward Cohen stages his beach-model revue, according to Potentate Dave F. Smith. Special electrical lighting is arranged and special music is being written for numerous musical numbers. Nat Fernum will be master of ceremonies and is planning several surprise numbers. Thirty-five girls will take part in the revue.

GORILLA'S TERRIFYING NOISE

According to an African hunter, who has had much experience in the gorilla country, "the roar of the male gorilla is one of the most terrific sounds made by any animal and when accompanied by striking their chests with fists as large as one's head, it is a terrifying experience to those hearing it for the first time. Gorillas in the jungle beat their chests, and drum upon their chins, making their teeth collide with an uncanny rattle. These sounds are produced to intimidate, to signal each other and also by the captive gorilla in boisterous play."

CARBUNCLES (PART 1)

Recently a nationally known public man had to discontinue his speaking engagements and go to a hospital with a carbuncle on his neck. The news made me realize I had not written on this subject for a long time, so I'll give you the papers again, as carbuncles are things that certainly demand attention!

Satan thought he hit upon the most potent thing to make Job denounce the Lord when he afflicted him with boils, but he might have been a little more devilish had he given him carbuncles. For a carbuncle is a multiple boil; instead of one hair follicle or oil gland's becoming infected, there are thousands of them.

The definition of a carbuncle in Stellwagon is as follows: "A carbuncle is an acute, usually egg-to-palm-sized, more or less circumscribed, flattened phlegmonous (pus) inflammation of the skin and subcutaneous tissues, terminating in the slough that usually finds exit at several points."

The disease begins with an innocent looking pimple which, however, is far more painful than the ordinary pimple. Within twenty-four hours it becomes larger and more painful and is accompanied by a good deal of constitutional disturbances such as chilling, fever and nervous irritation. As the disease progresses, the inflammation extends both on the surface and deep into the tissue, the pus works its way very deeply among the fat cells and burrows in shafts like a mine, becomes deeper in color, more painful and throbbing. The constitutional disturbances may be so great that the patient has to go to bed.

Within ten days or perhaps longer, the carbuncle may be two or three inches or more in width. There is a hard base of irregular shape, and the tissues around become swollen. Now it begins to soften and the pus begins to pour out of a number of openings. Sloughing takes place through these openings and there results an irregular, deep ulcer with overhanging edges. In very bad cases the whole mass may fall out at once. The ulcer gradually fills up, leaving a scar.

Carbuncles are very serious in those who are old or run down. They are more common in middle and old age, and in men. The most frequent sites are the back of the neck and shoulders, buttocks, and forearms. There is usually but one at a time.

Causes. As with boils (and other diseases,) we have to think of two causes—the predisposing cause and the exciting or immediate cause. Both of these are the same as with boils, the predisposing is anything that causes an undermining of the skin resistance, especially diabetes, overweight or underweight. The exciting cause is the staphylococcus germs accompanied by pressure or irritation so that the germ is rubbed into the skin.

Treatment. As carbuncles are serious, the treatment should be left to the care of a physician or surgeon. However, as I know some of you are in places where physicians are not available, I am giving you some of the methods used.

Diplomacy

The wise housewife tries to have the most attractive menu for dinner when the day she has spent gallivanting. She prepares her vegetables, salad and dessert before leaving in the morning and has chops or sirloin steak for her quick-cooking meal. There seems to be a general stampede about most husbands when Mrs. Wife goes on a day's outing, but a good meal just about makes things all right.

Multiply this saving by 40

This average family, let us say, consumes about 40 cups of coffee a week. Consider the saving M·J·B gives you by its concentrated strength and richness. For you can use less of M·J·B to each spoonful and still have a rich, satisfying cup of coffee. Now multiply this saving 40 times each week—it counts up, doesn't it?

It is true you buy coffee by the pound but you drink it by the cup. So it's really the cost-per-cup that counts! And measured by this scale, M·J·B is the most economical coffee you can buy.

Put it to a week's test and see!

he tissues around become swollen, ow it begins to soften and the pu egins to pour out of a number of penings. Sloughing takes place hrough these openings and there re- ults an irregular, deep ulcer with verhanging edges. In very bad cases he whole mass may fall out at once. he ulcer gradually fills up, leaving scar.

Carbuncles are very serious in hose who are old or run down. They re more common in middle and old e, and in men. The most frequent ites are the back of the neck and houlders, buttocks, and forearms. here is usually but one at a time. Causes. As with boils (and other iseases) we have to think of two auses—the predisposing cause and he exciting or immediate cause. oth of these are the same as with oils, the predisposing is anything hat causes an undermining of the tin resistance, especially diabetes, verweight or underweight. The ex- iting cause is the staphylococcus rms accompanied by pressure or ir- itation so that the germ is rubbed to the skin.

Treatment. As carbuncles are seri- us, the treatment should be left to he care of a physician or surgeon. owever, as I know some of you are places where physicians are not ailable, I am giving you some of e methods used.

WAR-INSPIRED FEARS HELD CAUSE OF WORLD UNREST

"Times" Radio Lecturer Urges Hearers Cast Out Terror by Trust in Divine Word

Declaring that the world today is in the grip of fear, Dr. William G. Wirth, lecturer on the Bible and religion at the College of Medical Evangelists, in an address given yesterday from The Times broadcasting station told his audience that the only way to counter "the psychology of earthly fear" is with "the psychology of heavenly trust." Dr. Wirth spoke in part as follows:

"Never has this planet been more perplexed and harassed than now, and all signs indicate that this state will get worse. 'Gloomy Dean' Inge, in his latest book, 'England,' sees dire days in the future for sturdy, stabilized Britain. French political leaders are paralyzed with the fear that their country is going the way of bankruptcy, as did Germany after the World War. The French franc now is almost worthless. Mussolini has commanded that Italy subsist on black bread and he himself is setting the example in that respect. Why? The specter of currency ruin is facing that land as well as France.

"When we look to the Orient, the psychology of which we are speaking is not changed. Bolshevism is successfully trading on the fears which those peoples in that world region have toward the occident.

"If nations have the psychology of fear, we as individuals, making up the nations, have it in no less degree. With us it is caused by the tremendous financial pressure of the time, the struggle to make ends meet, to overcome the high cost of living, to keep the wolf from the door. In these days when that which used to be a luxury has become a vital necessity, many are the slaves to this economic fear.

"When the Israelites had left Egypt and were led to the Red Sea, to their utter dismay they saw Pharaoh's host advancing upon them from the rear. With the sea in front and the army in back, there seemed no way of escape. It was then that Moses said: 'Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of Jehovah, which he will work for you today.' The lesson is for us. In these times when, above others, we need an ever-enlarging trust in God, who alone can for us open the way through the seas that we may safely pass through.

"The psychology of earthly fear can only be successfully countered by the psychology of heavenly trust. This is our only way out. Let us accept Jesus Christ, the Son of God, as our Savior from sin, and let His life become our life, and His words will be worked out in our individual experience."

PLEADS FOR BIBLE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper preached at Westlake Presbyterian Church yesterday on "The Bible in the Public School." Dr. Tupper advised hearers to vote against Amendment No. 6, which would legalize race-track gambling, against No 9, which would repeal the Wright Act against No. 11, which would exempt parochial schools from taxation, and to vote for No. 17, which would permit the reading of the Bible in our schools. Dr. Tupper said in part:

"Amendment No. 17 does not require, but only permits, the use of the Bible in public schools of California. In eleven sovereign States of the Union daily reading of the Bible in the schools is demanded by specific law. In three of our States the Scripture is excluded from the public school by law. Here, in California, as in eight other States, the Bible has been put out of the schools by adverse interpretations on the part of courts or officials. The Bible is no sectarian book. Our authorized version of the Scriptures contains the very highest order of literature for the mental equipment of youth. Ours is a Christian nation, as Webster so eloquently pointed out in the famous Girard case, and, as such, we must have Christian schools.

HYMNS OF CONQUEST NEEDED BY CHURCH

Dr. H. C. Culbertson preached at Mesa Congregational Church yesterday on "The Adventures of God." He said in part:

"Where is the adventurous spirit in today's Christianity? How have we lost the wondrous radiance, enthusiasm and power of those first Christians whose lives were kindled by the Master's touch, and who in a single generation spread their message through the then civilized world? In so far as our religious emotion may be tested by its music, we have almost no hymns at all that thrill us like a trumpet call, summoning us to vision and victory. I looked through a book called 'Conquest Hymns' the other day and counted only four or five which had anything to do with conquest. We need a new realization of the adventurous undertaking of Jesus, who sought to transform men lovingly into heavenly personalities and to make this world into a kingdom of heaven."

DR. MAILE'S SERMON UPHOLDS WRIGHT ACT

"Shall Degradation Rule Our Land?" is the subject of a sermon preached yesterday by Dr. John L. Maile at the Berean Congregational Church. Dr. Maile said in part:

"Legislation does not attempt to regulate personal habits except in such cases as inflict damage, loss and suffering on others. Tobacco, bad food and late hours or dissipation are not forbidden by law, because the evil results thereof are chiefly confined to the person indulging therein. Government exists for the protection of society and the welfare of the people. Alcoholic drink imperils these vast interests of civilization. The drink habit endangers the victim and every human and divine interest touched by the same. Only two classes desire liquor, those who seek inordinate profits and those who have acquired the unnatural craving for poisonous alcohol. The 'distributing centers' proposed by the wets are but the infamous saloon in disguise. Vote 'No' on Proposition No. 9."

DANGER POINTED IN "ORGY OF SPENDING"

Rev. William C. Isett, pastor of Amanda Chapel, preached yesterday on "The Soul of America." He said in part:

"It would revolutionize society if every man and woman could put a proper estimate on his own life. We would not envy the rich, nor would we be so anxious to accumulate riches which we must leave for others. When politicians are trying to impose bonds for millions of dollars upon us, we should consider what we shall have to pay in interest and how we are shackling the hands of our children's children. We are in an orgy of spending against which our wisest statesmen are warning us with all the earnestness of their foresight. We are losing our soul as we eat, drink and are merry, considering not the future. It is no academic cry that the ministers of God are sending out to mankind regarding the neglect of the worship of God. Religion is a vital thing, whether we are rich or poor. What is it going to profit most men to get their gardens in good condition and their cars polished and their Sunday papers read, if in the abundance of the things they have they lose their precious souls?"

PREACHER OPPOSES BIBLE IN SCHOOLS

Rev. T. C. Abel preached at Hollywood Unitarian Church yesterday on "The Right to Think." He said in part:

"Freedom, both to think and to express one's thoughts, is the supreme necessity in democracy, progress and higher civilization. Deny that freedom, either by political legislation, by educational restrictions or by religious creeds, and man becomes a slave, and in proportion as that freedom is denied, he sinks to the level of animals. In the religion of tomorrow man not only will be guaranteed the right to think, but will be rated as successful only in so far as he uses that right in contributing to a healthier, happier society. The Bible amendment is but one step in an aggressive campaign to write the doctrines of evangelical Christianity into the public school curriculum and must be defeated in the interests of freedom, both in religion and in education."

SEEKS DEFEAT OF AMENDMENT NO. 17

Rabbi E. F. Magnin of Temple B'nai B'rith spoke yesterday on "The Bible in the Schools." He said in part:

"The Constitution of America secures for the citizens a platform where they can all meet to foster and cherish the high ideals of pure Americanism. It is the public school where children of all creeds, colors and denominations are trained to maturity in the spirit of pure Americanism. The unity and effectiveness of the public school will be endangered if Amendment No. 17 is incorporated in the constitution. Religion is a personal matter. We all have the right to serve God according to the dictates of our conscience. No majority has the right or privilege to superimpose its religious tendencies upon the minority. Real religion is not of an intrusive character and the cardinal principles of religious freedom should not be violated by this amendment."

Thirty splendid automobiles will be won in The Times $50,000 prize campaign with VOTES. These votes will accumulate throughout the campaign—until December 18—but NOW you can get MORE votes on new subscription clubs than at any time later. All this week—up to 9 p.m., Saturday, November 6—every $30 club of new Times subscriptions is worth 100,000 EXTRA votes—the regular votes on each separate subscription being given as usual. It is positively the biggest vote offer of the entire campaign, and will not be repeated.

Have You Put Off Starting?

The Best Time For Action is This Week---NOW

Do realize the amazing progress you can make by means of this vote offer? It's easy to get together a $30 club of new subscriptions. Here is a sample:

	Amount	Regular Votes
One new 12-months' subscription to the Daily and Sunday Times, by carrier.....	$10.80	15,000
One new 12-months' subscription to the Daily and Sunday Times, by carrier	10.80	15,000
One new 6-months' subscription to the Daily and Sunday Times, by carrier	5.40	6,000
One new 6-months' subscription to the Sunday Times only, by carrier	3.00	2,500
TOTAL	$30.00	38,500

Note that regular votes amount to 38,500, to which would be added 100,000 extra votes—a total of 138 500 votes on one club! Any combination of new subscriptions is acceptable, of course, and the amount of money does not have to be exactly $30, this sum being merely a unit in figuring extra votes. Every dollar over or under a club will be given extra votes pro rata.

If possible, get two or more clubs, and your vote standing will increase proportionately. It is not required that subscriptions comprising a club be turned in all at one time. By sending them in as fast as secured, delivery of the paper will start promptly.

Candidates residing outside of Los Angeles have just as much time to devote to this special offer as Los Angeles candidates. Clubs may be mailed as late as Saturday, November 6, if postmarked not later than 9 p. m.

Do your very best this week. Its the most profitable opportunity you will have to share in The Times mammoth $50,000 prize distribution!

Clarinetist's Work Notable in Choice Ensemble

BY MAE PRYCE BROOKS

It seemed quite the natural thing to have Uncle John take up the reins of the studio routine after his absence. Last night the program was dignified and beautiful.

There is no one who has the perfect artistry in handling the Gulbranson that John Martin possesses. Under his skillful handling it becomes an instrument which seems to vibrate as if being played by a virtuoso His solos last evening were chosen to please our vast audience and among them were the glorious waltz, Op. 34, No. 1, by Moszkowski, "June," a barcarolle, Op. 37, No. 6 by Tschaikowski, "Witches' Dance," by MacDowell, and "Love's Spell," by Kendall.

SINGER IMPROVES

The work of Ruth Pitts is a joy to listen to. There is no young artist who comes into our studio whose work shows such marked improvement as that of Miss Pitts. It has gained in quality of tone, in interpretation and there is a sureness or confidence which has been strengthened. Among the lovely songs which she presented last evening were "Internoe," by MacFayden; "One Fleeting Hour," by Dorothy Lee, with a beautiful viola obbligato by Frederick MacMurray "Yesterday and Today," by Stross, and "Cherry Bloom"

A young artist, who is rapidly approaching the professional mark, is Frederick Cooper, whose clarinet sent its message out to you last evening. His work is clean-cut and smooth. Unless a clarinet is in tune it is about as excruciating to listen to as any instrument in the catalogue, but this youth has learned the value of true pitch which means much.

The art of Frederick MacMurray's viola work needs no further words in this column—he comes, he plays, he conquers What more can be said?

ORPHEUS FOUR BACK

The Orpheus Four have just returned from San Diego and gave their friends a program of varied character, beginning, as is their custom, with a half-hour of old, familiar hymns. Their broadcast gives pleasure to their thousands of friends, for their programs always include all classes of music—from the sublime to the ridiculous.

The twilight program of the White King Quartet is reaching a large audience, which loves to listen in at the dinner hour.

The noon program today will present the Piggly Wiggly Girls, James Neill Northe, tenor, and Helen Guest, who sings ballads in a charming manner. The remainder of the day will be silent, as is our custom.

Do not forget to send your telegram to your Representative and Senator to be sure to vote for the White bill with the changes which were suggested in the radio column of The Sunday Times. It means putting radio on a fair, legitimate foundation, and your influence will help. This means you! It is only the listeners-in who can bring this about. They are the court of last appeal.

WOMAN COLLARS HUSKY AUTO THEFT SUSPECTS FOR POLICE

"Where are the arresting officers in this case?" Municipal Judge Turney asked court officials recently, when he called the case of Manuel Quintano, who is six feet in height and of heavy weight. Quintano was charged with violating the Wright Act.

"She is not here, your honor," replied Police Officer Casselberry, faintly.

"She!" exclaimed the court, after a glance at the husky defendant.

"Yes, your honor," Casselberry answered, "this defendant and another were arrested by a lady named Mrs F. Satterwhite, who had them both by the collar at San Pedro and Washington streets when I arrived in answer to her call.

"She told me they were trying to steal her automobile and that she had caught them as she came out of a grocery store. While I couldn't discover any evidence of grand larceny, I did find a bottle of liquor in this defendant's pocket, so I brought him in on the Wright Act."

Quintano was fined $75.

BALLYHOOING THE STORK

I suppose it is all right—quite okeh in fact. This habit of announcing in the newspapers that the stork is about to arrive in the household.

By my word, by gosh, it is rather intimate.

I read these family confidences with a newspaper bride—giving the dates and the expectations.

And then I meet the lady. I never know where to look—or what to say.

What do you say?

You gotta say something—gotten you?

VICTIM OF GAMBLING ROW STABBING DIES

Marcus Wheeler, 39 years of age, of 993 East Fifty-third street, who was stabbed Saturday night during a dice game at 1220 East Seventh street, died in the Receiving Hospital last night. Following his death, Officers Burris and Conway arrested Jack McCann, 22, of 2115 Selby avenue, who was accused of the attack.

AUTHOR OF 'BLONDES' IN DULL MOOD

Refuses to be Witty for Interviewer's Benefit and Confesses Lassitude

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Well, I went to see Anita Loos and her husband, who really is a very nice gentleman, at the Hollywood Hotel directly they arrived yesterday. Anita's husband's name is John Emerson, and he writes half her plays for her, because when they both used to work for D. W. Griffith years ago, they were sensible enough to learn different halves of the business. So Anita gets the good ideas and John shows how to make the most of them, which is quite plain in their play, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," which opens at that new grand Belasco Theater tonight.

But I was disappointed, because she did not say any smart or bright remarks that would make a good interview, and a girl ought to show off her brains when everybody knows she has some. But it is much more educational to talk to a girl like Anita whose head has kept the same size, even when she can sell what's in it for quite a lot of money and can buy her own tiaras if she wants to.

ANITA LOOS

I knew Anita had made quite a lot of money through knowing so much about blondes, so I thought maybe she had bought some grand houses and cars and anteeks, but she said no, she and John have one house, quite a little one, in Westchester county, and anyway the good old Hollywood Hotel is all right and they are going to stay a long time.

They came out so they could see the opening of their play, which already has made a hit in New York, but she says California is fine for hay fever and larenjites, which is how their troubles are divided up. I mean to say there is nothing funny about hay fever and if our climate is good for it, the Chamber of Commerce ought to know about it, and Anita says she never keeps it long or gets it again while she is here. And also that she expects John to drop his larenjites overboard, which he has had for a year now, because didn't California cure Raymond Griffith's troubles of that kind, too?

Now, Anita, I said, I have got to write an interview about you and won't you please hurry up and say some clever things Oh, I never know what people want to read, said Anita, so I will leave it to you. Which I mean to say is a great responsibility to put upon me, when I am writing about a girl with brains.

I asked her how she knew so much about blondes and she said she guessed she knew a lot of them and had been meeting them ever since she made her literary debut writing scenarios and cute subtitles for the movies, before Hollywood had even one theater or lots were sold by the front foot.

They had not been in town half an hour and had not quite unpacked yet, but people were already ringing up to ask John and Anita to their parties. If they accept them all, they will be going to parties practically all the time, but perhaps brainy girls have a lot of self-control.

As I want to be a brainy girl like Anita, I tried to get some advice from her, but she said she didn't know how things happened and why editors had fallen in 'ove with her stuff, and of course, why should Iask advice from a person like Anita that doesn't wear any jewels and wears a plain boy's negligay and didn't marry an editor or anything and hasn't bought a lot of houses that need a lot of servants and says she doesn't know what people want to read, and she hasn't learned to smoke cigarettes yet and didn't have a lot of witty epigrams to let off on me for publication and says she is tired of work and wants to be lazy, which looks like she had no ambition.

So the only advice I got from Anita was about living in California if you have hay fever, which I wouldn't have, anyway, because they are not making the handkerchiefs big enough now, and it isn't a refined, expensive thing to suffer from, anyway.

Police and Fire Forces Pull for Proposition 8-A

Bringing to bear every force at their disposal, firemen and policemen will today launch their final effort to bring before the entire citizenship the benefits of Proposition 8-A on the ballot at tomorrow's election, the measure prepared by agreement of the pension commission, the City Council, the City Attorney's office and a committee representing the rank and file of both departments in pension readjustment.

Fliedres have been given by Police Chief Davis, Fire Chief Scott, the members of both the fire and police commissions and ranking officers in both departments, to personally aid in the eleventh-hour campaign to educate the freeholders to the merits of the measure.

As president of the police commission, I. W. Birnbaum yesterday stated that the measure, if carried, will save the taxpayers thousands of dollars annually, in that the firemen and policemen will contribute 4 per cent of their salaries toward a fund to cover the cost of all service pensions, now paid by the city. He states that the amount raised will be in excess of $330,000, by the provisions of the measure.

Efforts of the Fire and Police Protective League representing the rank and file of both departments, have resulted in the districting of the city, and every fireman and policeman on off duty tomorrow will do his bit toward insuring the passage of the measure at the polls.

BELASCO WILL OPEN TONIGHT

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" Premiere Attraction

Theater Represents Most Modern Construction

List Attending Will Read Like "Blue Book"

With an audience reading like a Blue Book of the social and filmland world, the doors of the new Belasco Theater will be opened tonight for the Los Angeles premiere of "Gentlemen Prefer Blonds," the comedy success by Anita Loos, and presented by Edgar Selwyn.

It is said that all the most amusing episodes in the education of Lorelei are incorporated in the play. And the important characters of the book have been transferred to the play. Other than Lorelei, the golden-haired, one finds Dorothy, her conspiring assistant; Sir Francis Beekman and his mercenary wife, Henry Spoffard, the young reformer, and his guardian, Miss Chapman, not to forget Gus Eisman, the Chicago button king.

The Belasco is said to represent the ultimate in modern theater design, with acoustics especially noteworthy.

The partial list of the film luminaries who will attend the opening are Harry Langdon, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chaplin, Jack Holt, Constance Talmadge, Buster Keaton, Laura La Plante, Rod La Roque, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, Colleen Moore, John McCormick, Pola Negri, Ramon Novarro.

GENTLE RECEIVES ROUSING OVATION

Soprano in Splendid Voice as Guest Soloist With Philharmonic

Alice Gentle received a tremendous ovation yesterday afternoon when she appeared as soprano soloist with the Philharmonic Orchestra in the first of the series of popular concerts to be given this season by the Los Angeles symphonic organization under the direction of Walter Henry Rothwell.

The orchestra gave a splendid performance, Conductor Rothwell's baton weaving a spell of musical magic over performers and listeners. The most pretentious of the orchestral contributions were the Symphony No. 8, in B minor, (generally known as the "Unfinished Symphony," by that immortal melodist, Franz Schubert, and the "Capriccio Italien, Op. 45," an Italian fantasia from the pen of the Russian composer, Tschaikowsky.

Each movement of the symphony in B minor was distinguished by a beautiful melodiousness. In portions of the first movement, the themes were given charming treatment by the cellos, the answering voices of the violins making a lovely effect. The climactic effects and the contrasting forte and piano passages were also good. The blending of instruments in the second movement provided an admirable balance of accompaniment and melody.

In the "Capriccio Italien," a series of Italian themes were presented in Russian style. Portions of this work showed the Liszt influence strongly. The composition has a military swing and in the rendition yesterday the trumpet and the cymbals were efficaciously employed. The dramatic pauses were also notable.

Alice Gentle sang "Pleures, pleures mes yeux," from Massenet's "Le Cid," and the well-known selection, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson and Delilah," by Saint-Saens. She interpreted her selections with rare dramatic insight and the power and sweetness of her voice had a telling effect upon the audience. The romances were exquisite. Miss Gentle was the recipient of many floral offerings and the vociferous applause which followed her renditions recalled her to the stage many times. As an encore number, she sang the popular "Habanera," from Bizet's opera, "Carmen."

The orchestra's rendition of the dainty "Fly Minuet," from Czibulka's operetta, "Der Bajazzo," also proved very popular with the audience and a portion of it was repeated in response to an encore. The interpretation of this work offered some particularly fine opportunities for the strings. Mousoorgsky's "A Night on a Bare Mountain," was of program style and was a fine example of supernatural imagery. The opening number, the stately "Coronation March," from "The Prophet," by Meyerbeer, was played with remarkable precision and contained effective parts for the brass and percussive instruments.

Throughout the entire program a clean-cut performance was evinced. Mr. Rothwell giving to the various scores an admirably artistic reading.

MOON KWAN SPEAKS

Colorful Lecture Features Chinese Drama and Poetry.

A lecture that combined in its subject matter the topics of China today, and Chinese poetry and drama, was given in the Gamut Club Auditorium Friday afternoon by Moon Kwan, Chinese poet-playwright.

In connection with the subject, "China Today," Mr. Kwan dwelt at length on the various religions which flourish in modern China, and also spoke briefly upon the political situation which exists in China today.

Discussing Chinese poetry, he said that Chinese people never write poetry with a view to publication. They write merely to express their thoughts and emotions, and never on a professional basis.

The Chinese poet leaves much to the imagination. He gives the suggestion and the reader completes the thought. A great deal of poetry is written in China, but each poem is written to commemorate some particular occasion. Chinese poetry is reflective in character, and is therefore, as a rule, rather pensive and sad in mood.

Chinese drama, according to Mr. Kwan, is intended for educational rather than entertainment purposes. The plays that are produced in the Chinese theaters have no especially designed plots. The Chinese thespians take a bit from history and attempt to portray it as true to life as possible.

In the Chinese theaters, with the exception of the mountain stage, one will find many props but no setting. Here again, much is left to the imagination. However, if the actor is clever enough, to the Chinese mind no setting is necessary to a successful performance.

Mr. Kwan also spoke of the significance of the different types of make-up which are employed by the Chinese actors. In closing, he sang a Cantonese song, playing the accompaniment on a yip kim or Chinese mandolin.

A special attraction of the afternoon was the appearance of Mr. Liu Yu Ching, who is said to be the world's largest giant. Liu Yu Ching is 8 1-2 feet tall. He was formerly body guard to China's boy emperor and to Yuan-Shi-Kai, President of China. He contributed a mandarin song to the program yesterday. At present he is appearing in Moon Kwan's play, "The Sword of Heaven," which is showing at the Capitol Theater in Long Beach.

Olsen, Johnson Return Slated for Majestic

"Monkey Business" which has been playing an engagement at the Wilkes Theater in San Francisco will return to the Majestic on the 18th inst., for a return showing, according to word from the management of that theater.

During its previous engagement at that theater this revue had a run of twelve weeks. Olsen and Johnson are the stars of the production, with the Angelus Sisters featured in support.

In the meantime Michael Corper announces that "Struttin' Sam From Alabam'," the all-colored revue, is one of the most successful offerings ever housed in the Majestic, rivaling the days when Edward Everett Horton appeared in plays there.

The colored revue will tour the Pacific Coast cities before returning East, it is said.

LOUISE HOMER WILL APPEAR IN CONCERT

Mme. Louise Homer, contralto, will be heard in concert tonight, at the Philharmonic Auditorium. George Leslie Smith, manager of the Auditorium Artist Series, will present the singer, as the opening event, of the series of eleven concerts.

Following her appearances here with the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association, Mme Homer, left for the Northwest and Northern California, where she has been appearing with great success in concert, in the leading cities.

Elizabeth Alexander will accompany Mme. Homer, at the piano tonight.

Pleasing Reflection

Shirley Mason

One of the lovely ladies in "Don Juan's Three Nights" at Loew's State Theater.

BERT APPEARS "IN PERSON"

Two screen stars—Bert Lytell and Marie Prevost—vie for honors at the Hillstreet Theater this week. However, Bert wins, for he has the advantage of appearing on the stage in his one-act play, "The Valiant," while Marie is on the screen in "Almost a Lady," a Metropolitan feature production.

"The Valiant"—a drama of a death cell—gives the well-liked Bert Lytell a chance to show his really fine acting ability, and makes us regret that he isn't seen oftener on the stage. His voice, which is with him a magnetic medium for drama, is lost on the screen.

"Almost a Lady" can't seem to keep its fingers off slapstick comedy, but, aside from that, it is a mighty clever picture. Most of it is due to a splendid cast. Just add Marie Prevost—oh, essence of champagne—to Trixie Friganza, multiply the result by George K. Arthur, and add in Harrison Ford and John Miljan for good measure. The answer is sure to bring a total of fun.

Marie is a little clothes model, handicapped in her efforts to get along in the world by a brother who fears the worst and is bound to prevent it. Trixie as an Irish social aspirant has Marie pose as a famous authoress, and in comes Harrison Ford unconsciously posing as a duke. There are as many mix-ups in the old slapstick comedies, but "Almost a Lady" is much better handled. The subtitles are at times consciously trying to get a laugh—but they get them, so that is all that matters. E. Mason Hopper directs the picture.

Ruth Budd is one of the finest little acrobats all have ever seen. But apparently her prowess in this line doesn't satisfy her, for she insists on doing a little dancing, some singing, and bringing in other tricks not so commendable. Her act is half over before she ascends the acrobatic ladder. However, when she takes the ropes in her hands, she is able to give a hairbreadth entertainment which makes her name one to be remembered.

There is a gay air of nonchalant indifference about Hal Neiman, which, together with his trick clothes, make him very funny. He stands in the center of the stage and talks without effort, and everything he says brings back a barrage of laughter. It is an easy way to earn a living, just standing and smiling and talking, and none of us regret giving it to him.

Dancing isn't forgotten at the Hillstreet this week, for Hayes, Marsh and Hayes are on hand with their clever dance act. Frank Fisher and Eldrie Gilmore are also present—on a park bench. The story of the simple country fellow and his overeager lady has been told many times before. It seems to lack nothing in the telling, for the rest of the audience were greatly amused at yesterday's matinee. Our sense of humor also failed to grasp what was so very funny in Joe Marks and his company. Joe does everything but shoot himself for a laugh. The struggle, in fact, wears us all out. The hard work of trying to be funny shouldn't be so evident.

PIONEER ROMANCE IS FEATURE AT RIALTO

"Three Bad Men" is having its first downtown showing at the Rialto Theater.

This picture deals graphically with a historic episode in American pioneering, a drama also unfolds within the movements of the land rush, bringing to the fore a large cast of screen players. George O'Brien and Olive Borden play the leading roles and the supporting cast includes Lou Tellegen, J. Farrel MacDonald, Tom Santschi and Frank Campeau as the three bad men.

One of the thrilling scenes in this drama is the stampede of over 2000 head of cattle.

RETURNS TO STUDIO

Following a short rest from studio activities, Dorothy Devore has returned to the studios and is considering between two roles offered her. Miss Devore recently finished work in "The Wrong Mr. Wright" for Universal.

FLAPPER' GONE, WHERE IS SHE?

Arthur Rankin of Playhouse Offers Best Seats as Reward

Lost, strayed or stolen—

That's what's happened to one flapper, missing since Wednesday. Where is this flapper?

That's what Arthur McKee Rankin, who makes all the "Cradle Snatchin'" plans in the "Cradle Snatchers" farce, now crowding the Playhouse, wants to know.

Rankin's flapper is among the missing and to tell the real truth he's worrying about her. She may have been kidnaped. Anyway, Rankin offers two seats "way down front" for the farce at the Playhouse for the return of "Flapper," a pet and prize wire-haired fox terrier missing from the Rankin Kennels at Westwood. "Flapper" is almost all white, with the exception of brown spots here and there.

Rankin, by the way, is well known as a dog fancier. He is secretary of the Southern California Whippet Association, owner of many finely bred Whippets and is getting ready to put on a race for these runners to be known as the "Cradle Snatchers'" Derby.

In the meantime if you find "Flapper" bring her to the Playhouse and get the two seats "way down front, center on the aisle."

WHEN IT'S GOOD IT'S GOOD, INDEED

Weaver's Merry-Makers Supreme on Scintillating Bill at Orpheum

BY MARQUIS BUSBY

Somewhat like the little girl with the curl, when vaudeville is good it's very good, and this is one of those good weeks at the Orpheum.

There is a bill which fairly scintillates with headline names, but in the face of some pretty strenuous competition the Weaver Brothers and sister, Elviry, remain the particularly bright spot for a second week.

Yes, sir; them there Arkansas travelers just plum walk away with that entertainment down to the Orpheum opry house.

In case you haven't seen them, the Weavers make music with the saw, the rake and such usually prosaic tools, accompanied by droll, homespun humor. In fact, they have been so popular on the Orpheum circuit, according to the elder brother, they haven't done any farming for "purt nigh on to two years."

Perhaps you have never been aware of the fact that the saw and the rake were musical instruments, but just wait until you hear what the Weavers do to them—and how.

George Whiting and Sadie Burt, that smart pair of songsters, are with us this week. "Jumping Into Something" and the scene from "The Dove" were outstanding. Sadie must have been spending some time recently in the dentist's waiting-room, for some of her jokes were current in the popular magazines of 1916.

Miss Burt, by the way, has acquired one of those tousled hair bobs, and—to speak in the quaint vulgate—it's a "wow."

"Pompadour-Ballet," as presented by Albertina Rasch, is beautifully staged, but spiritless withal. Norree, featured danseuse, is nothing short of sensational in herself, however, and Andy Rice appeared to have ability, too, in the brief time he was on the stage.

Thomas J. Ryan is a product of the "Splendid Seventies"—the days of Tony Pastor in New York—as he expresses it, "When days were good and nights were better." The fact that he is no longer young does not keep Ryan from presenting some pretty fast stepping of the good old-fashioned variety.

"The Faker" is a particularly bright satire on the method a young lady uses to catch a reluctant swain and a marriage ring. Robert Emmett Keane is the Faker, with Clarie Whitney, and P. J. O'Connor, the girl and boy.

Bill Robinson is a dark cloud of joy, doing all the favorite minstrel steps, with some new ones thrown in for good measure. If only he would refrain from incessant wise-cracking with someone in the wings. Decidedly annoying—particularly if you can't hear what he's saying.

Paul Remos and his midgets, attractive little fellows, opened the show, with Lucas and Inez closing with "The Poetry of Motion."

Belle Bennett is Luminary of Screen Feature

Belle Bennett, the character actress, has one of the greatest dramatic roles of her career in "The Lily," David Belasco's stage success, which opens at the Pantages Theater today.

She plays the pathetic part of a woman who forswears love in the interest of others.

Her father, a selfish old rogue, has sent away her fiance and forced her to preside over his mammoth household near Paris.

Miss Bennett, surrounded by an excellent cast, is said to rise to new heights in this Victor Schertsinger production. Many critics assert she has outrivaled her characterization in "Stella Dallas."

The cast includes John Saimpolis, James Marcus, Isn Keith, Reata Hoyt, Gertrude Short, Barry Norton, Tom Ricketts, Richard Tucker and Lydia Yeamans Titus.

Fred Niblo to Take It Easy at Testimonial

Fred Niblo, who has served as master of ceremonies at so many theatrical events of late will enjoy the distinction of watching the tables reversed this evening at the Million Dollar Theater, when members of the cast of "The Temptress" and prominent screen celebrities will be present in person to pay tribute to the directorial genius of Niblo, who directed the picture.

"The Temptress," which continues to maintain records at the Million Dollar in its third week, is the first film Niblo directed since "Ben Hur," and tonight Hollywood will tender him a grand reception.

In addition to Conrad Nagel, as master of ceremonies, and the following members of the cast of "The Temptress," Antonio Moreno, Roy D'Arcy, Lionell Barrymore, Marc MacDermott, Virginia Brown Faire, Armand Kaliz, many other prominent Hollywood favorites have signified their intention to attend.

"RAIN" CAST WORKS HARD FOR OPENING

Charles King is rushing rehearsals of "Rain" at the Orange Grove, and is working the company night and day to have everything in readiness for the opening Friday.

Those who have looked in at rehearsals declare that Charlotte Treadway will be a sensation as Sadie Thompson.

Mechanics and electricians are working night and day also to complete the rain effects that are required in this play.

The cast as selected by Freed includes Dudley Ayres, Marta Golden, Charles Gill, George Pierce, Virginia Thornton, Eleanore Lawson, Albert Van Antwerp, Tom Powers, Martha Mantell, Burdell Jacobs and Harry Shutan.

Groceries—and Utility Service

YOU can't buy most things—groceries, for instance—just any time you feel like it. Most stores are open only during certain hours.

It's different, though, with your gas and electric service. They're ready for you any time you want or need them, day or night, at the turn of a valve or the snap of a switch.

Most things, too, like groceries, have to be bought and kept on hand until used; and when they are all used up the supply has to be renewed.

Compare this with gas and electric service—brought right to your house for you to use as you want them, without the need of going to market or storing until needed.

And you get a month of service before you get the bill for it.

SERVICE—instant, at any hour, to be paid for after it is received: that is what you rightly expect from a public utility.

OIL ENTERPRISE HEADS CHOSEN

California-Eastern Company Organization Effected

Directors High in Councils of Other Corporations

S. C. Lewis Named as Chief of Independent Concern

Senator Frank P. Flint, of Flint & McKay, counsel for the new California-Eastern Oil Company, the new corporation which is expected to occupy an important place among the independent companies of the country, yesterday announced the organization of the new board of directors and the opening of offices in 723 Pacific-Southwest Bank Building. Under the new organization S. C. Lewis becomes president; E. J. Miley, vice-president; and T. P. Conroy, secretary.

Six directors, four of whom represent new interests, have been announced, and additional names of directors will be made public at a later date. The official list of directors announced to date stands as follows:

L. J. King, vice-president and director of all of the field operations of the Associated Oil Company; E. J. Miley, president of the Miley Petroleum Company; C. W. Durbrow, counsel, Southern Pacific Company; S. G. Lewis, president, California Eastern; John E. Barber, vice-president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles and vice-president of the First Securities Company. T. P. Conroy, secretary.

Senator Flint announced the retaining by the California-Eastern of Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, national chartered accountants and auditors, to make a complete audit of the books, financial statements and earnings of the properties which it is proposed will comprise the new California-Eastern organization. These properties are located not only in California, but in Montana, Louisiana and Texas as well.

At the same time, announcement was made that Louis H. Evans, a widely known appraiser of oil properties, was retained to make the appraisals of the value of the wells, contracts, equipment, pipe lines, etc., of each company which it is expected will be merged into California-Eastern.

In addition, announcement is made that the firm of Madison & Davies, expert oil accountants, will collaborate with accountants, auditors and appraisers in the completion of their reports.

FUNERAL OF CLERIC TO BE TOMORROW

Remains of R. McLean, Missionary, Will be Laid to Rest at Grant's Pass

Last rites for Rev. Robert McLean, 80 years of age, Presbyterian clergyman and missionary for a number of years, who died late Saturday night at the Glendale Sanatorium, will be conducted from the Brown undertaking parlors, 935 West Washington street, at 2 p.m. tomorrow. Interment will be made in Grant's Pass, Or. Rev. McLean had been ill for the last two months.

For six years he was a missionary in South America, and while there became editor and publisher of El Republicano at Concepcion, Chile. Another six years he spent as a missionary in Porto Rico. From 1913 until his retirement from active life five years later he was superintendent of Presbyterian work among Mexicans in the Southwest. He maintained headquarters in Los Angeles.

Rev. McLean was born in Vernon Center, N. Y. February 22, 1846. He leaves three sons, Dr. Edward H. McLean of Oregon City, Roy M. McLean of Brookings, Or., and Rev. Robert N. McLean of Los Angeles, and one daughter, Mrs. C. C. Barnes of Du Pont, Wash.

Dogs, Guns and Furs Stolen in Three Robberies

Four dogs with a total valuation of $1000, a detective lieutenant's "arsenal," and $12,000 worth of furs were obtained by burglars who broke into three homes early yesterday, police reports revealed.

The dogs, a Pekinese, two females and one male Boston terriors, were reported stolen from the residence of Mrs. Mabel Thompson at 431 East One Hundred and Eighth street.

Detective Lieutenant Barr, who spends his sleuthing hours looking for burglars, was the victim who lost the "arsenal." He reported that his home at 722 South Alvarado street was entered through the front door by the use of a pass key. Besides the "arsenal," which consisted of two shotguns, one rifle, three revolvers, one automatic target pistol, and a large quantity of ammunition, Barr reported that he lost a valuable kit of fishing tackle.

Miss Ruth Sachnoff reported that a hospital at 986 South Vermont avenue was entered by a burglar, who tore a screen off of a side window and furs valued at $1200 belonging to her were stolen.

TEMPORARY REPAIRS IN CULVERTS REQUESTED

The sum of $14,200 will be required to make temporary repairs in culverts and ditches in the Anandale Boulevard and York Boulevard districts, City Engineer Shaw has reported to the Council, so as to abate the nuisance caused by storm waters in this section, pending the construction of the comprehensive storm drain system planned for this area. The Council has deferred action for one year on the proceedings for the storm drain, at the request of property owners. The Council will determine whether the temporary relief is to be afforded.

Alta Canyada Estate, The Beauty Spot of California

2000 feet above the sea, lifted high above the fog, out of the dust and noises of the city, yet with all the city's conveniences. Bathed in purest ozone, affording a panoramic view of Glendale, Los Angeles, Hollywood, Pasadena and the ocean, yet only a 16-minute drive from Glendale and Pasadena.

Each separate estate so set and arranged as to bring out a perfect view. Trees and shrubs of ten years growth, beautiful drives bordered by splendid pines to be found only in the most exclusive sections.

We are offering one of these estates for sale, size 139x264x304 with building restrictions from $5000 to $10,000, with all improvements in. Words fail to describe this beauty spot. Get on the ground —view the ocean and Catalina Island—note the sixty contented families already there. You will agree with us that this is a homesite supreme.

Call in the office, or give us a ring and ask for Mr. Rogers.

L. H. WILSON,
1536 S. San Fernando Rd., Glendale
CApitol 1714. Glendale 1551.

To the Prospective HOME BUYER

Select a location easy of access to the city, by auto or trolley, to not drive toward the sun in the morning or evening. Select your home on a gentle slope, facing south and at an elevation of about 1000 feet above sea level. Find a new, 2-story, 8-room, modern home, carefully constructed, in a new and growing section, surrounded by a good neighborhood. Such a home so located will give you a splendid view, and is a safe investment, and will be a salable property at an advanced value after a few yrs. of occupancy. Such a home built with all modern conveniences, at a great sacrifice, for $20,000. If you are interested, drive to South Los Robles avenue, Pasadena, just north of Mission street, and call for Mr. Schardi, telephone ELliot 3181.

PARTNER wanted, ornamental iron business, first-class mechanic can handle. $4500 cash. Must be good American and able to invest $3000 for ½ interest; terms arranged for right man. Ask for Mr. Wilson. BE. 1833.

PARTNER—My dad's retiring. I want some young partner to go horse, fully stocked, dairy, stock, hogs. Fishing & hunting. Private lake. Laugh a skiff. Patsy, last week, and made their first trip yesterday afternoon.

According to Black, they were inside the breakwater when, just as dusk was falling, the keel of the Patsy became loosened, a squall struck at the same time and the boat was capsized.

At the time the boat was in the Watchorn Basin of the outer harbor about 100 yards from shore. The young men started swimming, when Cutler called to his chum that he was suffering from a cramp. Black swam to his side and held him up until the spasm passed. They started again, but soon afterward Black missed his friend. Chilled and burdened by his soaked garments, he was barely able to continue succeeding fully his own desperate swim to safety.

Black's home is at 314 North Ardmore street.

STRONGARM SALESMAN CAUTIONED

Forcing Hats on Milady Not Being Done, Judge States

Perhaps a woman really doesn't know how she would like a hat until she sees it in a mirror but it isn't the salesman's place to force the issue, in the opinion of Municipal udge Pope. Besides it's not good salesmanship to use brute force in displaying the latest Parisian headwear for milady.

It was all brought out before Judge Pope when William C. Erry, 829 West Forty-eighth street, was haled before the court on a charge of committing a nuisance at the instance of Mrs. Dessie Caddell and Mrs. J F. Howry, wives of police officers attached to Judge Georgia Bullock's court.

Evidence showed that the two women were visiting at a bungalow court at 3024 3-4 South Harvard Boulevard when the defendant made a dramatic and unannounced entrance. Using high-pressure methods he told them he was a hat salesman and to prove it he pulled Mrs. Howry's hat from her head and substituted one of his own. When she protested and attempted to remove the hat, the women said, Erry grasped her arm in an attempt to take her before a mirror.

"Well, judge, a woman really doesn't know how much she likes a hat until she sees it on her," Erry told the court, in explanation of his tactics.

"But she knows when she doesn't want it, anyway," Judge Pope remarked.

Erry was fined $50 with an alternative of ten days in jail, but the sentence was suspended with the provision that he confine his activities to the normal lines of salesmanship.

CONGREGATION HEARS WENIG

School debating coach, who helped train Wenig. Prof. Hensey lauded the orator, predicting that he will be Secretary of State some day. Wenig was introduced by his instructor.

Wenig returned to Los Angeles Saturday from the European tour which culminated in the international contest. At 11 a.m., today he will be given a reception at a special assembly at Memorial Auditorium at Hollywood High School.

At the opening of the evening services, Dr. Brieglob, saying he wished to ascertain if advertising pays, asked those in the audience who had come to the church as a result of his advertisement in The Times to raise their hands. A large number of hands were raised, with a dwindling response when he asked the same question regarding an advertisement inserted in two other newspapers.

CITY BENEFITS BY DRAIN QUIZ

Jefferson Job "Extras" Bill Only $70,000

Contrast Made With Gadd's $298,981 Claim

Economy Credited to New Inspection Plan

In startling contrast to the $298,981 bill of "extras" presented by Contractor Peter R. Gadd on the $267,000 West Adams storm drain, the "extras" on the $2,324,000 West Jefferson street storm drain will be $60,000 to $70,000.

The figures have become known at the City Hall as a result of the announcement by City Engineer Shaw and Storm Drain Engineer Armstrong that the West Jefferson street storm drain will be completed and in use before December 1.

The almost trivial expense for "extras" on the West Jefferson street storm drain in comparison with the size of the job and in comparison with the West Adams "extras" was a source of great satisfaction to President McGuire of the Board of Public Works who refused to approve the West Adams storm drain bill of extras. His action precipitated the investigation into the methods of the Public Works Inspector's department, and a reorganization of the departments under the Board of Public Works as the result of public pressure resulting from the West Adams storm drain revelations.

It was City Engineer Shaw who testified in the West Adams storm drain investigation that he had not been called upon to pass on the necessity for this additional work billed as "extras" and that in his opinion $250,000 of the $298,981 bill of extras was unnecessary.

NOW IN COURTS

The West Adams storm drain case is now before the California Supreme Court on the application of the contractor for his entire bill for the West Adams improvement, including his bill of extras, and the granting of this application has been resisted by the city of Los Angeles. City Attorney Stephens has filed a comprehensive brief with the court urging that the court uphold the right of the Council to investigate and revise the assessments for the West Adams work.

The small bill of extras on the West Jefferson street storm drain, however, demonstrated that hundreds of thousands of dollars will be saved the property owners in other storm drain districts as a result of the West Adams investigation. With the placing of construction of public improvements under the authority of the City Engineer, nearly $50,000 worth of additional work placed in the Jefferson-street storm drain without the approval of the City Engineer was declared illegal by the board, which notified the contractor that he would be paid only for additional work authorized by the City Engineer.

ORDER OBEYED

Since this ruling by the Board of Public Works, City Engineer Shaw said that Contractor Peter R. Gadd, who is building the West Jefferson street storm drain, has obeyed to the letter the orders of the City Engineer and installed only additional work ordered by the City Engineer, who has kept this additional work to an absolute minimum. The city specifications provide for these "extras" or additional work which could not have been known when the plans were made and until the actual excavations were made.

The extras on the West Jefferson street job consist almost entirely of rock back fill where solid conditions require this rock and where a refill of dirt would not provide sufficient bolding power for the storm drain. In very few cases have soil conditions required the piling foundation which Contractor Gadd laid in wholesale quantities on the West Adams storm drain and most of which was declared unnecessary by the City Engineer.

In justice to Contractor Gadd and his work on the West Jefferson street job, City Engineer Shaw said the contractor had made great speed and had carried out the instructions of the City Engineer since the board had placed construction work under the authority of the City Engineer.

UNIT PRICES

Another constructive reform which has been accomplished by the West Adams case, the City Engineer pointed out, was the ruling by the board, under public pressure, establishing unit prices for materials used in the extras construction work. All bidders for storm drains must bid these prices or less for additional work.

The result has been to date in the bidding for the Slauson avenue storm drain and for the third section of the Arroyo de la Sacatela storm drain to show that Contractor Gadd's unit prices for the West Adams storm drain materials—piling, excavation, concrete, etc.—were 200 per cent to 300 per cent higher than the prices established as fair by the City Engineer and accepted by the bidders on these two storm drain projects, including Contractor Gadd, who bid on both. In some cases the unit bids for
